OUR VIEW

Wielding the gavel

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr apologized publicly this week for essentially losing control of the previous week's selectmen's meeting, which ran way too late and during which, a heated debate ensued between the chairman of the Water Commission and the Town Manager.

While heated debate can provide for great theater – proper decorum and respect must be paramount.

Cohasset is going through a transition with financial challenges that Town Manager Mike Coughlin is trying to address.

Whenever problem solving and change take center stage, there are bound to be missteps and bruised egos along the way. This is especially true in Cohasset where we are fortunate to have a very involved, caring and intelligent citizenry. But as we all know, sometimes these same caring folks also possess a large degree of arrogance and big egos.

We applaud Mr. Carr for apologizing this week for not putting the kibosh on what was unfolding when everyone was too tired to function clearly. It takes a lot to make a public apology.

Going forward, our new Town Manager deserves the support of appointed and elected officials. To put it bluntly, he inherited the current problems and needs the time and space to right the ship. That does not mean he has carte blanche – but he is a guy that takes charge and tries makes things happen. We think that is far preferable to the alternative. Mike Coughlin is a strong leader – if he weren't he would be in danger of being run over and squashed by those who think they know best.

We also think that town officials need to talk positively about Cohasset and where it is going. There is far too much backbiting going on behind the scenes. It is immature. This is not middle school – it is time to grow up! Cohasset is a great town – let's not lose our sense of community.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Italy 2011 – it was a great trip!

Dear friends:

Please allow me to take this opportunity to express my deep appreciation to you for your thoughtfulness in June 2005.

At a very emotional graduation for me, you, through Linda Bolster, presented me with a gift of a trip to Italy. At the time I could not comprehend such a wonderful outpouring of support.

Circumstances did not allow me to enjoy that gift until October of this year. As many of you know, after I left Cohasset Middle/High School I was hired as a Housemaster at Milford High School. I retired from education in 2007.

A physical problem had kept me from this trip for some time, believe me, the wait was well worth the result.

We spent 10 fabulous days in Tuscany. Everything from our villa in San Casciano to our visits to Siena, San Gimigiano, Volterra, Arezzo, Forte dei marmi,(on the Italian Riviera), Lucca, and three days in Florence could not have been more perfect. The scenery, history, architecture, especially in the churches, and of course the food was beyond reproach.

Thank you does not due justice to your generosity and for that Pam and I are eternally grateful. A special thank you to Linda Bolster and Connie Afshar for their efforts in making this trip so memorable.

In closing, I will always remember with fondness my time at Cohasset Middle/High School. I hope in some small way I made a difference in your sons and daughters lives, they certainly made a major difference in mine.

Technology and information overload

STEVE BOBO

But, in the information age, there is much to learn in virtually every subject that is no longer part of the conventional material assimilated in general discourse

What is true and what false?: Information we need as individuals dictates the ability to decide for ourselves; while building up muscle and sinew to tackle specific goals, many of which are decisions made for us by others and become ours as we mature. If misdirected, or such information turns out to be negative, we have a problem. If parents were slipshod about diet, an offspring may have to live with overweight. The food pyramid was once a useful concept for spreading the word about diet and nutrition. Now seldom seen or discussed. But, in the information age, there is much to learn in virtually every subject that is no longer part of the conventional material assimilated in general discourse. It is useful to have other aids, other types of reminders, some electronic, to organize necessities and keep us healthy; topics, subjects and medications, now seldom discussed or observed in the media, or in normal conversation.

Diverse information: A diversity of "apps" appears as a part of advertising for cell phones as well as curricula for classes at schools and online courses. All are a part of the multitasking necessary just to stay healthy, let alone make career or other life decisions.

As never before we see less emphasis on diet or healthy practices. At some time, an individual must decide about the information he wants to assimilate which guides his direction for the rest of his life. Not to say the direction won't change many times, it does. But, it's becoming obvious that the amount of information out there is changing us whether we like it or not.

Meetings that you might regularly attend: Board meetings, church, school or business meetings; think back even four years about the character of the individuals that were there with you at such meetings. Are their thoughts and emphasis in keeping with the objectives of the individuals attending? Such considerations are the fodder that gives direction to your own lifestyle.

Duration and longevity of meetings and other functions we attend, not to mention individual contact with the people themselves, can change, sometimes substantially. Occasionally one sees pictures of individuals during business meetings and at functions and we say "how he's changed." Even accepted cues for recognition have changed; for example, blonde used to mean Nordic and grey or white used to mean old. Dark skinned used to mean things that are no longer appropriate. Many cues have changed, and moreover the emphasis and meaning of the cues has altered.

Brilliance of images themselves have, through technology, improved. A particularly beautiful sunrise one sees fleetingly, early in the morning, was in the past captured by extremely talented painters with unusual abilities requiring substantial capacity for recall using brushes, oil pigment, paint in tubes and canvas stretched over a frame. Now, with a camera or a cell phone, one can convey an equivalent image and even transmit it to dozens or thousands of people. Such things can massively change perceptions in unintended ways. And since, with a little touchup using Photoshop, which recently changed from noun to adjective, one can make a natural scene more brilliant than nature. And "friend"– think of the change that word has undergone because of its use in Facebook! By the same token, such images, perhaps because of size, seem somehow less important.

Negative effects: Some activities, artificially magnified, can be harmful for the uninformed who may accept them as credible or possible in real life. One often sees situations on TV that beg credibility. Generally dealing with the physical characteristics in a sitcom or a fabricated game of sports, or frequently, some criminal activity. Such misrepresentation provides little stimulus, particularly in the presence of so much favorable and effective portrayal of real situations.

Perhaps this is all a symptom of too much emphasis on observation of the recent changes in the condition and character of everything. Perhaps we are all inured to the effects of so much change; we seem to be generally coping without much harm.

MAKING TRACKS

Sunlight could put us on a power trip

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As a point of interest, Scituate expects to save about $250,000 per year with almost no expenses other than legal costs writing the contract with the developer.

Cohasset's potential solar site?

State Clean Energy Announcement. COURTESY PHOTOS

Is there solar energy in our future? This past week the Operations Department had an interesting opportunity to sit in on a meeting between two members of the Alternate Energy Committee (AEC) and the Scituate DPW Director, Albert Bangert. So, why were they meeting with our southern neighbor?

First, let's go back in time and talk about our Alternate Energy Committee itself. Cohasset's Alternate Energy Committee was authorized at Cohasset's Special Town Meeting on November 13, 2006. As their name implies they were formed "to promote clean energy options for the Town" and to "investigate alternate energy options within the community..." Well, that's exactly what they have been doing. In fact, one of their ideas is placing a solar power generation facility on top of Cohasset's closed landfill. And, that idea is not as far fetched as it may sound. That is exactly what the town of Scituate is in the process of doing.

Now let's go back to the meeting with Scituate's DPW Director. The Town of Scituate has a capped landfill off of the Driftway. It is a prime 17-acre site of unused land perfect for use as a solar power generation facility. Scituate's Alternate Energy Committee with the support of the DPW and the Town Administrator wrote a Request for Proposal (RFP) looking for an outside firm to finance, develop and operate a solar generation facility on that land. Scituate was pleasantly surprised at the great response that their RFP generated. At this point, the Scituate team's main job was to carefully evaluate the various proposals and pick the developer with the best prospect for a successful project.

What benefits will accrue to Scituate by this project? First of all, their project will have "one stop shopping." That is, all the responsibility falls on one vendor for development, construction and operation. This makes a project of this complexity easier and quicker for the Town to complete so it can start reaping the benefits. And that vendor assumes the responsibility for the management of the capped landfill, as well.

Another benefit, in Scituate's case, is that they have a known cost for power generated by the solar array for a prolonged period of time. This is really helpful when it comes to budgeting and planning for their energy costs in future years. And, the power cost is significantly lower that present power costs. In addition, Scituate worked hard to make certain that the Town is protected from liabilities that might occur should the project go awry. This is vitally important, as you might imagine. As a point of interest, Scituate expects to save about $250,000 per year with almost no expenses other than legal costs writing the contract with the developer.

This past Wednesday, we had a chance to attend a major announcement that was held at the site of the future Scituate solar project. This was a joint announcement by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection and Department of Energy Resources called Clean Energy Results. This program is focused at developing sources of clean energy that complement environmental protection. The Scituate solar project that is to be constructed on a capped landfill is a project that highlights the dual goals of this Commonwealth program. Their collective efforts were mainly two years in the making; but the State is committed to reduce the cycle times for these projects in the future.

Cohasset is very fortunate that we have a neighboring town that has already begun traveling down the solar generation project path. We can learn lots from their experience, which fortunately, they are willing to share with us. So, how far along is a Cohasset solar project? We are at the very beginning of the project process. We will need to develop an RFP that prospective developers will respond to. Then we will have to select a specific developer who we feel can best take our project to fruition. In addition, we will need to obtain permission from Town Meeting to lease the land to the developer so he can use the property for the solar development. So, there are a lot of steps that need to be completed before the first kilowatt can be generated. As Kermit the frog would say, "It's not easy being green." But as you can see, it does have its benefits.

COMMENTARY

Cohasset Village is going to the dogs

TRISHA CORCORAN

I believe that if you think it's OK to walk through the village without your dog on a leash, it is because you think you are above the law.

What is it about so many dog owners in Cohasset Village that allow them to think that they and their pets are above the rules that apply to others? Now I may be naïve but I am under the impression that there is a leash law in Cohasset and that it applies equally to all dog owners. Why, if it's against the law, is it OK for these people to walk around our busy village with their dogs, triumphantly, off their lead? Maybe it would be OK, or at least more understandable, if the owner actually had control of their dog, but for the majority of the time that is not always the case.

Now I have been living in the village for a while now, and I know and have met many very responsible dog owners in town. I walk my dog with them and it is a great opportunity to make new friends and meet new people. Then there are the others. They walk about with one, maybe two dogs without a care or an interest in anything but their own well-being, secure in the fact that no one would presume to correct them in the proper points of doggy etiquette while their overfed thoroughbreds run amok.

"Relax," an arrogant owner quipped at me while running after her dog. While her dog was charging and barking at mine she sniped, "He won't bite, he just likes to bark and jump." Should I really be relaxed when this dog named after a cookie is displaying aggressive behavior toward my pet that will automatically be on defense mode since she is the leashed one and is at a distinct disadvantage? What about the 3-year-old, a few yards down the street, who just scrambled up into her mother's arms as this 70-pound dog ran by, should she just relax too?

Having a pet is a responsibility, and owners should be cognizant of others. Some people are afraid of dogs. Some people have dogs that are afraid of other dogs. Some people have dogs that would gladly take a bite out of a charging, barking, jumping, unleashed dog. Maybe next time I encounter this owner who wants me to "relax" I will do just that; drop my leash, relax, and see what happens when my 96-pounder takes a bite out of the cookie. Would that be OK?

I have this theory. I believe that if you think it's OK to walk through the village without your dog on a leash, it is because you think you are above the law. Take a look and see if I am talking about you:

- Does your dog walk so far ahead of you that you cannot reach his lead or restrain him?
- While you are taking a stroll, does your dog meander aloof into other peoples' yards?
- Does your dog forget his name when called?
- Do you ride through the village on a bike, with your dog running loose behind you?

Come on, do you recognize yourself? Is it you that I am talking about? Why do you think it is OK for a standard size poodle, to run after others barking and jumping, while you are 10 feet behind, calling his name to no avail? Perhaps it's you, owner of the happy, energetic Great Dane. Why do you think it's OK to go on riding your bike through the crowded village, yelling back at your dog, 10 feet away, to leave my dog alone? Potentially it's you, owner of the two black Labs. Why do you think it's OK to continue chatting with a friend while one of your dogs' pees in the yard next door and the other is trotting down the street toward me? Perhaps you should pay attention to your two unleashed dogs, nearly a city block away? Oh, and potentially it could be you, lady with your dog leashed to your bike. At least you have a leash, but your dog is chained to your bike for goodness sake! I hate to think of what would happen if your dog met any of these meandering ones, you would be pulled head over heels in a flash, and you too aren't in control.

To some readers this may seem trivial, but I know I strike a nerve with many. I implore other dog walkers in Cohasset village, who are considerate and actually use their leashes, to push back next time you see any of these "regulars." (BTW, there are more, but hey, this is an op-ed.) Speak up. Next time you see a "regular" tell them, "You're no better – put your dog on a leash."

FOR THE RECORD

Many reasons to give thanks

GREGORY MATHIS

It's easy to take what we have for granted, especially if you grew up a stone's throw away from Plymouth Rock.

People from all across the country will be celebrating Thanksgiving Thursday, Nov. 24, but nowhere in the world does Thanksgiving have more meaning than it does right here in eastern Massachusetts.

From the Pilgrims landing on Plymouth Rock in 1620, to the first Thanksgiving a few years later, to the first Thanksgiving Day high school football game in 1889, our region is steeped in history and tradition.

To get a taste of that history and tradition, head down to the Plymouth waterfront and downtown area this weekend for America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration. What began as a small parade and a big idea 15 years ago has grown into a major pre-Thanksgiving event featuring a large parade with participants and spectators from around the country, patriotic concerts, a New England food festival and much more.

For the most part, Thanksgiving is a holiday that has retained its purpose over the years. While commercialization has put a stranglehold on many holidays, the essence of Thanksgiving has remained true. If you're lucky, it's a day to reunite with family and friends and enjoy a big turkey dinner. And if you are surrounded by family and friends and have food to share on this day, that is certainly something to be thankful for.

And of course, there's football.

While the National Football League has wedged its way into our living rooms on Thanksgiving Day with three pro matchups, many spend the morning at a high school football field cheering for their local team.

High school football may not be as big here as it is in Texas, parts of the Southeast and California, but it certainly has a longevity that is unmatched. Thanksgiving Day football dates back to 1889 in Massachusetts, and some of the oldest rivalries in the country can be found in eastern Massachusetts.

Whether your local high school team has been playing its opponent for 100 years or this is the first contest, there's something special about Thanksgiving Day football. The outcome may be important in deciding who's going on to a playoff game or Super Bowl berth, but the game is almost secondary for many of the spectators. People return home from all around the state and country, and chances are you'll see a lot of familiar faces in the crowd from your high school days 10, 20, 30 years ago.

It's easy to take what we have for granted, especially if you grew up a stone's throw away from Plymouth Rock.

One way to celebrate the holiday is to take in all the America's Hometown Thanksgiving Celebration has to offer this weekend, cheer for the local high school football players (especially the seniors playing in their final Thanksgiving Day game) and eat a lot of turkey with all the fixins', surrounded by family and friends.

And remember to give thanks for those family, friends and this historic place we call home.

VETERANS DAY

Good crowd on blustery day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The forecast called for rain on that crisp, windy November morning, but by the time 11 o'clock rolled around on 11/11/11, the sun was shining and the sky was a brilliant blue over the Cohasset Harbor.

A healthy crowd gathered around the flags at Veteran's Memorial Park to pay tribute to America's servicemen and women.

Steve Wigmore, commander of the local American Legion Post 118, said it had been raining when he first got up that morning, and he was grateful the sun came out in time for the ceremony.

His son Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, began the ceremony with a brief speech. Tom thanked Ralph Perrconcello, World War II veteran and Commander of Cohasset's VFW, and Joe McElroy, Vietnam vet and Director of Veterans Services, for their service to the country and Cohasset. Tom's wife Deirdre, President of the women's Auxiliary, then read the poem "Old Glory."

Tom thanked Deer Hill School Principal Jennifer deChiara for being "the only school administrator" who ever contacted him about holding a Veterans Day ceremony for students. The school paid tribute to veterans on Wednesday, Nov. 9, and children wrote essays, poems and songs expressing their patriotism and gratitude.

Usually two essay winners are chosen to read their work aloud during the Veterans' Day service. This year three winners were chosen; the third student won for her poem. Tom said he would be delivering prizes to the three children at school next week on behalf of the Legion.

The three essay winners were Mollie Gilbert, Thomas Broderick and Caroline Hess.

"Remember, [veterans] have a place in all American's hearts," Molly read from her essay.

"One day is not enough to say we are proud of these men and women," Thomas shared.

Caroline read from her poem, "As I walk, play and laugh, I know I am free because of the fighters."

Town Manager Michael Coughlin, a veteran of the Army JAG Corps, was the event's keynote speaker. Coughlin said that he is "probably the newest member of Post 118" and donned the Legion's hat.

"11/11/11 is a day that happens only every hundred years," Coughlin said, "but we're here every year... God bless this great country, great Commonwealth, and great town of Cohasset."

The crowd joined together in singing "America the Beautiful," led by Lilly Sestito, prior to a four-gun salute. The ceremony closed with Sestito leading the audience in the "Star Spangled Banner," followed by a benediction.

A collation was held at the George H. Mealy Post 118 building across the street afterward.

"Don't forget to thank a veteran," Deirdre said.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

'A special bond'

Courtesy of Michael Coughlin, Town Manager

I appear before you not as you Town Manager, although I am very proud of that title, but to honor a title that is even deeper in my heart— that of fellow veteran and perhaps the newest member of American Legion Post 118.

November 11, 2011 – Veterans Day – Why are we here? Perhaps it is fitting that in 11 days we will mark the passing of a great son of Massachusetts and a great president, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. A hundred days before he met his fate in Dallas, the President was asked rhetorically what was his most important accomplishment. He responded without blinking, "I served in the United States Navy."

I never realized the significance of that statement until I wore the uniform myself.

As a young man having chosen politics as my profession, I was skeptical. After all, he was President, prior to that a Senator and Congressman as well as a Pulitzer Prize winning author— how could that be?

I never realized the significance of that statement until I wore the uniform myself. Namely, whatever we achieve in life will never equal the significance of having had the opportunity to serve our country— it's a special bond, it's a special education, and a special commitment that we never give up as we continue to serve our country, our Commonwealth and our community in different ways.

November 11, 2011 – 11/11/11 – it's a day that only happens every one hundred years. We are here every year to honor what is dearest in our hearts. As President Kennedy reasoned, "A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces, but also by the men it honors and the men it remembers."

God Bless this great country, this great Commonwealth and this great community of Cohasset.

American Legion Thanksgiving Day breakfast

The Cohasset American Legion on Summer Street post will host a Thanksgiving Day breakfast next Thursday, Nov. 24 from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. at the George H. Mealy Post 118, 98 Summer St. For $7, attendees can enjoy an all-you-can-eat buffet featuring scrambled eggs, bacon, home fries, baked beans and more. After eating their fill, folks can form groups and head to Hull High School to root for the Cohasset Skippers in their annual Thanksgiving Day football game against the Hull Pirates.

The local Legion will also raffle off a "cash and cheer" basket containing lottery tickets and alcoholic beverages.

Tickets can be purchased at the Legion up until the event for $1 each or six for $5.

VETERANS DAY

Fifth-graders share their reflections

For the brave

By Caroline Hess

My heart is filled with emotion for the veterans who risked their lives for our peace and freedom for us

for the red, the white, and the blue.

these brave, admired veterans who saved so many lives.

as I walk, play, and laugh
I know that I am free because of the fighters, the difference makers,
our liberty is in their hands

while we live under a blue sky

theirs is gray, or filled with bullets

the brave veterans who risk everything
for us

I come with my arms
my mind and my heart wide open.

Veterans Day

By Thomas Broderick

You may see these people that we are honoring today as neighbors, friends, or even family, but don't forget, they are heroes, and they are veterans.

Army, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, and Marines come together as one ultimate unstoppable force. But power comes at a price. A price meaning the risk of death, which could easily be accomplished by our enemies considering the weapons and technology that humans possess. Today we honor soldiers that have done their duties. But there is a problem. One day is not enough, not nearly enough, to say how proud we are of these men and women that devoted themselves to their country with such passion and ran out onto the battlefield and protected us through the worst of times.

Throughout our history, veterans have fought on many terrains, from the salty water of our world's oceans, to grassy plains, tropical forests, and cities, to the high altitude skies that wrap our planet.

As new wars arise, new technology and weapons are created and wars are changed forever, which makes a higher risk with every coming battle.

Deaths are amazingly tragic events, but injuries play a major role in wars. From minor wound to something as severe as a disabling injury making you unable to walk, injuries big and small are huge parts of a war, and many veterans come back with injuries.

These men and women that we see before us are the ones that knew what was right at the time. But, of course, they are not the only ones, because there are millions of others that made the leap for our country. Veterans are anyone who has joined the military and has retired from service. From doctors to technicians, to engineers anybody who has joined the United States Military and lived to tell the tale is a Veteran.

What they've done was started with one decision, one conscious decision that they would join, knowing the danger and risks.

Again, you could see these people as neighbors, friends or even family, but don't forget, they are Veterans and they are heroes.

American's hearts

By Mollie Gilbert

Let's just shorten their job description by saying it's full of chances. They made a courageous, brave, noble decision that believe it or not was made for us. They took a big step forward in life, uneasy, difficult and every move has a consequence that can't be predicted. Their plan is always the same, "first others then me," showing they are not selfish. They could be taking a step forward and be coming out fine or a step back. But which one they don't know but they choose to help us. This shows that they love us and our country. We hear lots of stories you think, wow. They always did something brave but that does not mean they were always feeling brave. Still they stay in character and protect us. Whether they are Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Marines or Air Force they do the same thing and have the same mission. Protect us. They put us before themselves. Think how scary that is, think what it means... once everyone else is safe then I can save myself.

Now what does a veteran have? A family they left, a promise to keep, huge heart, love for us and our country, brave moves, thoughtful choices, people who count on them, a helping hand, caring ideas, and last but not least, a space in all our hearts.

We have Veterans Day to show you that it's true. So please never forget that today we are all thanking you because if you weren't here our country would not be the way it is today. We are lucky to have people like you. So you made a big change in our country because of the kind of people you are. Remember you have a place in all of American's hearts.

Tournament run a school best

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

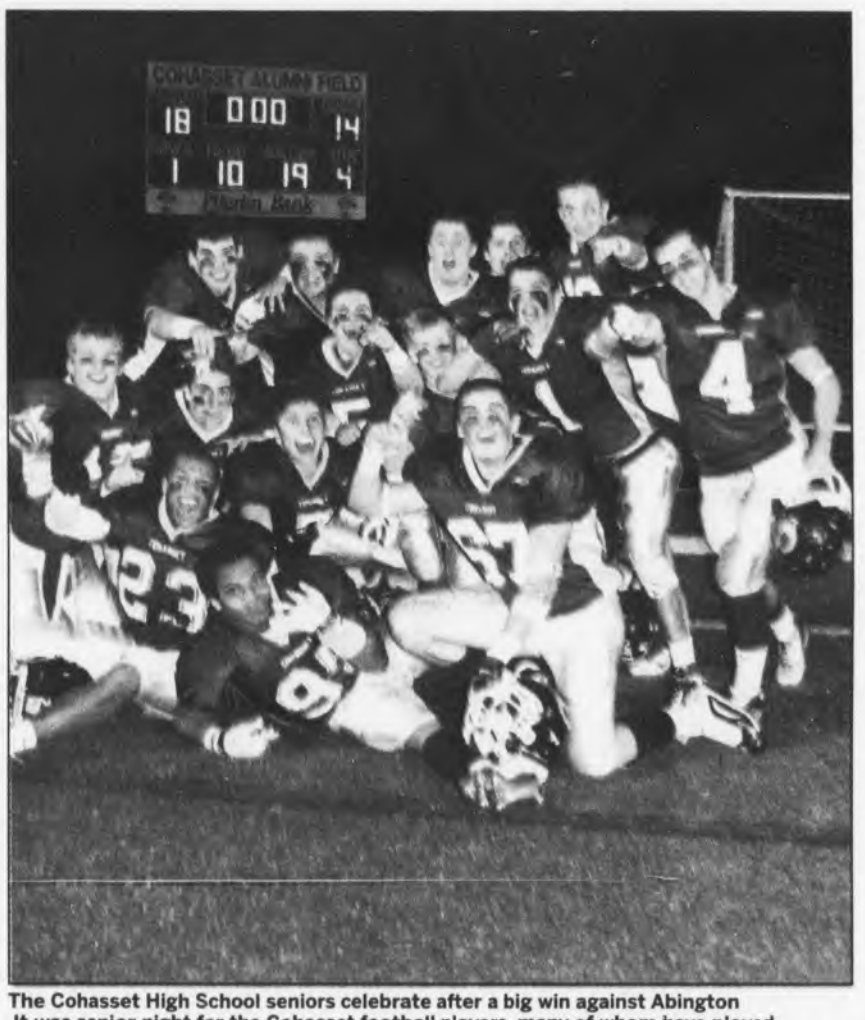
The season may have ended with a loss, but when the loss is against a perennial superpower in the MIAA Div. 2 South Sectional Championship game, there was plenty of reason for the Cohasset field hockey team to smile.

For one thing, the tournament run was the deepest in school history, and it came just one season after an undefeated regular season ended with a first-round tournament loss.

"This has been the best season in school history," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "That's what I've been told. Honestly, it's not something I keep track of, but it really was an amazing season."

It wasn't just the winning that made for the success though.

It was the team itself that worked magic through selflessness and hard work.



"When we started off, we had no plan for defense," Giuliano said. "By the tournament, the defense was keeping us in games. They kept us in when we beat Bishop Stang in two overtimes and against Harwich."

The Bishop Stang game may have been one of the toughest draws for Cohasset, on the road against an undefeated (17-0-2 entering the game) team. Cohasset notched a 1-0 win in that game.

Skippers tally big victory

Cohasset heads into Turkey Day on winning note

Gatehouse News Service

The Cohasset football team made a few mistakes, but in the end were able to hang on to beat Abington 18-14 on Senior Night.

Cohasset lost two fumbles late in the fourth quarter Friday night, but Cohasset hung on.

"They had an awful lot of energy," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw told the Patriot Ledger. "We made mistakes, but finally they didn't let it affect them."

Senior middle linebacker Sean McKenna had what Afanasiw called a "monster game" with double-digit tackles. "He was really, really hitting all game long," the coach raved.

Junior defensive end Conor Dooley had a big first-half sack and batted away a fourth-down pass on Abington's final play.

Kyle Livingstone opened the scoring for Cohasset (5-4, 4-2) with a 5-yard run. Shane Haggerty added the extra point and a 15-yard field goal before the half.

Haggerty's 15-yard field goal made it 10-6 at halftime.

Quarterback Jamie Faber ran 35 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter.

The win sends Cohasset into Thanksgiving Day with a win and no real pressure beyond winning the annual showdown with Hull.

Last year at home, Cohasset beat Hull 36-12 behind a 192-yard effort by Thomas Flibotte.

This season, the running game has been left to Livingstone, and he's proven capable of the task.

Two years ago, Cohasset took an unbeaten record to Hull and lost 15-7.

The series is even at 12-12-1.

The Skippers have proven to be resilient this season and have played well against strong competition with wins over Abington and Rockland.

Kickoff is at 10 a.m. on Thursday.

SOUTH SHORE CROSS-COUNTRY POLL

WHHS girls, PHS boys No. 1

Girls Top 5

1. Whitman-Hanson (8-0; 1st)
2. Weymouth (11-0; 2nd)
3. Hingham (7-1, 4th)
4. Notre Dame Academy (5-0; 5th)
5. Norwell (8-0, NR)

Boys Top 5

1. Pembroke (8-0; 1st)
2. Whitman-Hanson (7-1; 2nd)
3. Marshfield (4-1; 4th)
4. Weymouth (8-3; 3rd)
5. Hingham (6-2; 5th)

5 To Watch

Lauren Humphreys, Norwell: If I have to pick a leader of this pack, it's the sophomore for now, but I withhold the right to change my mind. Humphreys led the way for the Clippers (21:00, 16th) in DVI, but the pack of Vanessa Lyle, Siobhan Murphy, Margaret Hayes, and Kristen Gaudreau was all in under 22:00, giving the team a tight enough spread to take the runner-up trophy, and earn another trip to All States. While the 14 point difference from winner Dover-Sherborn was narrow, the 4 point spread over Ursuline indicates that this trophy will be savored by the Chuck Martin and the girls.

Kelsey Tierney and Caroline Mulrey, Whitman-Hanson: It's hard to win your first divisional meet. It's much harder when your top runners goes down with less than 100 meters to go, barely able to finish at all. But when this pair of freshmen saw that Abby Baker, Jenny Dimascio-Donohue, and Gianna Cacciatorre needed both of their services, rather than the usually one, they each stepped up to run 20:17 and 20:21, each placing in the top 14, and making the Panthers the prohibitive favorites for an All State title next week, their first in program history.

Anthony Detommasso, Weymouth: The Wildcats knew their first trip to All States since 1995 was going to be a close call. With great races from Nolan Parsley, Kurt Joyce, Matt Dickson, and Matt Murphy under their belts, and 600 meters to go to the finish, 5th man Detomasso needed to do something special. A shot putter's mentality and a bulldog's disposition at his side, the Tomato, as he is known, barreled down the stretch, passing at least a dozen runners in his wake, including teammate Murphy, en route to a 52nd place finish in 17:37. What's more, the Wildcats needed every second, as their total time earned them a wild card selection to the state meet, tying them to the second with Central Catholic.

Mike McConville, Hingham: Breaking 16 minutes for 5000 meters is a special accomplishment, but doing it at Franklin Park is particularly special, given that it places you in a pantheon of all time greats from Massachusetts. For McConville, his third place 15:54 time might bring him great individual pride sometime in the near future, but for now, he gets to celebrate with his teammates a trip to All States next weekend. Hingham was good enough for 5th in DIV, earning the wild card bid to come back to Franklin Park for another crack.

Craig Dicesare, Marshfield: No, I did not fail to witness the ease with which Rams Kevin Thomas and Joel Hubbard took the top two spots in the DII race on Saturday. I'm just a team-first kind of guy, and there was never any doubt from the gun that that would happen. What I am impressed with is that Marshfield used a marked improvement from Dicesare, Luke Davin, and Mike Tautiva to edge Central Catholic for 4th place and a trip to All States. Dicesare's 17th place finish in 17:11 was a huge leap forward, and for this poll, for this race, he gets top billing.

Meet to Watch

All State Championship, (Saturday, Nov. 19, Franklin Park: Same time, same place, and many area teams hope, same result. The D-2 girls race (11:00) will feature several area teams, including D-6 runner-up Norwell, plus D-2 third (Hingham) and fourth (Pembroke) place teams. Individual qualifiers will include Archbishop Williams' junior Sarah Sacchoach, Rockland's Jen Asci, and Plymouth North's Nicole Borofski. The D-1 girls tip off at 11:30, with D-1 champion Weymouth looking to make it a repeat, D-3 champion Whitman-Hanson serving as the probable favorite, and NDA's Kelsey Whitaker and freshman Elizabeth Constantino entered as individuals. D-2 boys will feature a great match-up with Pembroke the defending champions, as well as D-6 runner-up Norwell, and wild card team Hingham. Scituate sophomore Jake Reynolds and Abington senior Brendan Whalen will represent their teams as well. Finally, Whitman-Hanson (D-3 runners-up), Marshfield (D-2 fourth place), and Weymouth (wildcard) fill out the dance card for D-1 boys, with Plymouth South's Maxwell Bassett representing the Panthers individually.

The poll is compiled by Mike Miller, head coach of the defending state champion Weymouth High School girls' cross-country team.

Cohasset's Kayla Orner winds up to hit the ball during Saturday's Division 2 South Sectional tournament final against Canton. GATEHOUSE NEWS PHOTOS/ASHLEY MCCABE

Cohasset's Mackenzie Axelson battles Canton's Casey Considine during Saturday's Division 2 South Sectional tournament final held at Taunton high school.

BEST EVER

Cohasset followed with another 1-0 win against arch-rival Harwich.

Caitlin DeAngelis scored the winner in that game on a penalty stroke.

"The midfield and defense really kept us in those games," Giuliano said. "Beating Harwich is a big deal. They're a regular rival of ours and they're always very good. The girls played their hearts out. When they won, it was like a championship. There was more, but that win felt like a great cap on a great season."

In the 5-2 loss in the sectional final, Giuliano wasn't sure exactly what went wrong.

"I really don't know what happened," she said. "But in all, it was a tremendous experience for us. When you get into a tournament like this, anyone can win. I know how hard it is. You have to play all those games after the season and you have to stay motivated and focused. I give credit to teams that win State Championships. It is not easy."

Giuliano said her team was prepared for tournament quality play before they started their run.

"We had great leadership and great talent," she said. "Kids rose to the occasion and played big in big games. I'm very proud of them."

One key was squaring away the defense.

"The first week of practice I didn't see any defense," Giuliano said. "So I turned to a senior, Camryn Caron. She had wanted to be a forward, but I asked her to play defense. She did and she did a great job pulling everyone together, even in a position she didn't know yet."

Cohasset's Giselle Hart blocks the ball in front of goalie Whitney Jaffe during Saturday's Division 2 South Sectional tournament final held at Taunton high school.

Along with Caron, Giselle Hart was a big help.

"Giselle has played for Cohasset since the sixth grade," Giuliano said. "She was a big help. We also rotated in a few sophomores. Kathryn Dunn stepped up and did well. When we had the three of them (Dunn, Hart and Caron) on the field they really stepped up and gave us a chance to do things. We wouldn't have gone far without them."

Cohasset will lose 11 seniors to graduation, including DeAngelis, Amber Silvia, Angela Cipolla, Caron, Whitney Jaffe and Kayla Orner.

"I'm working on our plans for next year," Giuliano said. "It's been a lot of fun."

Giuliano said DeAngelis' departure will be tough, as will scoring leader Cipolla.

"Angela had 52 points. That was the best in the South Shore League," Giuliano said. "That doesn't always tell the story though. Against Harwich, she kept the ball up and controlled the clock. She did a great job that game. Angela had a goal to be the leading scorer. She did it."

Cohasset's second leading scorer this season was freshman Caty Gilman.

"Caty will probably anchor the forward line," Giuliano said. "She'll do well."

Giuliano said she enjoys watching her players go to the next level.

"It would be nice to see them play in college," she said of a number of her seniors. "They've worked hard."

As for the tournament. Giuliano said it was a stressful, but enjoyable ride.

"The goal was to get through the first game," she said. "I knew some things we had to do to accomplish that. Early in the season I tried to figure that out. It was something I worked on. Then every game upped the ante. One thing I've found out is how much hard work it is for teams still playing. There are still parts of the puzzle to fill. My goal is to be contenders for the next several years."

Cohasset celebrates their first goal during Saturday's Division 2 South Sectional tournament final held at Taunton high school.

Thayer field hockey has great season

It has been a terrific couple of years for the Thayer Academy field hockey team.

This season, with an experienced group of players, including Cohasset's Robin Spofford, the team won the Independent School League title for the second straight season, with a 14-1-1 record, and are currently in the New Preparatory School Athletic Council tournament.

Thayer opened their tournament with a 4-0 win over Governor's Academy and will play St. Marks on Saturday at Phillips Andover.

When they played earlier this season, Thayer and St. Marks played to a 1-1 tie, although Thayer controlled the game and outshot St. Marks 26 -4.

Their goalie had a career day and made some outstanding saves.

In 2010, Thayer won their first Independent School League (ISL) title in school history and went on to win the New Preparatory School Athletic Council (NEPSAC) Class B title for only the second time in school history. The 2009 team lost in the finals.

Sweet Relief students support local troops

Students of Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, an early education learning center in Cohasset, may have tiny hands but, their hearts are mighty. Sweet Relief students, through the Candy For the Troops program, which sends Halloween candy and other holiday treats to U.S. troops serving overseas, have shown their support by raising more than $350 and collecting more than 70 pounds of unopened candy during their two-week collection effort.

The 2-, 3- and 4-year old students decorated and filled gift boxes and cookie tins, which were sent along with personalized notes of thanks from Sweet Relief director, Lyn Congdon Previte. The packages are being sent to five local soldiers currently serving in Iraq and Afghanistan: Cpl. Mark DeLuca, son of Cohasset's Chief of Police, Mark M. DeLuca; 1st Lt. Daniel Tarpey; SPC Daniel Clarke and Justin A. Ricketts.

In addition, Sweet Relief made a donation to the American Legion in Cohasset. The American Legion was chartered by Congress in 1919 as a patriotic, mutual-help, wartime veterans organization. A community-service organization that now numbers nearly 3 million men and women in nearly 15,000 American Legion Posts worldwide. Ann Marie Goff of Scituate organizes the Cohasset American Legion's service efforts, organizing care packages and donations for local servicemen and women. Goff is currently accepting donations for additional upcoming holiday shipments, providing supplies and holiday cheer to local heroes.

"We take great pride in involving our students in community service efforts. To watch them put so much love and concentration into decorating the gift boxes for our Troops truly proves the great capacity for empathy and compassion these tiny hearts posses," said Previte.

Sweet Relief is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and provides the foundation that supports all children in their development as lifelong learners and contributing members of the community. To find out more about Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, visit the school's website at www.sweetreliefcohasset.com.

LIFE AT CHS

Second term off to busy start

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Student Council and Volunteer Club have teamed up for Cohasset's first annual Giving Season! There are three separate drives that will be taking place throughout November and December

Welcome back to school Cohasset after a nice, long weekend! I hope everybody enjoyed this year's first half day and the day off on Friday. I hope you all remembered to make a wish on 11/11/11 at 11:11, because that's a once-in-a-century opportunity!

This week marked the start of the second term, yet few had schedule changes. Quarter classes ended but none of the big switches occur until the first semester ends.

Thursday was a shortened day for Advisory, and each class is working hard on their yearlong project to benefit the school. I've heard ideas for dances, music over the loudspeakers, Olympic day and even a special Twitter account to spread the word about CHS news! (Everybody follow @CHSFlashblog!)

Student Council and Volunteer Club have teamed up for Cohasset's first annual Giving Season! There are three separate drives that will be taking place throughout November and December. Starting November 9th, there has been a toy drive for the local organization Asaprosar to benefit kids in El Salvador. From November 16th to the 23rd, bring in canned foods and nonperishable goods for the Cohasset Food Pantry. Lastly, from November 28th to December 14th, donate coats, boots, gloves and winter gear for Cradles to Crayons, an organization to help homeless families in Boston. Donations are being collected in the school and feel free to donate to any one of the three drives at any time – the dates are just guidelines! Everybody can help pitch in to make this year's Giving Season a success!

Yearbooks write-ups and pictures for seniors were due this week! If you have not submitted your write-up yet, make sure you do so ASAP so the Yearbook Staff can start working on layout! Don't forget hand in a cute baby picture as well.

Seniors and juniors are gearing up for Powderpuff with daily practices. Make sure to come to the game next Wednesday to witness the seniors crushing the juniors!

The football team beat Abington last Friday on senior night! Good job, boys. Unfortunately, the field hockey team lost last Saturday to Canton in the South Finals. They played a hard-fought game against a super tough team, so congrats on a great season girls!

You should have recently received the annual appeal from the Cohasset Education Foundation. Cohasset students like me directly benefit from your donations. Every day at CHS, I use the language lab for foreign language class and watch lessons come alive on Smart Boards, both made possible by the CEF. The CEF's donations are extremely helpful and beneficial, so please give to this amazing organization!

That's it for this week Cohasset! Hang in there, Thanksgiving is just around the corner, and next school week is only two and a half days long!

Celebrate with everything from high-brow music to low-brow comedy

The holidays are about tradition. Here in the Boston area, we take those traditions pretty seriously. That's reflected in our arts and cultural institutions, some of which have been around since the Civil War (that's not a joke).

So here's your chance to celebrate some old traditions or start some new ones. Check out our guide to holiday arts and entertainment, where we have events to suit all styles: traditional, thoughtful, celebratory, reflective, dazzling, funny, irreverent, or maybe something that's just a little sarcastic.

1 Firmly in the traditional camp: This is your last chance to catch "The Nutcracker" before it gets a major facelift. Mikko Nissinen, artistic director of Boston Ballet, says that next year they're going to completely re-imagine the production, and that means new sets and costumes. No more growing tree? We'll have to see. So if this version holds a special place in your heart, then catch it one more time. It runs Nov. 25 to Dec. 31 at the Boston Opera House.

2 "The Christmas Revels" loves to take you on a journey into the past. This year, the beloved winter solstice tradition brings revelers back to 16th-century France, where pilgrims are streaming toward a small village by the sea. Join them for a night of music, dance and laughter, as the Christmas Revels runs Dec. 16-29 at Sanders Theatre in Cambridge.

3 They're billing this year's "Radio City Christmas Spectacular" as "all new," but don't worry, they still have the Rockettes, "Living Nativity," "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and lots of your other favorite parts of the show. But there are new scenes, new costumes, new lighting effects and a 50-foot LED screen. You can catch the show Dec. 2-28 at the Wang Theatre in Boston.

4 Conductor Harry Christophers gets praise for his interpretation of the Handel and Haydn Society's "The Messiah." And after 158 years of performing it, the orchestra has probably worked out the kinks. H&H's version of it played to sold-out audiences last year. Catch it this year, Dec. 2-4, at Symphony Hall in Boston.

5 The Boston Pops is excited about its involvement in the recently released deluxe book and DVD version of Jan Brett's bestseller "The Night Before Christmas." The recording was made live at Symphony Hall during last year's Holiday Pops concert. You can catch it live this year, when the festive Holiday Pops returns to Symphony Hall, Dec. 7-24.

6 Holiday stresses? It's better to laugh than cry. Things may look idyllic in this small town in 1940s Indiana, as the residents prepare for the holiday festivities, but the craziness will come. Watch the Parker family deal with the calamities and joys of the season in the play "A Christmas Story," running Dec. 11-24 at the New Rep Theatre in Watertown.

7 J. S. Bach can put you in a Christmas mood. Just ask the Handel and Haydn Society. They present "A

DANCE | ALEXANDER STEVENS

Big leap for local Clara belles

Three area preteens snag key role in 'The Nutcracker'

Isabella Auerbach, a 12-year-old from West Newton, was rehearsing for a dance performance when she got a call from her father. He said he was holding a letter from Boston Ballet. It was the results of her recent audition for "The Nutcracker." He opened it and read it to her over the phone: She'd won the role of Clara.

Her reaction was pretty much what you'd expect from a seventh-grader who just landed a dream role: "I kind of just went into the bathroom and screamed," she says.

The news would get even better. Two of the other three Claras – Boston Ballet rotates four girls in the role – were her friends: Sabrina Appleby of Needham,12, and Victoria Burns, 12, of Wellesley Hills.

"We're actually all pretty close friends," says Sabrina. "It's been fun to learn the role together and help each other out."

Clara is the catalyst for "The Nutcracker" story. She drives the action in Act I. And when you add in the fact that she's a witness to the wondrous dancing in the second act, she spends pretty much the entire ballet onstage.

"You're always nervous because there are so many people watching you," says Victoria. "But it's also very exciting."

It's a sentiment echoed by her fellow dancers.

"Everybody has nerves," says Sabrina. "But I'm more excited than nervous to be onstage and perform. I know that once I'm onstage, it will feel good. You only get the nerves when you're backstage."

If they sound like chiseled veterans, that's because they are. Remarkably, even though they're only 12 years old, students such as Victoria have been dancing in Boston Ballet classes since they were 3. But she points out that it's not particularly rigorous at that point: "At 3, you're pretty much just running around the studio in a tutu," she confesses.

They're also veterans of Boston Ballet's big stage. They've all performed in previous productions of "The Nutcracker," often graduating from barnyard animals to party girls to polichinelles, before making the big leap to Clara. They've also danced in Boston Ballet's "Midsummer Night's Dream." That kind of access to this world-class dance orgainization is thrilling for the kids.

"We're all so in awe of the professional dancers in the company," says Sabrina. "Then you see them backstage: 'Oh, there she is!' Sometimes they talk to you, and that's fun, too."

It's all part of building the feeling of "family" that the girls describe at Boston Ballet.

As for favorite parts of the show, they all talk about the party scene where the stage is packed with performers. The battle scene is another favorite.

"My favorite part is the nightmare scene, when you start to realize the dolls aren't so nice anymore," says Victoria. "I think the hardest part will be the acting. You can't overdo it or else it looks fake. And while you're thinking about that, you're also learning the steps."

Victoria Burns of Wellesley Hills, Isabella Auerbach of West Newton and Sabrina Appleby of Needham are friends who all landed the role of Clara in Boston Ballet's "The Nutcracker." STAFF PHOTO BY ERIN PRAWOKO

Another sign that these are surprisingly advanced dancers for their age is that you get interesting answers when you ask them about their love of dancing.

"I like how you can express yourself through dance," says Victoria. "It's not verbal; it's just through movement."

"I like how, when you're dancing, it's impossible to get nervous, and you forget about everything else. You're so into it" you get transported, says Isabella. "It's almost magical."

Other winter wonders

Not every show this season has to have a Santa or a Scrooge

There's no law that says you have to see a holiday show in the next six weeks. It just seems that way. Here's a guide to some great non-holiday-themed events.

The heart-warming, beautiful sound that Itzhak Perlman can coax from his violin has helped make him a household name. His charisma doesn't hurt either: He's joyous in performance. Catch him Nov. 20 at 3 p.m. at Symphony Hall in Boston, part of the Celebrity Series.

"Ain't Misbehaving," a rousing celebration of Fats Wallers' music, heats up the joint and helps ward off the gloom of the approaching winter. The Lyric Stage Company of Boston kicks it into high gear, presenting "Ain't Misbehavin" Nov. 17 to Dec. 17.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's season of guest conductors continues with Czech conductor Jiri Belohlavek leading the orchestra in a program of John Harbison (his BSO-commissioned Symphony No. 5) and Beethoven (Piano Concerto No. 4 and "Leonore" Overture No. 3). Catch the concert Dec. 1-3 at Symphony Hall in Boston.

Poet Robert Pinsky is good. Real good. That's probably why he's a former U. S. Poet Laureate. In addition to poetry, Pinsky has a great love of jazz. He combines the two with a music-inflected reading with Stan Strickland (saxophone), John Lockwood (bass) and Rakalam Bob Moses (drums), as he performs "Poetic Rythms: Jazz and Poetry" at the Jewish Community Center in Newton, at 8 p.m. on Dec. 10.

"La Cage Aux Folles" has turned into an enduring musical. You may have taken note of the recent Broadway version that featured Kelsey Grammer. Well, now it's coming to Boston with good guy George Hamilton playing Georges. The holidays are a great time to revisit the outrageous fun of the Saint-Tropez nightclub that's full of songs and laughs. It plays Dec. 5-18 at the Shubert Theatre in Boston.

It's a thrilling battle of wits and wills as a guard squares off against the captured Adolf Eichmann, "the architect of the Holocaust." That's the true story at the root of "Captors." The Huntington Theatre's production plays through Dec. 11 at the B.U. Theatre in Boston.

The Boston Children's Theatre launches its 60th season with an audience favorite, "The Velveteen Rabbit." Combining puppetry and live actors, the show "speaks to the holiday themes of hope, family and belief," says Burges Clark, executive artistic director of the BCT. The show runs Dec. 3-18 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Disney on Ice returns to TD Bank Garden in Boston with "Treasure Trove" Dec. 26-29. The kids can expect appearances by Jasmine, Ariel, Cinderella, Belle, Snow White and many more.

If you're not quite done being peeved at the George W. Bush administration, check out Valerie Plame Wilson and Joe Wilson as they speak Nov. 30 as part of the Boston Speakers' Series at Symphony Hall in Boston. When Joe wrote a 2003 op-ed piece in the New York Times that suggested the Iraqi nuclear threat had been exaggerated, Valerie's identity as a covert CIA operative was revealed. Their story was told in the movie "Fair Game."

The Mighty Mighty BosTones release a new studio album ("The Magic of Youth") on Dec. 6, which should just add juice to their 14th Hometown Throwdown at the House of Blues in Boston, Dec. 28-30. They can add some new numbers to their ska-punk classics like "Someday I Suppose" and "Where'd You Go?"

When a young boy is taken away by a wicked enchantress, his best friend must make a perilous journey to the North Pole to rescue him. That's the story of "The Snow Queen," a new stage adaptation of Hans Christian Anderson's ode to childhood. This American Repertory Theatre production, complete with original puppets, makes a great holiday night out for the whole family, Dec. 10-31, at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge.

The Patriots are an impenetrable fort, but Michael Holley has provided some of the most revealing glimpses inside the way coach Bill Belichick does business. If you liked Holley's "Patriot Rein," then you'll want to check out "War Room: The Legacy of Bill Belichick and the Art of Building the Perfect Team." Holley appears at the Brookline Booksmith at 7 p.m. on Nov. 29.

The whole family can enjoy the technologically dazzling production of "Peter Pan" that continues to play on the City Hall Plaza in Boston through Dec. 30. The show features 23 actors, stunning puppets and dazzling flying sequence.

Christopher Sieber and George Hamilton perform in "La Cage aux Folles," Dec. 5-18 at the Shubert Theatre in Boston.

Itzhak Perlman plays Nov. 20 at 3 p.m. at Symphony Hall in Boston.

"Peter Pan" continues its high-flying run on City Hall Plaza in Boston through Dec. 30.

The theater that saved 'Christmas'

The holiday show creates a unique connection between NSMT and its patrons

Returning actors enhance the sense of community that surrounds North Shore Music Theatre's "Christmas Carol." David Coffee, who plays Scrooge, has become a regular. PHOTO BY PAUL LYDEN

Every now and then, a play comes along that defines a theater and binds a community. Up at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly, that happened in 1989 when the theater, then under the guidance of Jon Kimbell, launched its own production of "A Christmas Carol."

It's become a holiday tradition for countless families who revel in its perfect blend of song, spectacle and heart.

The show has been produced every year since then, except one. In 2008, with the theater under new direction, they opted to present "High School Musical 2" instead. Soon after, the theater filed for bankruptcy.

The decision to produce Disney over Dickens wasn't the cause of the theater's collapse, but it didn't help. More significantly, it became emblematic of a theater that had somehow lost touch with its community.

Arianna Knapp was on the staff at NSMT when they created "Christmas Carol." Now in the role of artistic director at the theater, she was part of the team that brought it back last year.

"They wanted it to be extracted completely from Dickens' text," says Knapp, remembering the original creative team. "This wasn't going to be their interpretation of 'Christmas Carol'; it was Christmas Carol.' Our production is a great balance of storytelling, music and intimacy with the audience. [With the theater's in-the-round configuration,] you're engaged with the actors, you're part of the show."

Knapp agrees that the show has made such an emotional connection with its audiences that it could stand as a mission statement for how the theater does business.

"A Christmas Carol" is "a guiding principle for me as the artistic director," she says. "We need to bring high-quality productions of shows our audiences want to see. This theater belongs to Beverly."

The many repeat viewers of "Christmas Carol" may have noticed the subtle changes to the show over the years, including a final-act goose that gets bigger and bigger each year. "It's an absurd size at this point," Knapp says with a laugh.

Astute viewers may also have noticed that the only character that changes significantly is the Ghost of Christmas Future. Knapp thinks that makes sense: "You can't really touch the past or the present," she says. "The only thing you can change is the future."

But don't expect a future without "Christmas Carol" at North Shore Music Theatre. And that's good news for the many viewers who have made the Music Theatre's "Christmas Carol" a Christmas tradition. Knapp says that, at age 22, "Christmas Carol" is now old enough for people who once saw the show as a preteen to now be bringing their own children. And she remembers being stopped in the lobby by a patron who said that his stepfather doesn't ever go to the theater. "The only show he'll go see is our 'Christmas Carol,' " Knapp remembers the man telling her. "And he goes every year."

Knapp knows the feeling. She brings her kids every year, too, and the Boar's Head Carol still makes her cry.

"It would be hard to imagine December without our 'Christmas Carol' at the theater," says Knapp, "both as a leader at the theater and as a parent in the community."

"A Christmas Carol" plays Dec. 2-23 at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly.

ARTS PREVIEW

Bach Christmas," Dec. 15 and 18 at Jordan Hall in Boston. They'll perform Cantata 133, Cantata V from "Christmas Oratorio" and other Baroque works. If you're interested, you may want to grab your tickets soon: This show sold out last year.

8 Tchaikovsky tends to dominate our "Nutcracker" consciousness. But the other key storyteller is E.T.A. Hoffman whose tale provided the springboard for the beloved ballet. The House of Theatre in Chicago decided to take a closer look at that source material, and they found something a lot deeper and darker than sugar plum fairies and huge hoop skirts hiding polichinelles. They found a story about life and loss. For a new musical vision of "Nutcracker," check out the House of Theatre production that plays at the Stoneham Theatre, Nov. 25 to Dec. 22.

9 Maybe it's partly because the holidays belong to kids that the Vienna Boys Choir is such a perfect match with this time of year. The choir, which has been charming audiences with their angelic voices since 1948, bring some Olde World charm to the season, performing Dec. 4 at 3 p.m. at Jordan Hall in Boston.

10 How would you like a Pink Martini for Christmas? Not the drink, the band. Well, the acclaimed Latin-jazz-cabaret band that's made Boston a regular stop on its tours, returns for a holiday concert on Dec. 16-17 at the Berklee Performance Center. The band will pull heavily from their popular 2010 holiday album, "Joy to the World." Note: Singer China Forbes is recovering from throat surgery; look for guest performers.

11 The Cambridge Center for Adult Education can get you in the holiday mood with their Holly Fair, a crafts fair that raises money for their scholarship fund. They've been doing this for 58 years, and this will be their biggest one ever – two historical buildings in the heart of Harvard Square provide a home for even more vendors. Shoppers will find handmade jewelry, bags, clothing, paintings and food items when the Fair runs Dec. 10-11 at 42 and 56 Brattle Street in Cambridge.

12 Erin McKeown has an attitude about Christmas that would probably make Bing Crosby blush. She's just released a self-described anti-holiday album with a name that we probably shouldn't print here. She proudly admits it's anti-capitalist and suspicious of Christmas-as-patriotism. You'll catch her sentiments if you check out her "Anti-holiday Spectacular" on Dec. 22 at Passim in Cambridge.

13 You rank as one of the all-time great gift-givers if you head off to the Paradise City Arts Festival to buy some holiday gifts. Artwork, jewelry, even furniture, the festival may have the perfect present for someone special in your life. (Maybe yourself!) The Festival runs Nov. 18-20, at the Royal Plaza Trade Center in Marlborough.

14 Maybe you're in the mood for a Tudor Christmas. The Boston Early Music Festival presents Stile Antico, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m. at St. Paul Church, Cambridge, where they'll offer "Puer Natus Est – Tudor Music for Christmas and Advent," masterpieces by Tallis, Byrd, Taverner, Sheppard and others.

15 The Reagle Players in Waltham celebrate Christmas like they mean it. A cast of about 200 takes over the stage with spectacles designed to warm the heart of everyone in the family. You get a Victorian Christmas, Santa's workshop, "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," countless elves and a live band. Their 29th Anniversary Edition of "Christmas Time" plays Dec. 3-11.

16 Jose Mateo Ballet Theatre annually competes with the towering Boston Ballet production of "The Nutcracker" by offering something far more intimate in his Sanctuary Theatre in Cambridge. Hence their tag line, "Beauty up close." Mateo's production plays Nov. 25-27 at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center, and Dec. 10-18 in Cambridge.

17 The comedy-song concert "Jewmongous" is the brain-child of Sean Altman, who's been described as a Jewish hipster who sings biting satire that isn't afraid to be impolite and politically incorrect. Some of the song titles alone will tell you if this is the show for you: "What the Hell is Simchas Torah?" and "They Tried to Kill Us (We Survived, Let's Eat)." You can catch Altman's show on Dec. 29 at Passim in Cambridge.

If you like your holidays spiked with laughs, check out "Sister's Christmas Catechism," Nov. 26 to Dec. 23 at the Stoneham Theatre.

18 "Three Pianos" isn't overtly about the holiday spirit, but this theatrical piece built around Schubert's "Winterreise" has elements that certainly suit the season, as it depicts friends gathering on a blustery winter night for some music and libation. This imaginative night of theater, in which three pianists are the stars, was a hit in New York. The American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge presents it Dec. 7 to Jan. 8 at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge.

19 If you like your Christmas celebrations to be spiked with humor, then check out "Sister's Christmas Catechism." Denise Fennell returns to Stoneham Theatre as Sister (the show was a hit last year), out to teach you the finer point of Christmas, and, along the way, create a Living Nativity, with a little help from her friends (that's you). It plays Nov. 26 to Dec. 23 at the Stoneham Theatre.

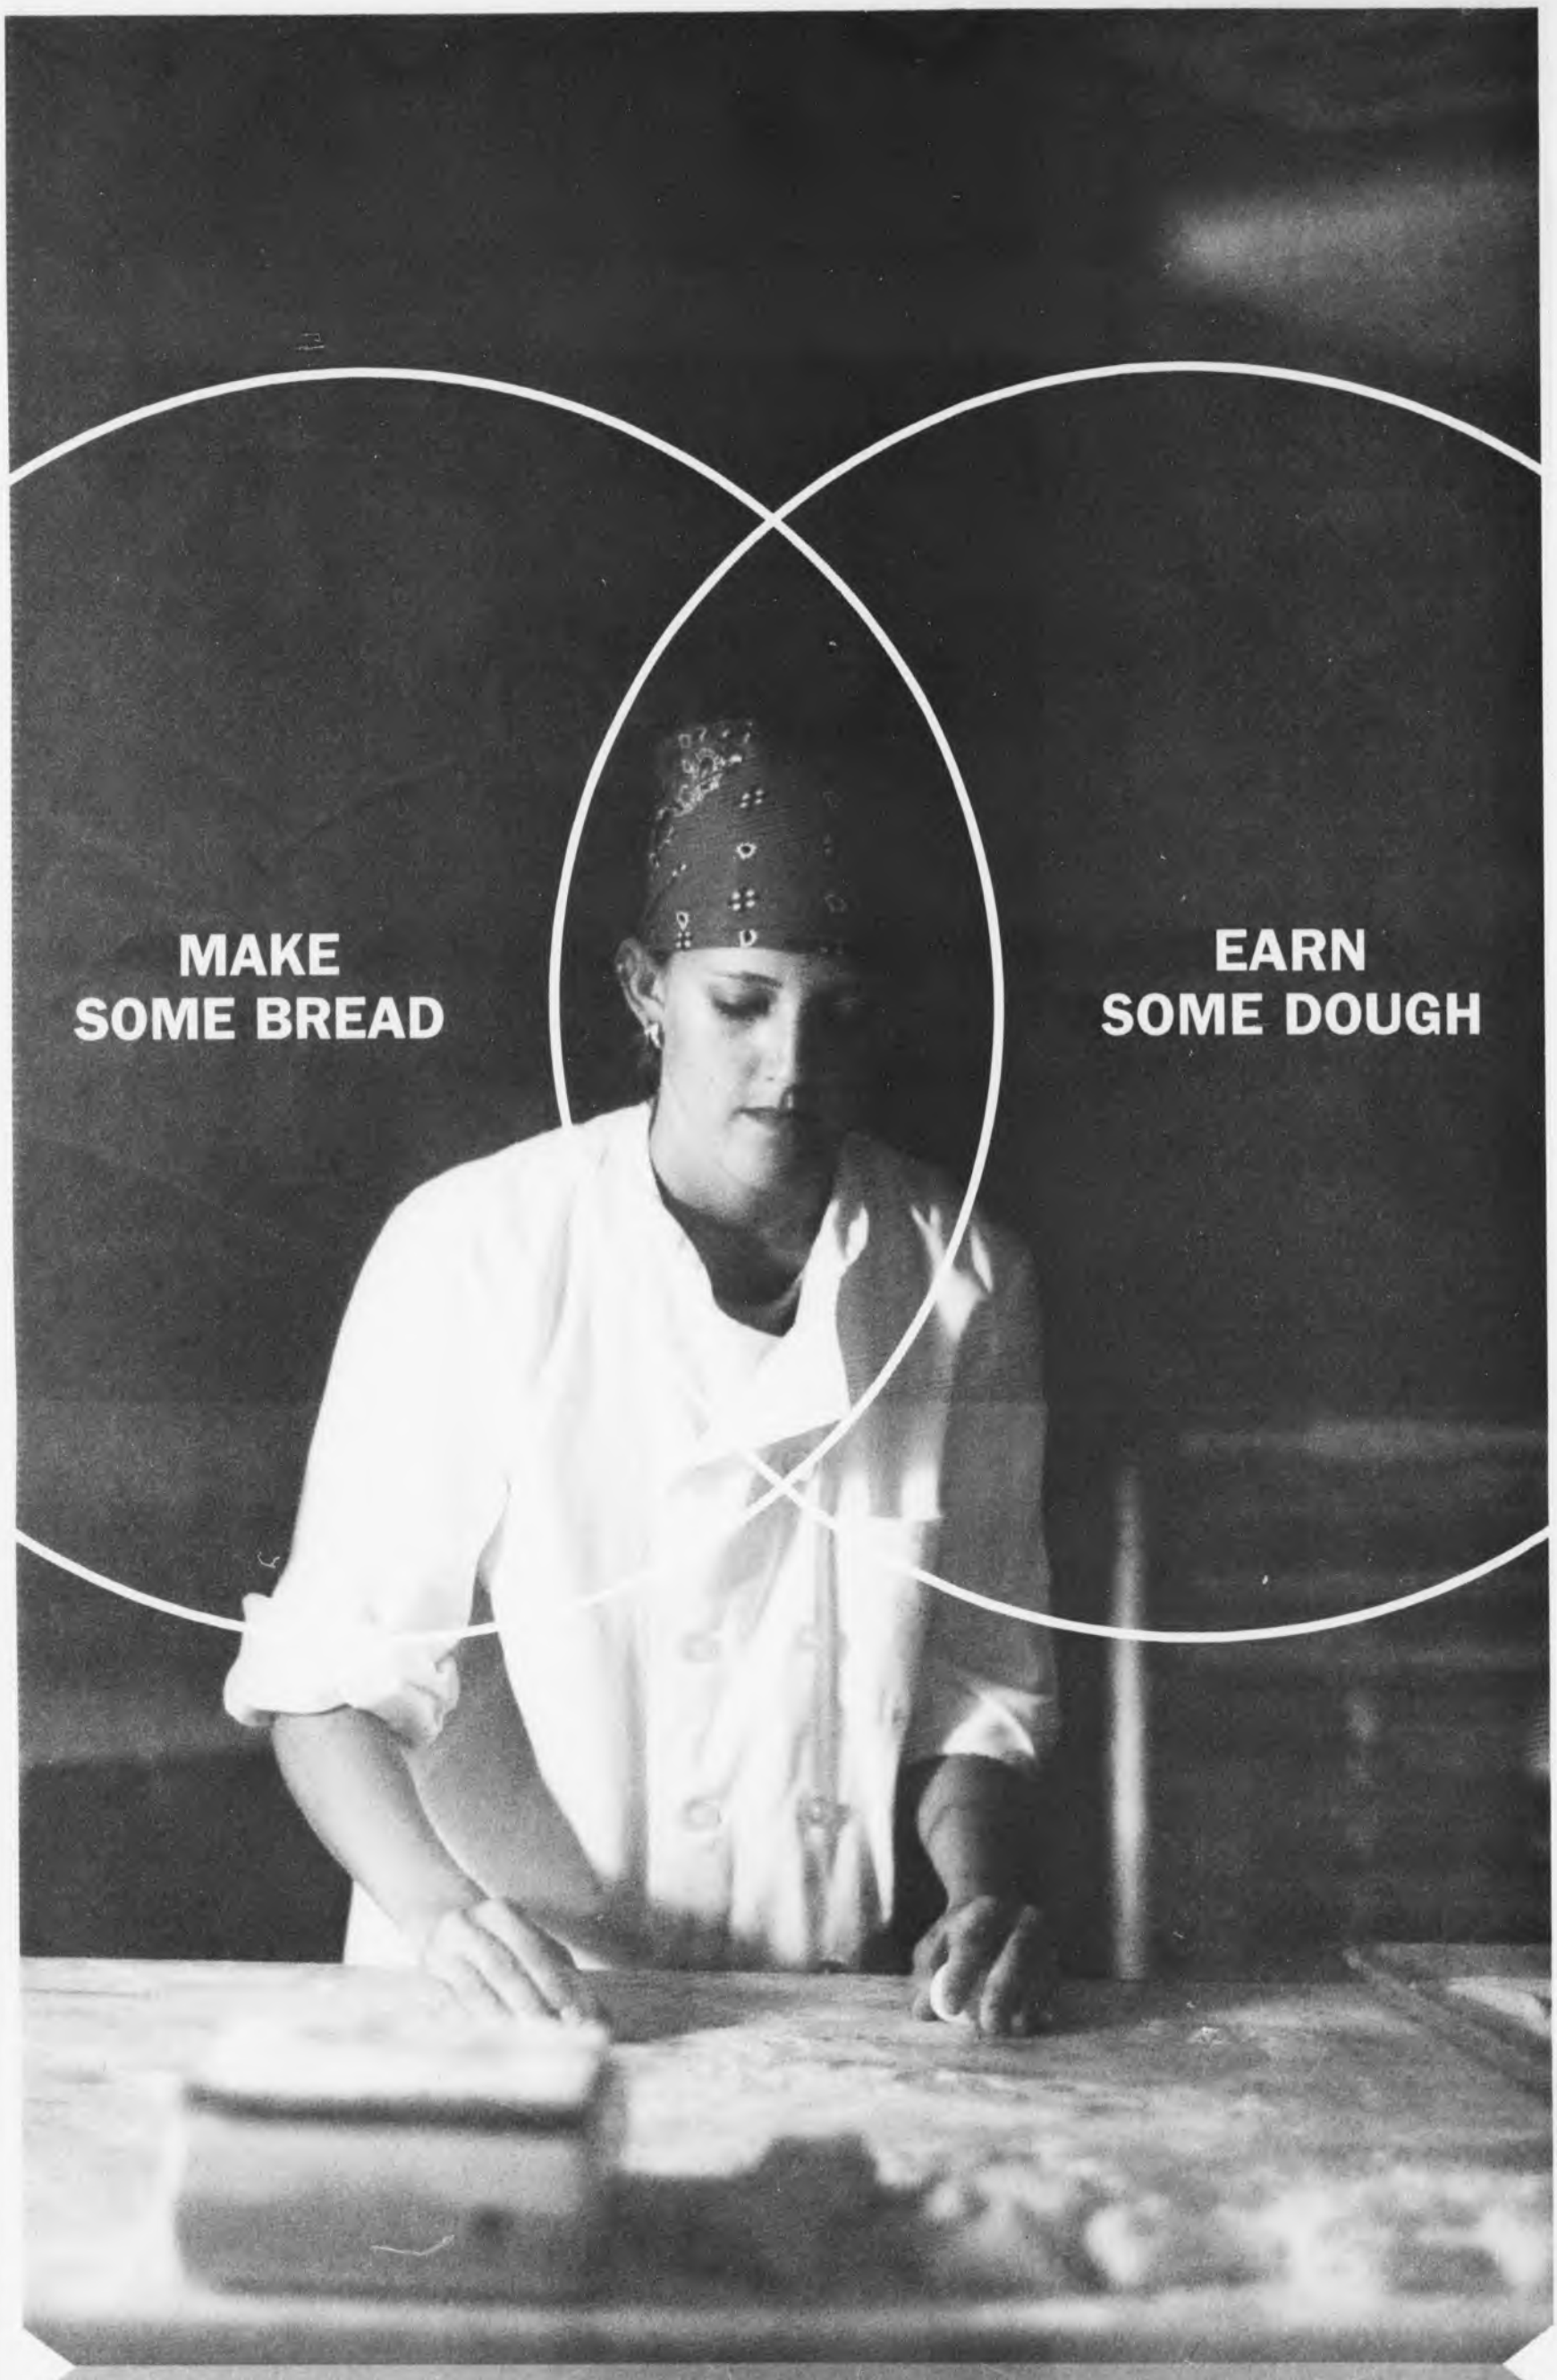
20 Boston Ballet may be preparing a new vision for next year's "Nutcracker," but BalletRox has beat them to it. They've been presenting their popular "Urban Nutcracker" for years. Their production features an eclectic mix of styles, from ballet to breakdancing, and maybe a moonwalk thrown in for good measure. Shows run Dec. 3-18 at the Wheelock Family Theatre.

21 Not only is Dan Hicks a pioneer of the famed San Francisco music scene, he's also a snappy dresser. You can check him out when he brings his "Holidaze in Hicksville" show to the First Parish Church in Cambridge, on Dec. 3.

22 For some reason, Gore Place in Waltham seems like a nice match with the holidays. On Dec. 3 from 1 to 3 p.m., the historic estate offers a first-floor tour of the beautiful 1806 mansion. In addition to seeing the great hall and stairs, the oval parlor and Gore's office, visitors will find a gift boutique for holiday shopping.

23 The Lexington Symphony offers up its own Holiday Pops concert, which they'll perform Dec. 2 (at 4 and 8 p.m.) at Cary Hall, in Lexington. The concert features rousing holiday favorites and a sing-along. And don't be surprised if Santa makes an appearance.

24 If you feel like the holidays are a time to party, then Blue Man Group can probably get you started with their out-of-this-world vision of comedy, hijinx and music. If you haven't seen it in a while, you may find some new bits to go along with the old favorites. The long-running show plays at the Charles Playhouse in Boston.



25 As if attending "The Nutcracker" weren't enough to get you in the holiday mood, Kingston Station offers up some holiday treats for those attending the show. The centerpiece is ice cream in perfect holiday flavors such as Eggnog, Gingerbread and Peppermint Stick. It runs Nov. 26 - Dec. 29 at Kingston Station Restaurant on Kingston Street, near the Opera House in Boston.

Good times and good tunes

Gratefuls have been rockin' for 20 years

Fun music that people can sing along and dance to is how Jon Leet describes a performance by The Gratefuls. Leet, the drummer for the band going on 20 years, said despite changes the band maintains the same fun groove and continues to enjoy a dedicated following.

"We have people that come and go all the time—some people can't commit time, or they play in other bands. We just had our keyboard player move to Los Angeles to become a professional musician, so it's really a mix," said Leet. "We try to keep it fresh. We bring people in and sometimes they stay, sometimes they don't, but we just keep it going so our friends keep coming to see us."

Anne Czerkawski of The Gratefuls.

Band members involvement in The Gratefuls is a hobby, something they like to do and like to do together. All the members of the band have full time jobs, Leet said, so being able to rock out together for a live audience of fans, friends and family at a local venue is a great way they blow off steam and have fun.

"We all have fairly intense jobs, so it's definitely a creative outlet for us to be able play together," said Leet. "We all enjoy music. We enjoy each other and it's a great way to stay young."

Members of the band include Leet on drums, Anne Czerkawski of Cohasset on vocals, Vic Lanzilotti of Cohasset on guitar and vocals, Pete Morin of Scituate on guitar and vocals, Mary Anne O'Brien of Scituate on vocals and percussion, Vinny O'Brien of Scituate on vocals, harmonica and percussion, Lenny Rubenstein of Scituate on guitar, Rick Shea of Cohasset on bass and vocals, and Mirko Tani of Quincy on keyboards.

Our real aspiration is to be able to continue to perform in good venues in the area and bring a large crowd to come out and enjoy the music and enjoy each other,"

Jon Leet , drummer for The Gratefuls

Twenty years ago when the band first got together the primary objective was to have fun, Leet said.

"We got together for a 40th birthday party for one of our neighbors. Our friend wanted to throw a surprise party for him and he had a fantasy of being a rock and roll star and since we were all musicians we decided to play for the birthday," said Leet.

The casual idea of playing a few songs together morphed into something more. People began asking The Gratefuls to play at other functions. From there, Leet said, they started playing for charities and more recently they started playing at venues around the South Shore, including the River Club Music Hall in Scituate, the Tinker's Son in Norwell, and the C Note in Hull.

Over the last 20 years, the band has undergone many changes, including a revolving door of band members and several name changes. For years, the all male group performed as The Grateful Dads. However, Leet said they felt they had to drop the name when two moms (Czerkawski and O'Brien) became part of the band. So, now they're just the Gratefuls.

Other things have changed as well, said Leet. The audience now includes his daughters and their friends. come to see him play and their friends.

In spite of changes since that fateful surprise 40th birthday 20 years ago, the band's mantra seems to have stayed the same.

"We're constantly evolving. None of us have ambitions to quit our day jobs and become professional musicians, even though a lot of us have done that in the past. Our real aspiration is to be able to continue to perform in good venues in the area and bring a large crowd to come out and enjoy the music and enjoy each other," said Leet.

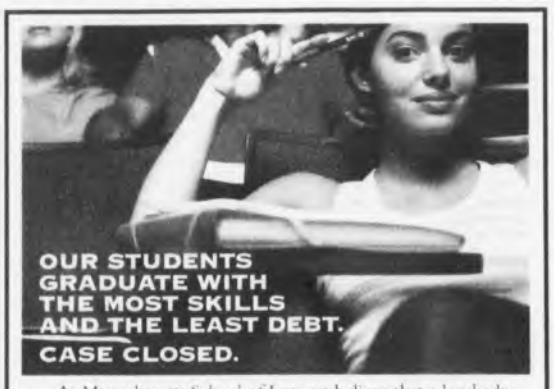
Massachusetts School of Law Trial Advocacy Team finishes fourth in nation

Massachusetts School of Law



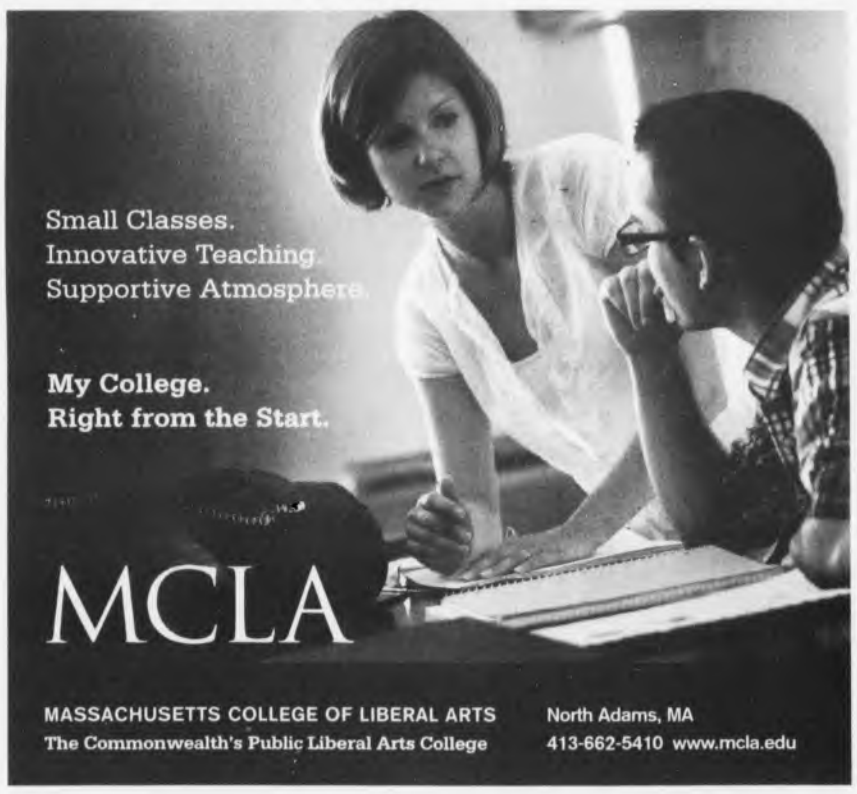
The Massachusetts School of Law Trial Advocacy Team advanced two of its teams to the Elite 8, while its undefeated team advanced to the Final 4 of the prestigious National Criminal Trial Advocacy Competition held Nov. 3-5 in San Francisco.

The semifinals then matched two evenly talented teams, MSL and the University of the Pacific McGeorge Law School. In trying the attempted murder case, both teams displayed superb advocacy and trial skills as they argued Motions in limine (legal written "request" or motions to a judge which can be used for civil or criminal proceedings, and at the state or federal level); Motions under Rule 29 for a Required Finding of Not Guilty; and tried the case to a jury. In the semifinals, the MSL team lost an extremely close match to end its national championship run. Against some of the top trial advocacy programs in the United States, MSL's Trial Advocacy team finished fourth in the country.

The California Attorneys for Criminal Justice sponsor the National Criminal Trial Advocacy Competition, held in alternating years in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Since 2008, due to the increasing reputation of its Trial Advocacy program, MSL has been invited to compete in this prestigious competition that brings together the top trial advocacy programs in the country. Previous winners include Stanford Law School and Northwestern University School of Law.

Many of the top Trial Advocacy programs in the United States competed again this year, including South Texas, which is presently ranked as the top Trial Advocacy program in the country.

MSL team members are Allenston Sheridan Jr. of Manchester, Conn.; Darryl Caffee of Philadelphia; Brittney Forgues of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada; James Michael Dulany of Exeter, N.H.; James Hester of Plymouth; Donovan Boyle of West Boylston; Kelley Fahy of Melrose; and Kellie Tiller of Evans, Ga. MSL Associate Dean Michael Coyne, Essex County Assistant District Attorney Kimberly Gillespie, and Professors Daniel Harayda and Darius Greene coach the MSL Trial Advocacy team.



At Massachusetts School of Law, we believe that a legal education can be practical, technologically sophisticated, and a great value. Plus, unlike schools that focus on standardized tests, we consider each applicant's complete history. Call today to discover the school that's setting new standards for excellence and value.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

A time to celebrate with 'Joyful Noise'

ROY HARRIS

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's French horns will help set the celebratory tone for "Joyful Noise," its Dec. 3 holiday concert at 7:30 p.m. at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts in Braintree. In addition to traditional holiday fare, the program features the glory of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Joyful Noise:
Thayer Academy Center for the Arts
745 Washington St., Braintree
7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3
- HANDEL: "Music for the Royal Fireworks," HWV 351
- DAI: "Twas the Night Before Christmas" With narration
- ANDERSON: "Christmas Festival" and "Sleigh Ride"
- ROSSINI: "Introduction, Theme and Variations," "Jin-Sung Moon," clarinet
- DVORAK: "Slavonic Dances" Op. 46, No. 1
- BEETHOVEN: "Symphony No. 5" in C minor, Op. 67

This year, the holiday tradition comes with a difference. In addition to works by Leroy Anderson that are associated with the season, there's a range of other delightful works by Handel, Rossini and Dvorak. And it's all capped by the world's most famous symphony, the glorious Beethoven Fifth.

In this question-and-answer session, I ask Maestro Kim, now in his 15th year with the orchestra, to explain what makes this concert so remarkable.

R.H. — The ASO's "Joyful Noise" performance, having become a year-end tradition on the South Shore, offers a different program each year. What should we look for that's unusual in a concert you're calling "Holiday Fireworks"?

J.K. — Festive and colorful works have always been a mainstay of this joyous concert. This year I added even more energetic and explosive repertoire; hence "Holiday Fireworks." In addition to all the exciting miniature symphonic works, Beethoven's victorious and breathtaking Fifth Symphony completes the program.

R.H. — With Handel, Dvorak, Rossini — and the Beethoven conclusion — what is there for the many audience members who like to make this concert part of their holiday partying?

J.K. — Well, first I believe you really can't go wrong with the ASO's splendid performances of works by those masters. This year I am especially looking forward to ""Twas the Night Before Christmas," a narrated work set to the famous holiday poem. Stay tuned for an announcement of who the narrator will be! Leroy Anderson, one of our favorite holiday composers, of course, is also on the program. In addition, the festive and joyous atmosphere that our fantastic audience brings to the affair really make this a special experience for all.

R.H. — Why Beethoven's Fifth? Isn't that a strange choice for a holiday concert?

J.K. — Not at all! I believe such a triumphant symphonic masterpiece perfectly fits the mood of this joyous concert. In addition to the popularity of the symphony, I believe the victorious ending to this masterpiece should put a bold exclamation point on the festive evening.

R.H. — We love the way the ASO features last year's Concerto Competition winner in a program like this one. What can you tell us about clarinetist Jin-Sung Moon and the Rossini piece he'll play?

J.K. — Jin-Sung is an extremely gifted clarinetist. As such, the judges were unanimous in awarding him the first prize at 2010 Atlantic Symphony Concerto Competition. In addition to his many successes as a soloist, he is already a frequent substitute clarinetist for Baltimore Symphony. Rossini's concerto features virtuosic clarinet lines – which will make it appear to first-time listeners that the clarinetist is improvising. It's almost as if the swooping opening clarinet solo heard on ASO's Opening Night performance of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" comes back to life all over again.

R.H. — The Thayer Academy Center for the Arts is the scene for this concert, and for the next big performance, the Discovery Concert on Sunday, next Jan. 29. Thayer is beautiful, comfortable, and easy to get to, but why do the musicians like it so much?

J.K. — We love the hall as much as the audiences there do. With its lower stage, they enjoy the great sightlines from every seat. And we are certainly honored to be the orchestra in residence at Thayer Academy. Thayer Academy's commitment to the fine arts both within their community and the region has been a true gift for all of us. Thayer's Center for the Arts certainly offers easy access from Route 3 and the auditorium is certainly state of the art. That's an advantage for musicians and audience members alike.

The ASO invites you to join Maestro Kim at 7 p.m., before the Dec. 3 Joyful Noise program, for that casual, but more detailed, discussion of these works.

Admission is $35 for adults and $30 for seniors, with those 18 and under admitted for $10. Check out www.atlanticsymphony.org, or call ASO managing director Jim Hartford at 781-331-3600.

Roy Harris, a Hingham-based journalist and author, is a member of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra board of directors.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF NOV. 28, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep those sharp Sheep eyes focused on a hazy situation. As things begin to clear up, you'll find a sharper picture emerging, showing something you will need to know.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Watch your expenses through the end of the month. Later, you'll be glad to have extra money to pay for something that will make an acquisitive Bovine's heart beat faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're now ready to make that oft-deferred commitment, if you still believe it's what you want. Don't be afraid to change your mind if you feel you should go in another direction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Now that you are moving on with your life after that recent disappointment, how about reactivating your travel plans and taking someone special along with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Many new friends come into your personal life, which suits all of you social Lions just fine. However, one new friend might make demands that you could find difficult to deal with.

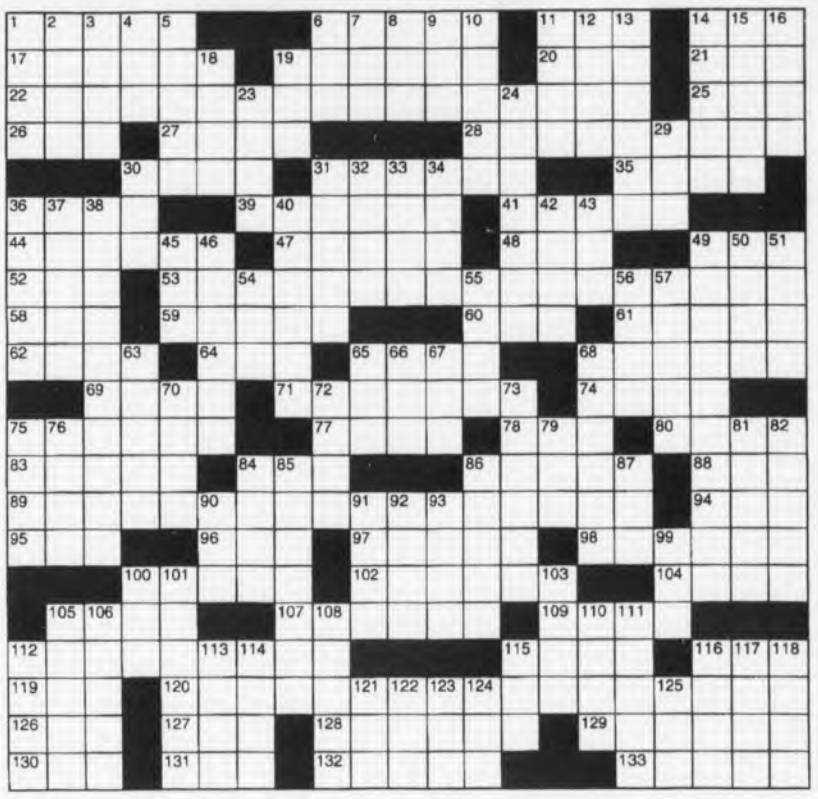
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Communication doesn't exist unless it's two-way. So if you're getting no replies to the signals you're sending, it could be time to look for someone more receptive.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace complication that you thought was ironed out develops new wrinkles that need attention. Meanwhile, expect continuing improvement in your home life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A tense personal problem needs to be talked out before someone decides to walk out. Resist making decisions until full explanations are offered from both sides.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A technological glitch that caused problems recently will soon be repaired, and life can return to normal. A colleague has a surprising message to deliver.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your partner might feel that you haven't been as open with him or her as you should be. Deal with this now, before it turns into something more difficult to handle.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Many of the stumbling blocks that affected the progress of some of your career projects are fading away. Things also start to look up on the home front.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You'll need that strong Piscean pluck to get through waters that will be turbulent for a while. A more positive aspect soon emerges, along with some welcome news.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

RTR to hold annual dinner and auction

"We really count on our many friends to help us through times like these."
Chris White RTR CEO

Road to Responsibility will host its annual Dinner/Auction to feature holiday shopping on Friday, Nov. 18, at Indian Pond Country Club in Kingston.

The difficult ongoing economic times have made fundraising more critical than ever for Road to Responsibility, Inc. (RTR) and the 1,000 adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities served by RTR in residential, work, rehab and private employment programs throughout the South Shore and southeastern Massachusetts. "We really count on our many friends to help us through times like these," stated Chris White RTR CEO. "It's tremendous as families, business partners, old friends and new come out and get involved. It's a great and fun time to enjoy a wonderful dinner and get all your holiday shopping done in one pleasant, hassle-free evening — all the while helping a worthy cause."

The third annual event will run from 6 to 11 p.m. at Indian Pond and also include hors-d'oeuvres, cocktails and both silent and live auctions. There will be something for every wallet from exotic trips, vacations and weekend getaways to great Boston sports tickets/memorabilia, gourmet dinners with media personalities and celebrity chefs, jewelry, electronics, beauty packages, gift baskets and much, much more.

Guest emcee will be Beverly Beckham, columnist for the Boston Globe. There will be a short video featuring individuals served by RTR before the live auction. Sponsors for the event presently include South Shore Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, Stonegate Builders, BlumShapiro, South Shore Magazine/Blackrock Advertising, A.W. Perry Co., Health Plans, Inc., Sigma Mechanical Services, Comcast, Hub International, Unicorn Realty, Image Tech, Rose, Chinitz & Rose, LLC, Futures Healthcore, Mutual Bank, GateHouse Media, W.B. Mason, McDougall Bros. Excavation & Construction, Grady Consulting, Casner & Edwards, LLC and Parent, McLaughlin & Nagle.

A few value-priced tables of eight and 10 and individual tickets, which will not be sold the night of the dinner are available by calling Kara Malone at 781-536-3219 or by going to www.roadtoresponsibility.org. There are also just a few tickets left for the $10,000 raffle, of which only 100 will be sold at $100 each. All proceeds from the evening will go toward the programs serving RTR individuals.

Mary Brennock of Cohasset is hanging up her costume for good after many years as Mrs. Claus during the Jingle Bell Walk.

'Mrs. Claus' retires after 16 years

By Erin Dale

Every year on the day after Thanksgiving, Cohasset families look forward to seeing Santa and Mrs. Claus coming to town in nautical New England Christmas fashion — riding into Cohasset Harbor on a lobster boat.

"When they come in on the boat, the crowd goes crazy," said South Shore Community Center program director Paula Murphy. "I didn't realize how special a day it was until I saw the crowds myself."

This happens every year during Cohasset's Jingle Bell Walk. But this year, the event will be missing the Mrs. Claus who has become an institution in Cohasset.

After 16 years of serving the Cohasset community during the Jingle Bell Walk, Mary Brennock is hanging up her costume. Cohasset's own Mrs. Claus spent even longer — six decades — playing the part along-

UPDATE

Finance Dept. makes deadline

However, town has no free cash

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Two days before Thanksgiving, Town Manager Mike Coughlin brought turkeys into Town Hall. The birds were given to members of the finance department, including consultants Dan Sullivan and Eric Kinsherf, who have been working diligently for weeks to certify the town's balance sheet in order to meet a pressing deadline for the Department of Revenue. The deadline for November 22 was an especially difficult one for the finance "team," as Coughlin called them, in light of finance director and town accountant John Stanbrook's resignation last month during what the town manager called "an accounting crisis."

Consultants Sullivan and Kinsherf were brought in, along with a staff member each from their respective firms, to temporarily fill the roles of treasurer collector and finance director and reconcile the town's balance sheet. Kinsherf previously acted as interim finance director/town accountant before Stanbrook was hired last year.

During a special briefing in the Board of Selectmen's office on Tuesday, Nov. 22, the finance department was able to report that they were able to meet the DOR deadline, and would be working into the night to have the balance sheet ready for the following morning.

While the announcement was that the finance department would meet the deadline and appease DOR, meaning the town will be able to hold Special Town Meeting on Dec. 5 and set the tax rate, it was later announced that there will be no free cash to be certified (see sidebar).

Coughlin handed out 10 turkeys during Tuesday's briefing, one for each member of the finance department along with Sullivan and Kinsherf, which the town manager said was not paid for with town funds. He also gave a turkey to his assistant Jennifer Oram, whom he

RED LION INN

Neighbors object to noise

Patio now part of serving area

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Folks have been losing sleep over the Red Lion Inn.

The Board of Selectmen held a public hearing on Nov. 8, which was held over to their Nov. 14 meeting, to consider an application for licensed premises submitted by Cohasset Sarro, Inc./The Red Lion Inn.

The Red Lion Inn owner and shareholders were requesting permission to serve alcohol on the patio and pool areas. The Inn's most recent license, signed in December 2010 and set to expire on Dec. 30, 2011, describes the Inn's premises as the bistro, restaurant, lounge, jazz club, two function facilities and bakery.

Neighbors wrote letters and appeared at the public hearing to express their concerns over allowing more alcohol to be served in a venue that already draws its shares of noise complaints. This is not the first time the local watering hole has been under scrutiny; the Board issued a warning to the Inn during a 2008 hearing after the establishment violated conditions of its liquor license.

During the Nov. 8 selectmen meeting, Police Chief Mark DeLuca described two recent complaints of noise violation: one on June 30, 2011 and another on July 22, 2011.

Neighbors Mike and Rowena Karp and Elizabeth Morrison also

MEETING INFORMATION

Open Meeting Law changes

Last week, Attorney General Martha Coakley's office announced announced new regulations under the state's Open Meeting Law that authorize remote participation in meetings by members of public bodies under certain circumstances.

"The purpose of these new regulations is to promote greater participation in government, while upholding the main purpose of the Open Meeting Law — transparency," Coakley stated. "While in certain extenuating circumstances members of public bodies are permitted to participate remotely, we encourage physical attendance when at all possible."

HOW IT WORKS

The practice of remote participation must be adopted by the chief executive officer of the municipality for local public bodies, or by a majority vote of the public body for state, county and regional public bodies. If remote participation is adopted, members of public bodies may use audio or video conferencing to participate in meetings when physical attendance is unreasonably difficult due to personal illness, personal disability, emergency, military service or geographic distance.

Other requirements of the law stipulate that members of a public body who participate remotely and all persons present at the meeting location must be clearly audible to each other and that when remote participation is used during a meeting, all votes must be taken by roll call.

Although remote participation is now permitted, the Open Meeting Law still requires that a quorum of the public body be physically present at the meeting location.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Public comment period on agenda

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Helene Lieb said that she also allows the public to comment during meetings, answering anyone who raises their hand.

The Cohasset School Committee wants to hear from you, encouraging more public participation at its biweekly Wednesday night meetings.

During the Nov. 16 meeting, the committee discussed adding a public comment period to the meeting agenda. After debating whether this period should be placed first thing on the agenda or saved for the end, the committee decided that having public commentary at the beginning could prevent them from completing their scheduled business.

Committee chair Dr. Helene Lieb made it clear that anyone who would like to speak at a committee meeting can simply call or email her ahead of time to have their topic scheduled as an agenda item (see contact information, below). Lieb said that she also allows the public to comment during meetings, answering anyone who raises their hand.

"It's how I've operated [since becoming chair]," said Lieb. "I'm open to public comment if it's done in a constructive way."

Ultimately, Lieb agreed that the committee could try out a public comment period at the end of the agenda for any items that were not previously mentioned during the meeting and "see how that works."

The consensus between the committee members was to add a public commentary period before the meeting adjourns to address matters that did not appear on the agenda. Lieb said the committee is also going to try to add time slots to the agenda to "have an idea of when certain things will be talked about. It's nice to have that; sometimes it's hard to get a sense of that, but we're going to try, and start instituting that generally."

Lieb encourages folks who would like to add something to a meeting's agenda to get in touch with her at least three days before the school committee meeting. Contact Lieb at 781-383-6950 or email bigred8487@gmail.com.

POLICE BEAT

Driver faces OUI charge (2nd offense)

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

After responding to a two-car accident at 4:48 pm. on Tuesday (Nov. 15) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Crocker Lane, police arrested one of the two operators and charged her with drunken driving.

A 53-year-old Hull woman in a 2004 Jeep Grand Cherokee was headed south on Route 3A when a 2002 Toyota RAV4, operated by a 63-year-old Hull woman, tried to pass her on the right near Crocker Lane and weaved into her, police said.

Police could smell the strong odor of alcohol on the 63-year-old's breath (the woman in the Toyota) and said she failed a series of field sobriety tests. She was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense), negligent operation and passing on the right. There was moderate damage to both cars.

Police said the woman who was arrested was convicted of drunken driving in Quincy District Court in 2004 following an arrest in Weymouth.

Fell from ladder

Cohasset police and OSHA are investigating a construction accident that was reported at 10 a.m. Tuesday (Nov. 22) at a home on Elm Street. Police said a worker, who had footed the ladder on the back deck, fell about 20 to 24 feet when the ladder slipped out from under him. The 31-year-old Springfield man, who sustained serious injuries, was taken to the hospital by Cohasset ambulance.

Housebreak

At 5:44 p.m. on Tuesday (Nov. 15), a 54-year-old Black Rock Road woman reported to police that a pane in her front door was smashed and entry was gained into the home. Jewelry was taken in the larceny that police believe occurred around 2:30 p.m. that day. Detectives are investigating.

Expired license

A 46-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after a registry computer check revealed her driver's license had expired, police said. The woman was operating a 2002 Lexus SUV southbound on King Street (Route 3A) at 3:30 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 14) when she was struck by a 2000 Toyota Camry, operated by a 23-year-old Exeter, N.H., man, who was exiting Avalon to head north (toward Hingham) and failed to yield, police said. The 23-year-old was cited for failure to yield. There were no injuries. The Lexus was towed because the woman's license had expired.

Cruiser mishap

A marked police car sustained minor damage to the front push-bar last week following an accident inside Cohasset Plaza. The officer was on duty when his attention was drawn to the screeching of tires nearby on Sohier Street and he accidentally steered into a light pole, police said. The officer, who had a bump on his head, did not miss any work.

Speeding

Police are increasing patrols around the middle-high school before and after school due to complaints about speeding in the nearby neighborhoods. Police said a 43-year-old man from Norfolk Road has reported one vehicle, in particular, which is a dark blue or black sports coupe, full of kids has been speeding nearly every day.

Elderly driver

At 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 16) cell caller reported being behind a 1996 Dodge Neon on Atlantic Avenue that was traveling very slowly but was all over the road and even driving up onto the sidewalk. Police went to the scene where the Neon had pulled over and the operator, an 80-year-old Scituate man, was waving cars to pull around and pass by him.

He was grateful that police had arrived and explained that he had difficulty seeing at night. The afternoon got dark on him quickly and he was having trouble getting home. The man was given a ride home and his car was towed. Police notified the Registry of Motor Vehicles about his medical condition.

Vandalism

At 7:43 a.m. on Thursday (Nov. 17), an 80-year-old Beechwood Street resident, who lives near Doane Street, reported that his Thanksgiving decorations had been vandalized and a wooden turkey was missing. Vandals also overturned his flowerpots. Police helped the man put the display back together but have no suspects at this time. The wooden turkey is still missing.

Suspended license

A 31-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed for court for operating after license suspension following a rear-end accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at 5:37 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 17). Police said the Scituate man was operating a 2000 Ford pickup south on Route 3A near Pond Street when he started slowing down for the red light and was rear-ended by a 2008 Ford van, operated by a 28-year-old Brockton man. There were no injuries and neither vehicle had to be towed. A computer check revealed the Scituate man's license had been suspended for failure to pay a traffic ticket. Operation of his truck was turned over to his licensed passenger, police said. The Brockton man was issued a citation for following too closely on a state highway.

Drive-off

A 53-year-old Hull man returned to the Mobil Mart on Route 3A to pay a $53 gasoline charge after the clerk reported he drove off without paying at 6:15 p.m. on Thursday (Nov. 17). Police caught up with the 2008 Toyota Highland and the man, who had used a speed pass, returned to pay the bill.

Weeks Act has Cohasset connection

The first large forest protected by the act was the White Mountain National Forest.

On November 2, Bill Weeks and Jim Hamilton presented a slide-illustrated lecture about the Weeks Act at the Appalachian Mountain Club. One hundred years ago the act passed in Congress and was signed by President Taft, which enabled the federal government to purchase private forestland to protect watersheds and protect against forest fires that had devastated clear-cut eastern forests. The first large forest protected by the act was the White Mountain National Forest.

The Appalachian Mountain Club, founded in 1876, was instrumental in helping to raise public awareness that forest preservation was vital for conservation and enjoyment. Since then, over 22 million acres of woodlands throughout the nation have been protected.

Bill Week's grandfather John Wingate Weeks, a US Congressman from Massachusetts, created the legislation named after him and was responsible for its successful passage in spite of strong opposition from conservative party members.

School-parent partnership presentation series

2011-2012 schedule announced

This years' series kicks off with a lecture titled "Managing Stress and Anxiety: Building Resilient Children" presented by Michele Henderson on Wednesday, Nov. 30...

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Each month in the school year since last October, the professional staff behind Cohasset public schools' student services department has held presentations addressing topics related to students of all ages. Called the Parent Professional Partnership series, these presentations give parents a chance to meet with school staff members and discuss issues that affect their children.

"Every month, we offer a presentation given by a variety of staff depending on their area of specialty," said Lisa Iarossi, who works at all three Cohasset schools as an occupational therapist and helps to organize the presentation series. "We try to provide presentations to parents of children of a variety of ages."

The events are open to everyone and, depending on the topic, target children from elementary up to high school. The topics are also timely, dealing with stress and anxiety management around the holidays in late November, "chaos to calm" in January, and MCAS preparation in February.

This is no accident, according to Iarossi: "We try to plan it that way."

This years' series kicks off with a lecture titled "Managing Stress and Anxiety: Building Resilient Children" presented by Michele Henderson on Wednesday, Nov. 30 at the Osgood School Library from 9:15-10:45 a.m. The event locations alternate between the Osgood and Deer Hill libraries. For the full school year's presentation schedule, see sidebar.

Henderson is a licensed independent clinical social worker and has been practicing since 1994. Throughout her professional experience she has always had an interest in working with school systems and focusing on self-care and mental health issues. She received a post-graduate certificate from the Trauma Center in 1997 and continues to offer supervision, consultation and trainings at the Trauma Center and in the Community. With the increasing demands placed on children and families, Henderson has seen an increase in stress and anxiety in her practice and has focused on building strategies and resiliency in children.

Special subcommittee tackles water billing dispute

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During the Nov. 8 Board of Selectmen meeting, when the controversial water billing issue was discussed at length, selectmen chair Ted Carr requested a special committee be formed to delve further into the problems, including indirect overhead allocations being charged to the Water Commission that had little or nothing to do with the water department. The group was to include a member each from the Water Commission, Advisory and Capital Budget committees.

Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio, Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore, and Steve Gaumer and Jack Keniley, chair and vice chair of the Capital Budget Committee, met twice to discuss the allocations.

Calling themselves "the indirect allocation task force," the group addressed the issue that the water department's allocation of indirect town costs was increased from $32,000 to $121,000 for fiscal year 2012; following their first meeting, the group came to an agreement that the appropriate town allocation was $62,000, $59,000 less than the FY '12 budgeted amount.

The decision to increase the budgeted amount to $121,000 "was indeed made without cooperation or agreement from the Water Commissioners," DeCaprio wrote in a Nov. 11 email to the selectmen.

The special committee went "line item by line item" through an allocation spreadsheet, Gaumer explained, and found that "certain line items had no bearing to water."

This includes items that are part of the town manager's appropriation, including the selectmen's secretary salary, and traveling and mileage expenses.

"We examined specific indirect costs and their components and their applicability to the Water Department," DeCaprio wrote in his email. "We sought to determine if costs were duplicative (already paid by the water budget), or services were duplicative (already conducted and expensed by the Water Department) and eliminate any overlap."

The group then looked into actual services and interaction with Town Hall by the enterprise fund, DeCaprio explained, to locate the areas that have no relevance to the water department. For costs with directly associated interaction – town manager, finance treasurer – "we have generally accepted the 12 percent allocation as an accurate reflection of current and expected costs of reliance upon those cost centers," said DeCaprio.

While the group accepted the 12 percent town allocation, "We did not explore how the 12 percent allocation was arrived at in the first place," said Pescatore during the subcommittee's second and final meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 22.

The water department is aware of owing health care retiree costs of around $16,000, said DeCaprio. The line item amount was for $20,000, however, which DeCaprio believes could be an administration cost, although "that seems like a high fee."

Following the brief discussion, the indirect allocation task force voted to approve the minutes from their first meeting and then dissolved the committee.

Settling with the schools

DeCaprio said in a separate interview following the meeting that he met with Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro earlier in the day to discuss the billing issue plaguing the Water Commission and the school department.

The issue has come up during several recent selectmen meetings, with the water department claiming that the schools owed them money, and the school committee countering that they are paid in full and that the water department can no longer conduct interdepartmental billing.

The misunderstanding, said DeCaprio, stemmed from an error in Town Hall concerning the water department's receivables balance.

"The old receivables balance is causing the problem. It's a historic balance; it's not current." DeCaprio wanted to make it clear that "the schools are current on all their bills" from 2008 to 2011. The timetable where the problem occurred is from 2003 to 2008, "a five year period that Town Hall has to help with."

Neither DeCaprio, who came on board as the Water Commission chair last year, nor Dave DeGennaro, who started his position seven years ago, have that information, explained DeCaprio — "We are both blind to it... and need to reconcile those records."

For now, the air has been cleared between the water and school departments.

ConCom calls out big developers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Conservation Commission is holding two big real estate developers accountable for environmental violations.

The past few ConCom meetings have discussed issued fines against both the Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. and the Cook Estates – Abbott Homes – Cohasset, LLC for tripping the town's wetlands bylaw during construction.

Conservation Commissioner Jack Creighton said in a phone interview that these developers "have a tendency to cut corners" in order to complete construction projects quickly. "Avalon Bay was a river of mud" running down 3A, and "Cook Estates did the same thing."

Both developers are guilty of repeated "egregious violations," said associate member Michael Milanoski.

And both developers, according to ConCom members, have been "amenable after the fact."

When the ConCom discussed fining Avalon $25,000, the developer discussed maintaining Cohasset's raingardens as an alternative. The cost of this maintenance, according to town engineer Mark Brennan, is roughly $20,000 a year.

While Avalon Bay was slated to appear at the last ConCom meeting on Thursday, Nov. 17, they asked for more time and would like to come before the commission at their Dec. 15 meeting.

Meanwhile, attorney Richard Henderson and a representative of the Cook Estates came to the Nov. 17 meeting to let the ConCom know that they are working on getting a much-needed signature to file an after the fact notice of intent (NOI).

The story will develop further in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

Sick and Tired...of Being Sick and Tired?

By Elizabeth Johnson

Living in a body that is operating at less than 100% means feeling tired, achy, and/or moody much of the time. It's your body's way of telling you that it wants to be treated nicer. Doing so would only result in a win-win situation for both your mental and physical health.

So the question remains...are you sick and tired of being sick and tired all of the time? And what would it take to change that?

Well...water is a good start. Water is a critical element to all of the body's systems. It certainly takes some planning to ensure you have water with you throughout the day. Here are some examples of strategies that are proven to work: drinking a full glass of water right when you wake up to start your day, choosing water over a regular or diet soda during lunch and dinner, and using a refillable water bottle and trying to fill it up 3 or 4 times throughout the day. Once it becomes a regular habit, you won't be able to imagine how you functioned without sufficient water before.

Another key factor in how you feel physically is how you feel about your self-image. Feeling low and frustrated every time you look in the mirror can bring down your overall health. The flip side, of course, is being confident in your own skin, proud of your body's health and fitness level, and excited to participate in an active lifestyle. Get In Shape For Women can help with all of that. We specialize in helping women transform from the inside - out and develop strong bodies and self-images. If you are sick and tired of feeling sick and tired all of the time, give us a call today!

Current client Jeanne Boulter says, "Get In Shape For Women is one of the best things I ever did for myself. At fifty-six years old, I couldn't do the things I used to do without becoming tired and having aches and pains. Five months after joining GISFW, I feel like a new person. The staff is so caring, knowledgeable and motivating. I actually look forward to working out three times a week. I have lost more than twenty-five pounds and eighteen inches, but more important is how much better I feel!"

Caroline Brinzey is performing in Jose Mateo Ballet Theatre's "The Nutcracker" in the role of a mouse. Caroline joins the professional cast with performances at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, The Sanctuary Theatre in Cambridge and Strand Theatre in Dorchester. Caroline is in the first grade and attends the Joseph Osgood School.

RED CARPET

The sold out 24th annual Boston Music Awards, which featured some of the region's most compelling emerging and established talent, took place at The Liberty Hotel on Sunday, Nov. 20. Pictured at the Red Carpet, Cohasset residents Virginia Awbery and entertainment attorney Howie Altholtz, who has been involved with the awards since nearly their inception.

Now in it's 25th season, José Mateo Ballet Theatre's "The Nutcracker" has become a holiday tradition for New England audiences since 1987. This will be José Mateo Ballet Theatre's sixth return trip to Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

Choreographed by artistic director Mateo, this original production of "The Nutcracker" distinguishes itself from others by its focus on the dancing. Sumptuous sets and costumes and spectacular dancing bring Clara's dream world to life. Dancing snowflakes, battling toy soldiers and waltzing Sugar Plum Fairies make this original "Nutcracker" a delight for children of all ages.

MRS. CLAUS

side her late husband, Henry, spreading Christmas cheer throughout the greater Boston area.

"It's very sad for me," Brennock said of retiring as Mrs. Claus. "I enjoyed every minute I put into it. People referred to us and Mr. and Mrs. Claus a lot; we were just known that way."

"I enjoyed every minute I put into it."
Mary Brennock

It is clear that Brennock's presence will be missed.

"She epitomizes Mrs. Claus," said Elaine Breslow, a friend whose children were babysat by Brennock and dressed as Santa's elves during the Jingle Bell Walk. "And her husband was the best Santa."

"All of us are really sad that Mary is unable to be 'Mrs. Claus,'" said Murphy, "but we plan to honor the Brennock family by continuing this wonderful holiday tradition."

Brennock's tenure as Mrs. Claus began 61 years ago, said Brennock, when her children were little and she and Henry decided to dress up.

"My husband would get dressed up as soon as they went to bed," Brennock recalled. "They were so little, they didn't know it was him."

After a while, requests from neighbors began pouring in, and Brennock and her husband began making house calls as their Christmas characters. The couple began acting as Mr. and Mrs. Claus for school events, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Elks Clubs and church functions from Quincy down to Plymouth. And, Brennock added, Santa and Mrs. Claus always performed for free.

"We never took a penny for it," she said. "We did it for the love of Jesus and what Christmas was meant to be."

Following Henry's passing, Brennock relied on her children and grandchildren to continue the tradition. Her son Daniel and his son Daniel, along with her son-in-law William Taft, have all filled the Santa role a few times.

While Brennock will miss dressing up and playing the part each holiday season (and during a few special "Christmas in July" events in Humarock), her favorite part was sharing her joy with children, seeing "their little faces looking up at Santa."

Brennock made all of the costumes by hand, from the Santa suit to her Mrs. Claus outfit and elf costumes for the children, all of which she has donated to the Community Center. "Mrs. Claus" especially loved leading the children in Christmas carols, Brennock shared.

Being Mrs. Claus "is so much a part of her heart," said Breslow of Brennock. "She is an extraordinary person with a family of her own, but has always treated our kids as if they were her own grandkids... She's the most unselfish person I know."

Like the fabled Mrs. Claus, "You would never know her age," Breslow continued. "She is so youthful and has an insatiable energy, whether creating amazing craft projects, baking or being available as a neighbor or friend... She has a capacity to get things done in a conclusive way."

Breslow added that she is "really sad" to learn of Brennock's retiring from the Mrs. Claus role "because I know what it means to her."

And while her friend feels that Brennock "is so much more than a Mrs. Claus," Breslow said, "She has such a twinkle in her eye. She just knows how to make people happy."

As for putting so many years into making people happy, "It's all about the kids," said Brennock. "It's a magical time of the year."

Jingle Bell Walk is this afternoon

South Shore Community Center, 3 N. Main St., invites everyone to join in the fun at the 17th annual Jingle Bell Walk on Friday, Nov. 25. Festivities will begin at 2 p.m. when Santa and his Elves, along with some special friends, arrive at Cohasset Harbor at Government Island off Border Street via fishing boat. Join the parade and follow Santa's horse-drawn wagon from the Harbor, through Cohasset Village to the Community Center where hot chocolate, coffee, punch and cookies will await.

There will be holiday carols and the Rusty Skippers Band will be there to provide tunes to get everyone into the holiday spirit. Big Ryan the Storyteller will entertain children of all ages and children will be able to create their own holiday ornament to take home. There will also be open bowling for all to enjoy.

Bring cameras because Santa will be available for holiday photos. People can also enjoy their own Holiday Hayride around the Town Common. At dusk there will be a tree lighting on the Common and the holiday season in Cohasset will have officially begun.

Senior golfers enjoy sport, camaraderie

All four have been playing for most of their lives. Together they've got an astounding 224 years of experience on the greens.

Bob Ernst of Cohasset has been playing golf for 70 years. At 96 years young, he still enjoys getting out to the links, weather permitting, with his regular golf partner, Dan Sheehy (81). Ernst and Sheehy, who met during a weekly lunch sponsored by Cohasset Elder Affairs, have been playing together for two years. Recently, the two teamed up with A.J. Antoine (79) and Fay Sargent (77) for a golf foursome. The group had so much fun they have vowed to continue playing together at Scituate Country Club.

The four men discovered their mutual passion for the game over a cup of coffee and home baked sweets at Cohasset Café, a spring and fall gathering for seniors, sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Elders. All four have been playing for most of their lives. Together they've got an astounding 224 years of experience on the greens.

As kids, Antoine and Sargent competed in baseball, when "The Cove," "Beechwood," "West Side" and "Hillside" used to play at Beechwood Ball Field. They transitioned their competition to golf when their children were students together at Cohasset High School. They have been playing together for 30 years. Antoine and Sargent were delighted to connect with two other senior golfers who share their enthusiasm for the game.

Sheehy, who started playing golf in Japan when he was in the Navy as a young man, worked as a starter and a ranger for South Shore Country Club after he retired. Ernst was once a "super senior" golf champion at Scituate Country Club, and prides himself on the two "plus" holes-in-one he achieved over his career. "Two were in regular competition," he says. "The 'plus' was during practice."

As much as they all love golf though, the three friends agree, this story is about Ernst. Antoine says, "He's 96 years old and he keeps smiling, he keeps practicing, he keeps swinging. He thanks us for playing, but we want to thank him. He's amazing." Ernst says he started golfing because it was a game he could play alone. "I was from Ohio, going to school in New York and I didn't know anyone. There are few sports you can play by yourself."

Seventy years later, he doesn't have to play alone. Thanks to his ongoing enthusiasm and connections forged via Cohasset Elder Affairs, his new golf buddies can't wait to get him out there for another game.

Osgood School celebrates Family Literacy Month

Families flock to book fair, 'Pajama Night'

Despite rainy and chilly weather, students came to school clad in their pajamas and slippers, with stuffed animals and umbrellas in tow.

Going to school at nighttime might not be the typical kid's idea of a good time, but the opposite seemed to be true during Osgood School's evening literacy event. It was one occasion, at least, where wearing pajamas to school was allowed.

On Thursday, Nov. 17, parents and students milled throughout the elementary school, roaming around the book fair to purchase Christmas presents or books for teachers' classrooms and popping into the library for story time with a few special guests.

Despite rainy and chilly weather, students came to school clad in their pajamas and slippers, with stuffed animals and umbrellas in tow.

While the Parent School Organization (PSO) puts on a book fair twice throughout the school year, this special event marked the first time the school has also held a "pajama night" at the same time. Putting the two together was the brainchild of Principal Sharon Bellao, said Cohasset PSO president Jenni Milanoski.

"When Mrs. Bellao came on as Principal, she told us about this event," Milanoski said of pajama night. "It's a real family event for parents and students together to celebrate the love and importance of reading."

While the event commemorated the state's 15th annual Family Literacy Month, it also contributed directly to Cohasset educational programs.

"The funds go right back into the school for curriculum enrichment," said Milanoski. "That's the main goal of the PSO — to maximize students' education experience."

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, dressed in pink patterned pajamas with matching striped socks, read "Bedtime for Bear" to pre-school and kindergartners in the library.

The event, said Cataldo, "creates a real sense of community for the families, all under one roof. This is Family Literacy Month, and it incorporates spirit of what trying to teach kids about reading — helping kids learn to love to read."

Cataldo told the school committee during their previous night's meeting, "Reading is close to my heart, having learned to read late in life and loving reading now."

Lisa Nisbet, parent of second grader Kevin, said that the special story time was "very sweet to give [the students] an intimate connection with the principal. Seeing the kids in pajamas is really cute; Kevin was excited about it."

Nisbet asked her son,

PAJAMA NIGHT

"Don't you wish you could come to school in your pajamas every day?"

"It has to be pajama day some day," Kevin replied.

Downstairs, parents could attend an informational presentation on parenting strategies to help their children learn to love reading, including tips on reading to kids and having a family reading night. The book fair was happening just down the hall, and while the activity slowed down as the event reached its end at 7 p.m., the area had been buzzing all afternoon.

"It was a madhouse here," said parent volunteer Whitney Newman of the book fair. "This is one of the biggest PSO fundraisers, and it's really successful. The proceeds of the books kids buy goes straight into [school] fundraising."

Patty Cunningham, vice president of the Deer Hill PSO, added that the event is always well attended, and is "a good place to find Christmas presents."

"It's a great, fun event for everyone," said Milanoski, as well as "a good 'win' for the schools."

Timothy Donovan looks a little bit pensive before the start of story time at the Osgood School on Thursday.

Grace Rogers, 4, hugs her pillow pet while waiting for the start of story time.

OUR VIEW

First Thanksgiving

"Would you please pass the furmity, Governor?"

"You boiled it just right in the pipkin, Mary."

"I'll have a little more aqua vita, Susanna."

It's possible the conversation went a bit like this that first Thanksgiving Day in Plimoth so many years ago.

About 140 people sat at the three-day harvest: 90 Indians and 50 Pilgrims.

If you happen to be the cook and you think that you worked hard on Thursday, keep in mind that at the first Thanksgiving, only four women did all the cooking.

They roasted wildfowl, turkeys, and deer in English fashion. They boiled cod and sea bass in Indian tradition.

They cooked breads and fruit tarts in a skillet over an open fire.

For dessert, they made furmity by beating wet wheat in a sack with a washbeetle, boiling it overnight, soaking it on a fire, boiling it in cream in a pipkin, then topping it with sugar.

Their guests were not worried about their cholesterol level or the fat content in the food.

They ate to their hearts' content and then washed it all down with beer called aqua vita.

They scooped food from wooden bowls with their hands.

There were knives and a few spoons, but no forks.

Huge napkins were very important.

It was a whole year after the Pilgrims first put their tattered boots on Plymouth Rock before the first Thanksgiving.

Their tiny and overcrowded Mayflower had tossed like a toy boat upon the fierce Atlantic waves for two months.

Their trip had been stormy and long.

Their arrival was dismal and discouraging.

The first winter saw more than half their number starve or freeze to death.

Their first harvest was a disaster, but in the second year, with the help of the Indians, their fields bore fruit.

Instead of saying "It's about time, God," they thanked Him for His blessing.

It is now over three and a half centuries later.

We went a-hunting in a well-stocked supermarket and speared our frozen turkey with icy fingers.

Instead of checking our meat for arrowheads, we read the labels for the fat and MSG content.

Instead of cooking herbs and roots for days, we might pop a pouch of peas in boiling water.

Instead of skillet baked bread, we might brown and serve some rolls.

Instead of beating wet wheat for furmity, we heated up a pre-baked apple pie.

But the warmth of Thanksgiving is still the same.

We asked nothing more from it than a Skippers win over the Hull Pirates in the morning, a perfect turkey dinner with a loving family in the afternoon, and a feeling of contentment with life in the evening.

We need the peace of Thanksgiving more than ever in these troubled times.

A stronger measure than a gavel might be in order to control order at selectmen and water commission meetings

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for making a difference

On behalf of the PSO and Cohasset Elder Affairs, we would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to all those who participated in this year's Make a Difference Day this past weekend. There are simply too many people to thank individually. Families and students ranging from preschool to high school enjoyed the beautiful weather while assisting senior residents in the raking and disposal of leaves and lawn clean-up.

We have received such glowing feedback from residents on the positive attitudes and exceptional job performed by all the volunteers. We appreciate their commitment and sense of community pride. Thank you as well to our sponsor Aubuchon Hardware for their generous support of this event.

COMMENTARY

Carbon monoxide awareness

MARK TRASK

The best solution is for you to equip your house with carbon monoxide detectors to ensure your safety.

If I told you there was a killer sneaking through your house would you be nervous? If I told you this killer can travel noiselessly, sight unseen, would I have your attention? If I told you this killer can remorselessly kill you, and snuff out the lives of your children, would there be a level of nervousness? This killer has a record, and despite its murderous capabilities we have never been able to avoid its deadly clutches. Who is this buzzard, mercilessly circling? He is known worldwide and locally as Mr. Carbon Monoxide.

If you saw smoke in your house would your adrenaline kick in and lead you to take immediate action? We know smoke is associated with fire and we know uncontrolled fire can have serious and deadly consequences. What about this devil we cannot see or smell. It makes no sound and accumulates in places we revere most as our place of refuge, our home. How does he get in? How does he travel? What can we do versus this menace?

Carbon monoxide is a product of combustion. It is produced by any device or process that uses an open flame.

Flames produced by boilers, furnaces, ranges, stoves, heaters are harnessed by the systems in which they perform work for us and are safely escorted out of our living space and into the outdoors. Stovepipes, flues, chimney and exhaust fans work to keep us safe. Gasoline and diesel automobiles and trucks spew carbon monoxide in large amounts. Combustion engines such as lawnmowers, snow blowers, power washers, leaf blowers and powered yard equipment all produce carbon monoxide. Charcoal grills, fueled space heaters, and even that beautiful stainless steel grill give off the deadly gas.

Each and every machine that produces carbon monoxide is designed to safely eliminate carbon monoxide provided it is well maintained or used in a proper manner. When a machine or piece of equipment fails to operate properly or is used in an improper location trouble is right around the corner. Consider the oil burner, which because of the lack of cleaning and maintenance, suffers a delayed ignition, essentially a fuel oil vapor explosion, which can dislodge the smoke pipe from the chimney. Smoke, carbon monoxide and other products of combustion flow into the cellar and on up into the house. Consider the gas furnace that has developed corrosion on the smoke pipe and combustion products draft into the house instead of up the chimney. Consider the lawnmower running in the garage while the home mechanic seeks to get it running perfectly before the spring season. These and countless other scenarios are the conspirators with Mr. Carbon Monoxide letting him into your home.

The key factor is for the carbon monoxide to accumulate and build up in a closed space. No problem you're thinking? How about your super tight, well insulated, super glazed windows, airlock doors? No cold air in and no warm air out. No ventilation to relieve any accumulation of carbon monoxide and therein lies the problem.

What is the solution you are thinking by now? You know you have read about unfortunate instances of injury and death associated with this menace and it's time for you to take action. The best solution is for you to equip your house with carbon monoxide detectors to ensure your safety. Carbon monoxide detectors look very similar to smoke detectors and are available in a variety of selections. Some are battery powered and some are plug-in types. Others can be wired into your house security system for the best coverage. Carbon monoxide detectors – or CO detectors as they are known – have a sensing element. The CO detector samples the air continuously during its lifetime and sounds an alarm if elevated carbon monoxide levels are sensed.

Installation of carbon monoxide detectors follows a few simple rules. (1) There should be at least one CO detector on each inhabited level of your house; and (2) There should be a CO detector within 10 feet of each separate bedroom location. Frequently one detector can satisfy multiple location requirements.

Carbon monoxide detectors are available at local and national hardware and lumber establishments. CO detectors systems are available through your security system installer.

MAKING TRACKS

'Smart' side of tide gate system

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

These water levels as well as the position of the gate are continuously evaluated by the PLC. When any of these sensors reaches predetermined values, the gate is open or closed according to its PLC program.

More on the Jacobs Meadow — Previously, we described the power side of the Jacobs Meadow Tide Gate control cabinet. This week we'll talk about the "smart" side of the system. Its main component is called a Programmable Logic Controller or as it is known in the trade, a PLC. You can think of a PLC as a specialized computer that holds all of the logic rules that tell the gate what to do based on data received from the tide gate and two water level sensors, one in the channel and the other in the harbor. These water levels as well as the position of the gate are continuously evaluated by the PLC. When any of these sensors reaches predetermined values, the gate is open or closed according to its PLC program.

So what exactly is the gate designed to do? Well, it has three basic modes of operation. The first, oddly enough, is called "Normal" mode. This mode will be in use most of the time. It allows Jacobs Meadow to empty of fresh water and allows a limited amount of salt water to flow back up into the meadow. This will help re-establish a healthy salt marsh. The amount of water permitted to flow back into the meadow can be adjusted from the control panel settings. The next mode of operation is "Storm" mode. Storm mode allows the maximum water to drain from the meadow to the harbor. Whenever the harbor level is below the channel, the gate will be open so the channel and the meadow can drain. Whenever the harbor is higher than the channel, the gate will close so no water can flow into the meadow. Storm mode is very useful when heavy rain is expected and the water level in Jacobs Meadow must be kept as low as possible to minimize any possible flooding of the surrounding properties.

The last mode is "Manual" mode. In this mode the operator can select any gate position, in 25 percent increments, from fully open to fully closed. The gate will just go to the selected position and stay there until changed by the operator. This mode will generally not be used unattended, only for supervised operation by the town personnel. In addition to automatic operation, there are other ways that the gate can be operated under conditions of power failure.

We are very pleased with the added volume of water that can be drained from the meadow with the new channel and gate. The system performance will be a real benefit to the town when we have abnormally high rainfall and in the restoration of the salt marsh. We have learned to "never say never," but the chances for flooding in Jacobs Meadow should be significantly reduced. And, we should start to see reduced phragmites growth around the edge of the James Brook in the coming years.

A bit more solar energy in Cohasset — Last week we talked about the potential project to develop a potential solar energy source for the town on our closed landfill on Cedar Street. The basic idea is that a private developer can take economic advantage of the various incentives which allows them to provide a guaranteed source of "clean" energy at lower than market costs. As we mentioned, Scituate has already awarded a contract to a developer to construct a solar energy project on their closed landfill. A critical part of Scituate's project was to be able to lease the landfill to a developer so that they can construct and operate a solar electrical generation facility. The lease, to be of maximum benefit for both the developer and the town, must be for an extended period, say 20 years, or so. The same would be true for Cohasset. We must be prepared to offer a prospective developer a long-term lease for the landfill site.

Here's where you come in to play for Cohasset's potential project. A long-term lease of town property can only be done with Town Meeting approval. Thus, if you look at the Warrants mailed to each home last week, Article 13 asks for Town Meeting to approve such a lease. Approval of this article does not mean that the project will definitely go forward. But, this solar project can never go forward without Town Meeting lease approval. If you want to be heard regarding Cohasset's money-saving solar energy project, this is another good reason for you to participate in the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting.

There is another similar project that will be discussed at the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting. The Cohasset School Department is also working on a project to add solar generation on the roof of the Middle-High School building. As a point of information a number of school systems in Massachusetts have already constructed similar solar projects. Among them are Milton, Medway and Norwell. Our project would lease the rooftop to a developer for a prolonged period of time, like town landfill project. So it should be no surprise that the school needs Town Meeting approval for such a lease. In fact, Article 12 of the Special Town Meeting asks for your approval of this lease.

Choo choo news flash: As we've mentioned before, Greenbush rail service has been suspended during weekends due to a weekend railroad tie replacement program taking place between Braintree and Boston on the weekends. However, during the entire Thanksgiving holiday the trains will be run. That is, Greenbush train service will be provided from Thursday, Nov. 24, through Sunday, Nov. 27.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Give 'thanks' a chance

GLENN MANGURIAN

There are only two countries in the world, Canada and the United States, where there is a national holiday to give thanks. Imagine that – only two countries. We are fortunate in Hingham to live less than 20 miles from the site of the original Thanksgiving in 1621.

Thanksgiving has evolved from a celebration of harvest to a time for family reunions, high school football rivalries and feasting on turkey, stuffing, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie. But more important than the food and the football, it is a time to interrupt our fast paced lives and give thanks to all that we have. Yes, I understand that the economy is weak, people are out of work and we continue at war. But maybe we can take time to celebrate the abundance in our lives.

There is much that we have and take for granted. It's time to give thanks for those things that enrich our lives. While we may each have a unique list, there are a few items that we can celebrate together:

- Our Founding Fathers – for the wisdom to declare that all men are created equal with a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, thank you.
- Our Ancestors – for their struggle to leave a far away place with the hope of a better life for themselves and their children, thank you.
- Our Parents – for their love and commitment that instilled the values we practice today, thank you.
- Our Teachers – for creating a caring and safe environment to learn, acquire knowledge and become responsible adults, thank you.
- Our Soldiers – for protecting us and our way of life, thank you.
- Our Spouses – for the love, understanding and patience that make our lives whole, thank you.
- Our Public Stewards – for working to make an imperfect democracy more perfect, thank you.
- Our Children – for the gift of life, vitality and optimism, thank you.
- Our Neighbors, Friends and Fellow Citizens – for the countless people we encounter every day who offer a smile or an act of kindness when no one asks, thank you.

If we can be thankful one day, maybe we can try a second day. And if we can be thankful two days, maybe we can try a third. And, if we can do three days – well, you get the idea. Because all I am saying is give "thanks" a chance.

Happy Thanksgiving!

To grandparents house we go!

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
Special to the Mariner

What can be more wonderful than celebrating this Feast of Thanks, for all we have and received through the past year – together with grandparents and parents?

Over the river and through the woods to Grandfather's house we go...

When November begins, we remember this well known song, which promises us: Thanksgiving is near.

The words were written by Lydia Maria Child and were first published in November 1976. They remain just the same, taken to our time, when I change them to... "Over the highway, and endless road, to Grandparents house we go..."

And there we are – on the day before Thanksgiving my four grandchildren, with their parents start from Cohasset just after school ended, for the long trip to Buffalo, N.Y., where their grandparents lived.

What can be more wonderful than celebrating this Feast of Thanks, for all we have and received through the past year – together with grandparents and parents? Celebrating these unforgettable special moments? Knowing-for sure, there is Grandmother waiting, to embrace the family. She has prepared tasty meals and food to pamper them all after a long time of separation. Would she serve red cabbage again, which always accompanies the brown roasted turkey, serve the crisp rolls and crusty bread from the German bakery in Buffalo? And would there be a visit to Brennan's Pub all together, where the authentic Buffalo wings are served?

The first connection via email is made shortly after departing Cohasset. "When did you start – how is the traffic – fresh snow is falling in Buffalo..." Hearing this the kids in the car burst into shouts of delight.

Many quick emails are exchanged and help to entertain during the monotonous drive. After hours it becomes quiet for a long time, when nearly everyone besides the driving father is asleep. However excitement arises again, coming closer and closer to the much longed for destination.

Then the Grandmother reads the last email, "...still 10 minutes to Buffalo..." She is suddenly reminded of the well-known poem "John Maynard" written in 1885 by the German poet Theodor Fontane. Nearly the same words, "Still 15 minutes to Buffalo."

Yet, this last email is like the ringing of an alarm clock! The action begins in Buffalo! Grandfather lights the large fireplace and in addition many candles. In the kitchen, last preparations take place. The dining room table is set in all its glory – a large silver bowl in the center, filled with colorful autumn flowers. Long curvy garlands of dark-green ivy decorate the white tablecloth, which is shining in competition with the silverware. Bowls are filled with grapes, figs and varieties of brown nuts.

But then-waiting-waiting. Spying out through the window in the darkness of the cold night, where the white snow glistens in the outdoor light. Finally – a car is slowly pulling into the driveway – so late at night! And they all climb out of the car after a long time sitting. The grandchildren with pale faces, eyes wide open, like just taken out of sleep, stumbling through the snow to enter the festive lightened house. The fire is roaring and the wood is cracking in the fireplace and the candles are glowing on the tables. A delicious smell of cooking dishes drifts through the air, and there are the expected warm welcoming hugs from Grandfather and Grandmother. An embracing welcome, I believe only a grandmother can give.

After a while when everyone has taken his seat at the table, Grandmother appears with the traditional hot beef soup containing big hunks of beef, green leeks, celery and carrots. Crisp rice and crusty bread is served along side of it. But before serving there is silence for a short time, when Grandmother thanks the Lord for a safe trip and arrival of the family and expresses the joy to have everyone together united at the table. Then, suddenly the children's cheeks become rosy-red and their eyes and mood lightens visibly.

Was it the hot soup? Or was it caused by the feelings of warmth and satisfaction? I knew in this moment the four grandchildren will never forget in their long lives these moments of cheerfulness and happiness surrounded by their family – all together in expectation of the celebration of Thanksgiving.

FOR THE RECORD

Another violation of trust

GREGORY MATHIS

This is a sad reminder for parents of how difficult it has become to keep our kids safe. The circle of trust keeps getting smaller and smaller.

As this disturbing story continues to unfold hundred of miles away in State College, Pa., its impact can be felt on many different levels all across the country, and locally.

The arrest of former longtime Penn State University football defensive coach Jerry Sandusky on charges that he sexually assaulted at least eight boys over a 15-year period has created a firestorm at one of the most prestigious college football programs in the country.

There's much more to this story than the firing of legendary head coach Joe Paterno, the inconsistency of Mike McQueary's story about what he did or didn't do when he witnessed Sandusky allegedly raping a young boy in the shower at Penn State, and the colossal collapse of the chain of command throughout the university in dealing with the scandal.

But this isn't a cautionary tale that begins and ends at Penn State.

It's another wakeup call that dangerous sexual predators are lurking out there in places we might never expect.

On the surface, Sandusky was a well-respected mentor to young men, coach at a prestigious institution who at one time was believed to be Joe Pa's successor and founder of a seemingly worthy and admirable program for at-risk children. If the allegations prove true — and the evidence supporting the charges is both comprehensive and disturbing — beneath the surface this man is a monster.

This is a sad reminder for parents of how difficult it has become to keep our kids safe. The circle of trust keeps getting smaller and smaller.

As a parent and longtime youth sports coach, I find this scandal both sickening and disheartening. I pretty much have to tell my soon-to-be 13-year-old stepson to trust no one. Imagine going through life wary of every adult you come in contact with? It might be a bit of an overreaction, but what are the alternatives?

Ask the boys who were victimized by a man they trusted.

As a former youth sports coach spanning many years, I wanted parents and their children to know they could trust me.

Coaches at all levels are in a position of power and trust, but cases like this continue to erode the level of trust any parent might have for any coach, or any other adult in their child's life, for that matter. Youth sports coaches and anyone interested in volunteering at a school these days needs to go through a CORI (Criminal Offender Record Information) check, which is a good idea, but only works for catching people who have already been in trouble. Sandusky was allegedly preying on young boys for 15 years or more before being caught. Think of the hurtful physical and psychological damage done in that time span.

But in today's world, those who chose to volunteer for the benefit our youth will come under closer scrutiny because of scandals like Penn State, which are happening far too often. And it hits close to home each time.

RED LION

appeared before the board to voice their complaints.

Attorney Richard Henderson represented the Inn during both hearings.

After deliberation during the two meetings and a site visit on Saturday, Nov. 12, the board determined that alcohol should not be allowed in the pool area, but did agree to extend the premises to the patio so long as drinks are served only in conjunction with food. They also reminded manager Gerard Galligan that the area must be better policed and that the Inn should explore better fencing and soundproofing options.

Liquor violation

Jennifer Crane, assistant to the Town Manager, reported the Red Lion had sent beverages in see if they were allowed to serve alcohol in the pool and patio area. Henderson told the board that the Inn believed that these areas were part of the premises where serving liquor was allowed.

Crane's memo revealed the following:

- A Coughlin review failed in line with the restaurant to have and serve liquor applies to the extension of premises to include the pool area.
- A public hearing was held on July 11, 2011, continued to August 8 and September 12, to consider the request to extend the premises to include the pool area. The request was withdrawn per the request of the Red Lion Inn, and no action was taken.
- It was suggested in July 2011 letter to Galligan that Cohasset Select Bd. & Bd. of the Red Lion Inn file an application for an extension of premises request-ing to add the patio and pool area to the premises.

Noise complaints

The board received a letter from Michael and Rowena Karp, dated Nov. 1, 2011, complaining that the "noise from [outdoor] people attending these functions is greatly disturbing."

The letter continued that weddings and functions are held outdoors only a few feet from their house and they are forced to deal with hearing dozens of people and cars coming and going at all hours."

The two came before the board on Nov. 8 to elaborate on their complaint.

Michael Karp said he was not in favor of allowing alcohol in the back patio and pool areas, whereas allowing it in the front doesn't give me too much heartburn."

The noise in the back, however, is something Michael and his wife "deal with constantly."

"I know firsthand just how noisy it is... Voices get louder as people get [drunker]," Michael explained. "In August, they had a three-piece jazz band playing 'When the Saints Go Marching In.' It was booming in my house... There is not supposed to be live or recorded music in the back."

His wife Rowena said that they often end up with beer bottles on their lawn after events.

"There is enough alcohol served over there," she said. "I know it's a big moneymaker, but it's going to be a big party zone back there. I feel we have enough to worry about; our daughter can't sleep at night."

Rowena added, "We don't want place to turn into Marina Bay."

Elizabeth Morrison, who has been renting on South Main Street for two months, told the board that she is concerned about noise and cigarette smoke, and is tired, too, of collecting beer bottles in her yard.

Rowena shared that she also deals with the secondhand smoke from patrons lighting up in the parking lot: "I smell the smoke in my kitchen."

When Selectman Leland Jenkins asked Rowena about fencing between the Karps' home and the Inn, Rowena said that the Inn's wooden stockade fence is "flimsy."

"We had to put in our own landscaping to try to block [the noise] out," Rowena explained.

Jean Healy Dippold and Alexander Dippold also submitted a letter, dated Nov. 6, 2011. Although the pair moved to Washington, D.C., they continue to own and rent a home on South Main Street abutting the Inn's parking lot and pool area.

The Dippolds were concerned that extending the area where the Inn can serve liquor would be a privilege that will soon be abused, "as has occurred in the past" and that this abuse "will detrimentally affect" the neighbors.

"While most of the Red Lion Inn's guests have been respectful, we are concerned because there has been a significant amount of drunken Red Lion guests that have negatively impacted our property, and our enjoyment thereof," the Dippolds wrote. "Increasing the amount of drinking would only increase that impact."

Like the Karps, the Dippolds shared that the only barrier between their home and the Inn is the "deteriorating" wooden stockade fence, over which inebriated guests have the tendency to throw their beer bottles, which then end up in the neighbors' shrubbery.

The Dippolds concluded their letter emphasizing their worry that "further enabling guests to drink and expanding the zone in which they drink will only increase the risk to our property and peace, particularly given the minimal property barriers."

Board concerns

Taking neighbors complaints into account, the selectmen were quick to express their concerns over the suggested changes to the liquor and entertainment licenses.

"I'm reluctant to approve the back area [patio]," said Selectman Diane Kennedy. "I see it as a whole other venue. We love to promote a healthy business area down there; I'm anxious to continue the discussion but am concerned over that area."

Selectman Paul Carlson suggested that there should be different perimeters set for places like the Red Lion Inn, as opposed to other restaurants that are not so close to residents. Perhaps, Carlson said, "restriction areas could be vacated at certain times."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin weighed in, suggesting a time cut-off for serving alcohol and setting reasonable conditions dealing with the outside areas.

"You could limit it; stop serving outside areas at 7 or 8 to quiet things down," said Coughlin. "It's not going to abate all worries, but it could help balance things."

Jenkins pointed out "the distinction between serving and drinking. Just because you've stopped serving" liquor does not mean patrons are through consuming it, heightening the noise factor for the neighbors. "They could bring drinks from inside" to the patio area, said Jenkins.

Coughlin said that controlling the premises with a distinct fenced-in area could help protect the establishment and provide a better barrier for the neighbors.

"I think a happy balance could be worked out," Coughlin said.

Following the board's site visit to the Inn, Carr told Henderson during the Nov. 14 meeting that he was still concerned about the back patio.

"It hasn't been policed well historically... If improvements are made, we could discuss it later, but you've got to do something to limit the sound," Carr said.

"Cops tell us there's audible noise all hours of the night...of people congregating there," said Carlson. "It's not what people want to live next to; people need a good night's sleep."

While expressing that the problem is "better than it was," Henderson agreed to working with the board on finding a solution.

The Red Lion Inn is "a vital place of the economy of the Village," said Carr. "But the neighbors have the right to have a say, too... Karp and the other neighbors made eloquent case for their needs."

The board ultimately approved the extension of the definition of the Inn's premises to include the outdoor patio only.

DEADLINE

called the "gatekeeper" of Town Hall.

The briefing was not a televised meeting, but the room was packed with the finance department members, along with a few selectmen and other interested parties from the Water Commission, Advisory and Capital Budget committees.

Coughlin wanted to "point out what a job this has been" for the finance department. "We've been faced with unprecedented financial issues and put together an aggressive timetable" to meet the DOR deadline.

The town manager went on to say that the folks were coming in on weekends, "pulling double duty" to get the job done.

Coughlin told the crowd that the department "accomplished all the objectives," such as getting the balance sheet ready to be submitted to DOR to "gain their confidence," which means that the town can go forward with Special Town Meeting and set the tax rate. To do so, however, the "team" would be "burning the midnight oil" that night.

After commending the finance staff for dealing with a problem that was "consistently underestimated" and "deeper than anyone thought," Coughlin turned the discussion over to Sullivan and Kinsherf to delve into where, exactly, they were in the process of sorting out the town's finances.

"It's a work in progress," said Kinsherf, adding that they could not yet pass out the balance sheet for public viewing.

When Coughlin interjected that they probably could hand it out, Sullivan quickly objected. "I'm uncomfortable," he said. "It's not done."

And while Kinsherf reported that the good news is the balance sheet is all set for the three town funds of water, sewer and the general fund, there is also some bad news — the town is not going to have any free cash available from fiscal year 2011 to appropriate at Special Town Meeting.

The crowd immediately wanted to know why there would be no free cash. Sullivan explained that there is $800,000 in deficits in the funds, the largest of which is a $684,000 in sewer.

"The cash flow deficit in the sewer Little Harbor projects prevents us from being able to certify free cash," Sullivan explained.

Capital Budget vice chair Jack Keniley wondered why the finance staff had to rush to meet DOR's deadline, when the town will not receive free cash anyway. "Is this something we absolutely have to do?"

Sullivan and Kinsherf both explained that they could submit the balance sheet for water, sewer and the general fund because they were comfortable with the numbers.

"DOR won't certify anything, but at least it will be in," said Kinsherf of the balance sheet.

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer surmised that this issue "sounds to me to be a structural management issue, not an accounting issue."

Keniley asked the two consultants, "How bad are our books, compared to other towns in the state, on a scale of one to 10 — one being bad, 10 being good?"

Kinsherf said, "One and a half."

This caused a murmur to go through the crowd.

Keniley directed another question to the consultants about the new software implementation that was supposed to happen in the finance department. The process has been stalled over the past few months as the town has dealt with the mess in the finance department. Coughlin said during previous Board of Selectmen meetings that he felt the implementation should wait until the DOR deadline was met and a new finance director is hired.

Coughlin deflected Keniley's question, saying that he set the meeting up as a briefing, not a place to discuss the SoftRight issue.

"This is a mistake," said Keniley.

Coughlin countered that Keniley was being disrespectful. "The most pressing problem we have in this town is the respect for department heads and employees."

"You're obscuring the issues with ad hominum attacks," said Keniley. "This is an emergency; it has been for a year, and it's not being resolved."

Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio joined the fray, saying that he didn't get why the implementation would take so long. "What will it take to get it implemented as soon as possible? Do we need more bodies? I'm just asking."

"Adding personnel is not going to resolve this," Coughlin answered.

Keniley challenged the town manager, "I'll bet you $1,000 that [the implementation] can be done in four weeks."

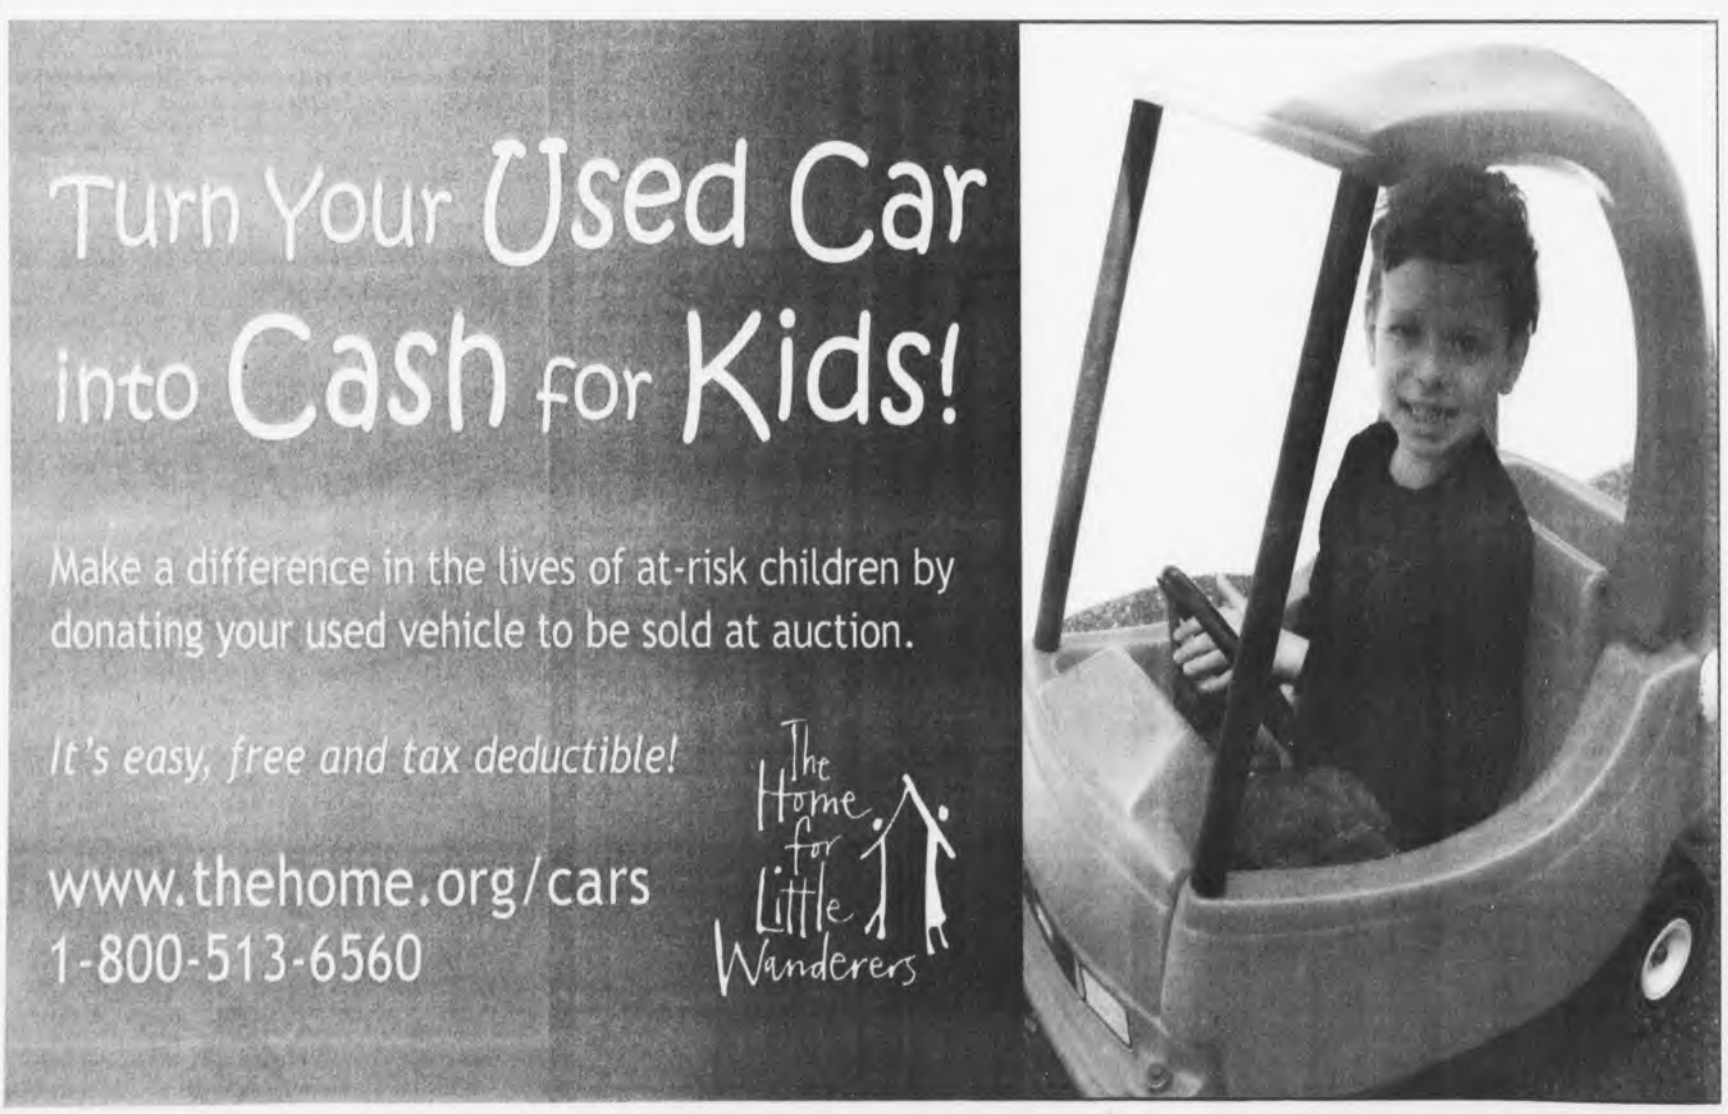
"The only thing I'm betting on is the Hull [football] game," Coughlin responded.

While Sullivan admitted that the software implementation could not be done with current amount of personnel in the finance department and that the town will need to hire outside help, he did not believe the software is the issue.

"I don't think bringing in new software will solve the problems," Sullivan said. The crux of the issue, the consultant explained, is that Cohasset has not had continuity with its full-time finance director. "You haven't had a town accountant all year — you've had three people... More efficient software can help, but it isn't the end all, be all."

The problem, Keniley opined, is that Town Hall "has had no policies or procedures for years."

Though the mood in the room had soured, the town manager wished folks a happy Thanksgiving and attempted to end the night on an upbeat note.



Coughlin told the anxious crowd that while there is no free cash for FY '11, the town has the ability to make cuts to the budget in FY '12 – including saving money in the police and fire departments for open positions that were never filled – and that the town was still on track to have a $300,000 surplus in the general fund.

Explaining 'Free Cash'

According to the Municipal Finance Glossary at Mass.Gov, a town's "free cash" is the amount of funds that are unrestricted and available for appropriation. Once certified, these funds may be used to support supplemental appropriations during the year or during Town Meeting to fund the next year's budget.

Free cash is generated when the actual revenue collections are more than the budget estimates, and when expenditures and encumbrances (unpaid bills and orders) are less than appropriations, or both.

While free cash provides municipalities with a certain flexibility after the yearly budget has been adopted and the tax rate has been set, it can only be used after the certification process is complete. Free cash is certified by the Bureau of Accounts following the town's submission of its balance sheet.

HEALTH NOTES

Gearing up for holiday season

STEVE BOBO

Health often suffers through overindulgence as well as less rigorous routines related to weight, exercise and conditioning. And once certain practices such as daily walks or routine exercise are abandoned, it's sometimes not easy to resurrect past practices.

Ramp up for the holidays — Now is the time to get ready for the holidays. As the season approaches, the shops are preparing; sales are being planned, etc. This is the time to get ready with lists; friends, relatives sorted out as to wants; needs, attention each requires so that at the very first sign of holiday activity, you'll be ready with a plan to solve the thoughts, wishes and gifts needed. Not necessarily dealing with specifics; just be prepared for the coming holiday mood.

Further, as we approach the holidays, life seems to get more intense; tempers flare; programs seem to be crowded together and free time seems to disappear. It's true that the to do list seems to grow longer; chores are forgotten and the routine seems to become distorted. One sample is the use of a term becoming a part of our vocabulary 'Black Friday' words once first used to describe the 1929 Wall Street crash of that year. Thankfully, perhaps, the term now has a more pleasant connotation. We'll not address the conversion of the Holiday season from a substantially religious function to one which, for many, substantially lacking in religious significance. In few other places is it more necessary to distinguish religious and secular practice. Nevertheless, such a celebration, necessary at year's end, has long been a part of our heritage.

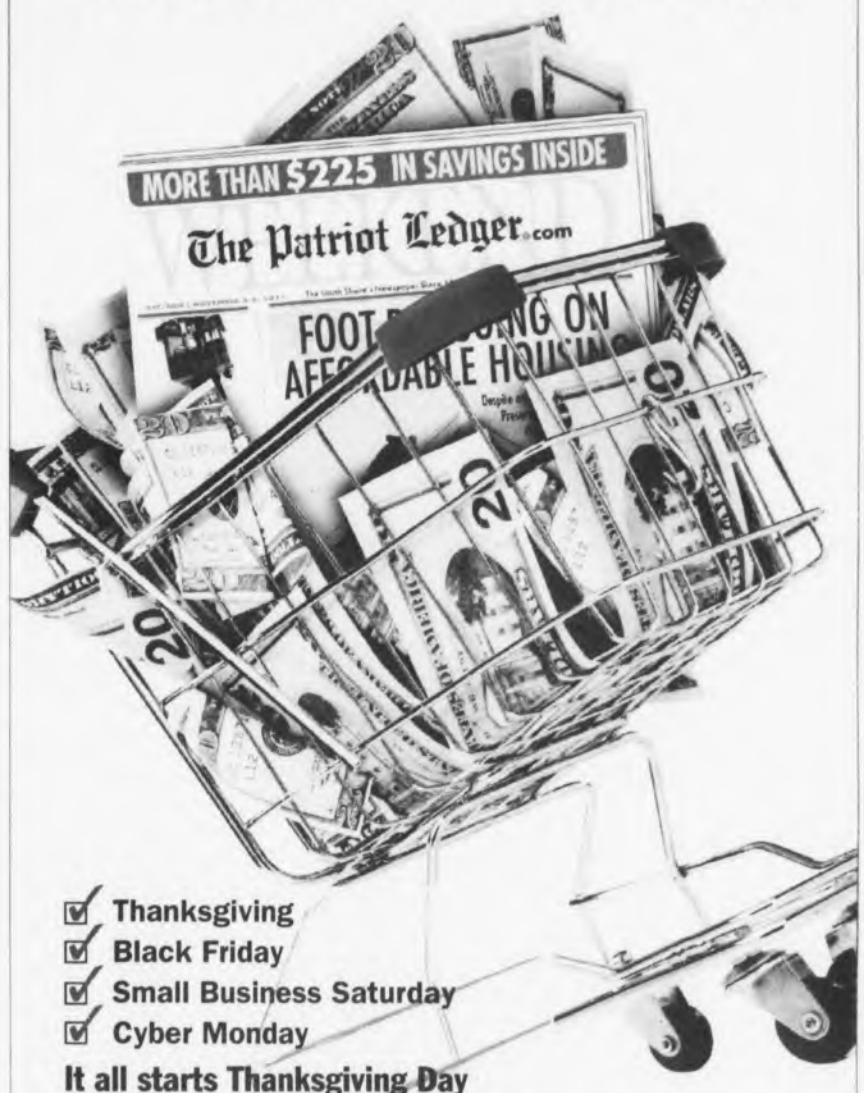
Baking and socializing are two of our favorite holiday pursuits. But as the season progresses and schedules get squeezed, it becomes challenging to play host or hostess and accomplish all the other chores associated with a holiday.

This season requires a different approach to the things we do. Health often suffers through overindulgence as well as less rigorous routines related to weight, exercise and conditioning. And once certain practices such as daily walks or routine exercise are abandoned, it's sometimes not easy to resurrect past practices. It's important to continue those healthy practices cultivated in less stressful days, and to limit some holiday overindulgences.

Plan your indulgences: When you know of an indulgence opportunity coming up, plan the rest of your day's eating accordingly. That doesn't mean starving yourself before the big turkey day dinner — that just sets you up for overeating at dinner because you're hungry. Plan instead to have light meals of fruit, vegetables and soup — enough to fill you but not overfill you. You'll find that this balance will actually help you not take too much on your plate later on.

Eat normally: Mostly you'll know what food-and-drink-associated events are coming up and you'll have a fair appraisal of what type of food and refreshments will be offered. If you're deliberate in what you normally eat; eat those things that aren't too far off the mark of what you eat normally. Of course, it's okay to plan to have that extra glass of eggnog, or a thin slice of cake, just as long as that isn't followed by several more treats. You wouldn't do that at home, so don't lower your standards. There are plenty more food-and-drink-centric events to come. Pace yourself.

Drink up: Adult beverages are likely to be a part of your festivities, but beware of the dehydrating effects. Few of us need to be cautioned any more about too much alcohol. But be cognizant of how much. It's critical to make sure you're getting enough pure, clear water and hydrating beverages throughout every day. Have fun even at those happenings, which are must-attend.



And When it's Over: You'll be happier with the year you've just completed and feel better about attacking the challenges of the ensuing year.

VETERANS

Ionizing Radiation Registry

JOE MCELROY

Ionizing Radiation Registry eligibility criteria: Veterans can qualify for the IRR if they were exposed to radiation during military service in a "radiation-risk activity," defined as:

"Atomic Veterans," an unofficial term that refers to:

- Participation in the occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki from Au. 6, 1945, through July 1, 1946;
- Internment as a Prisoner of War in Japan during World War II;
- Onsite participation in a test involving the atmospheric detonation of a nuclear device, whether or not the testing nation was the United States.

In addition, VA regulations provide that "radiation-risk activity" also refers to:

- Service at Department of Energy gaseous diffusion plants at Paducah, Ken., Portsmouth, Ohio, or the K25 area at Oak Ridge, Tenn., for at least 250 days before Feb. 1, 1992, under certain conditions;
- Proximity to "Longshot," Milrow" or "Cannikin" underground nuclear tests at Amchitka Island, Ark., before Jan. 1, 1974;
- Receipt of nasopharyngeal – nose and throat – radium irradiation treatments while in the active military, naval, or air service.

For more information about the Ionizing Radiation Registry evaluation, go to www.publichealth.va.gov/exposures/ radiation/registry, asp.

Health conditions recognized for Presumptive Service-Connection

The following conditions occurring in certain veterans exposed to radiation during their military service have been recognized by VA for presumptive service-connection. These are the veterans described above, except for veterans who received nasopharyngeal radium while in service, as these veterans are eligible for different benefits. Presumptive service-connection means that veterans with certain types of exposure to ionizing radiation who have one or more of the illnesses listed below are eligible for disability compensation from the VA. They do not have to prove that their condition was caused by ionizing radiation to be eligible for disability compensation from the VA.

- Leukemia other than chronic lymphocyte leukemia;
- Cancer of the thyroid;
- Cancer of the breast;
- Cancer of the pharynx;
- Cancer of the esophagus;
- Cancer of the stomach;
- Cancer of the small intestine;
- Cancer of the pancreas;
- Multiple myeloma
- Lymphomas (except Hodgkin's disease);
- Cancer of the bile ducts;
- Cancer of the gall bladder primary liver cancer, except if cirrhosis or hepatitis B is indicated;
- Cancers of the salivary gland;
- Urinary tract cancer (kidney/renal, pelvis, ureter, urinary bladder, and urethra);
- Bronchiolo-alveolar cancer (a rare form of lung cancer);
- Cancer of the bone;
- Cancer of the brain;
- Cancer of the colon;
- Cancer of the lung; and
- Cancer of the ovary

Note: To be considered for disability compensation, a Veteran must specifically apply for that benefit; ask your Veterans' Agent for help. Also, participation in the Ionizing Radiation Registry does not automatically constitute an application for compensation benefits.

First, on behalf of the CYBSA, a special thank you to all those who volunteered and otherwise supported the CYBSA this past year. Collectively you made this last year a memorable experience for the players and parents. We hope all had enjoyable seasons - spring, summer and fall. We held our annual Awards Night on November 14th and it was great to see the kids who played for our division winners awarded team jackets, plaques, trophies.

POPPIN' OFF

Strangest week of the year

WILL WASSERSUG

From an everyday point of view, this is a week like no other, with the exception of Thursday being Thannksgiving, the most footballest day of the year.

From my standpoint as a writer of sports, especially the high school kind, this week is unique, at least where it pertains to Cohasset.

Why, you ask , is it so strange.

Well, here's the answer.

Because of the holiday, our production schedule moves up by a day, so I have to have everything written and submitted for print by Wed. morning instead of the usual Thursday.

But, yes, here's the but, the Cohasset Mariner still hits the stores and mailboxes on Friday.

In between those two days are the Cohasset at Hull football showdown on Thanksgiving Day, and Powder Puff Football on Wednesday.

Some of you might ask ... Powder Puff ... really?

I answer with an emphatic yes.

I've seen some of these Powder Puff games through the year, and the young ladies playing should get the recognition they deserve. Cue up the After School Special music here. Just kidding. Seriously though, the Powder Puff games can get physical and rough and super competitive. Then, look at the rosters and see how many of the players also play other sports and you've got an enduring tradition, and a tradition I honestly like.

Now here's a tradition that all in one melts my head, grinds my gears, cheeses me off, infuriates me and sends me into mindless psychotic rage in tune with the sentiment "Hulk smash" – Christmas music, specials and commercials before Thanksgiving.

There's just something so wrong with the entire ... well, everything.

And it keeps getting worse and worse.

I can't even listen to the radio in the car anymore. The day after Halloween I was flipping channels during a commercial and heard Xmas music. My kids said I reminded them of one of those cartoons when a character explodes and you can see the steam coming out of his ears. I guess that can happen. That and a person changing all sorts of colors.

It's just wrong. Wrong I tell you. Let's not lose the meaning of Thanksgiving for a little more corporate greed.

INSIDE THE 6 – SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Final 2011 poll: Silver Lake, Marshfield top polls

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The 2011 season has come to a close, and after 10 weeks of some of the best-played soccer in years, the final tally of the top six teams in the region has arrived. After a tremendous run in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament, the Silver Lake boys' team leaps up three spots to finish at No. 1 in the rankings. On the girls' side, not much changed at the top as the Marshfield Rams end the season as No.1 Inside the Six.

Boys

1. Silver Lake – Jumping in and out of the No. 1 spot during the later stages of the regular season, the Lakers proved their worth to take the No. 1 position for the final rankings of 2011. Finishing the season with a 13-3-5 record, the Lakers beat Marshfield, 2-0, to start the Division 1 South Sectional tournament before falling, 2-1 in overtime to Needham.

2. Hingham – The Patriot League champions, who finished with a record this season of 15-4-3, made quite the run in the Division 2 South Sectional tournament. The Harbormen wiped out Foxboro, 4-0, in the first round, and then topped a very tough Norwell side, 1-0, before losing, 2-1, to eventual South champs Sandwich.

3. Weymouth – The Bay State Carey division runners-up Wildcats finished the year with a 13-5-3 record. Despite an early exit in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament, a 1-0 loss to Bay State Herget division champs Wellesley, Weymouth had a lot of positives come out of its 2011 season.

4. Marshfield – The Rams went 1-1 in the Division 1 South Sectional tournament, first beating rivals Plymouth South, 1-0 in overtime, after tying the Panthers twice during the regular season. The Rams, who finished with a 12-6-5 record, bowed out of the South Sectionals with a 2-0 loss to Silver Lake.

5. Norwell – It was an historic season for the Clippers. After winning the South Shore League for the second year in a row, the Clippers won their first-ever Division 2 South Sectional game when they beat Norwood, 1-0 in overtime. Despite losing to Hingham, which went to the Division 2 South semifinals before losing to South champs Sandwich, the Clippers finished with a more than respectable 13-4-3 record.

6. Duxbury – The Patriot League Keenan Division runners-up went 1-1 in the postseason. The Dragons started off with a 1-0 win over a dangerous Holliston side. They then got bounced from the tournament with a 4-0 loss to eventual South champs Sandwich. The Dragons ended the 2011 season with a record of 11-5-4.

On the bubble: Plymouth South, Plymouth North, Carver, Scituate, Hanover, Cohasset

Week Nine Rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Hingham, 3. Silver Lake, 4. Duxbury, 5. Hanover, 6. Scituate

Girls

1. Marshfield – The Atlantic Coast League champion Lady Rams finished the season with a 16-3-2 record, making a run all the way to the Division 1 South Sectional semifinals. On their way to the semis, Marshfield beat Plymouth South, 1-0, in the first round, following that up with a 3-1 win over Notre Dame Academy in the quarterfinals.

2. Duxbury – The Lady Dragons made quite a run in the Division 2 South Sectional tournament, taking it as far as they could go. Despite the 3-0 loss to Canton in the sectional finals, the Lady Dragons, who finished the season at 15-3-4, beat Apponequet, 2-0, in the first round, No. 1 seed East Bridgewater, 1-0, in the quarterfinals, and Dedham, 1-0, in the semis.

3. Norwell – What a season for the South Shore League runners-up. After going back and forth between being a bubble team to one of the top six in the rankings this season, the Lady Clippers had a rather successful postseason. They did lose, 1-0, to Dover-Sherborn in the Division 3 South Sectional finals, but along the way, they beat Pope John II, 6-0, in the first round, SSL rivals Carver, 4-0, in the quarterfinals, and Ursuline Academy, 1-0, in the semifinals. They finished with a record of 17-5-1.

4. Weymouth – It was an unlikely and surprising postseason for the Lady Wildcats, who had a tremendous regular season with only four losses in 18 games. They bowed out of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament with a 1-0 loss to Franklin, capping their 2011 season with a 13-5-1 record.

5. Plymouth North – The Atlantic Coast League runners-up may have lost in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional finals, but not after taking eventual Division 1 South champs Whitman-Hanson to penalties in the first round. Whitman-Hanson won that match, 1-0, but the Lady Eagles gave them the toughest challenge in the tournament. North finished its 2011 campaign with a 12-5-2 record.

6. Scituate – Perhaps one of the most dangerous and underrated teams in Division 2 this season, a team that kind of slid under the radar, the Lady Sailors put together one of their greatest seasons. Scituate, which beat Somerset-Berkeley, 2-1, in the first round of the Division 2 South Sectional tournament, lost in the next round to Canton, 6-0, a Canton team that won the Sectional and Eastern Mass. titles. Scituate finished the season with a 15-4-2 record.

On the bubble: Hingham, Hanover, Avon, Abington, Carver, Braintree, Plymouth South

Week Nine Rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Weymouth, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Hingham, 5. Duxbury, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. 5 To Watch

Wesley Gallagher, Pembroke: With 100 meters to go in the DII boys race, Wesley Gallagher's dream of repeating as State Champion looked to be over. Wakefield's Stephen Robertson was leading and running well, showing no signs of fatiguing. Turning onto the final straightaway, Gallagher used the knee lift that brought him indoor and outdoor track All State titles in the mile last year. The margin was only a second, but Gallagher's 15:43 mark stands as one of the top 20 times ever run as Franklin Park's historic course. Wes, always the team player, says he'd give it back for another team win.

Julie McConville, Hingham: They say the XC season really begins in November. For McConville, this is literally the truth. Opening up with a nice effort at State Coaches two weeks ago, the once-injured junior turned it on this week, racing a personal best 19:01 time, good enough for the DII 8th place finish, and just three seconds out of 4th. Imagine what she would have done with a full season of training and racing? Or, maybe there's something to this short season thing.

Chelsea Savage, Pembroke: Coach Greg Zopatti reflected on Savage's EMass race with some disappointment, stating that she was better than her 19:36 effort. I guess he was right. Savage looked fit and confident all the way around the park, blasting to a 5th place 18:59 run, a personal best and a shot to the bow of those who thought she couldn't do it. Savage is a senior, and although under the radar of some of the major college programs, will be an outstanding addition to her suitor.

Joel Hubbard, Marshfield: So close. Joel Hubbard was one second from a DI All States victory on Saturday, running 15:41, entering the Franklin Park All-time top 20, and missing a miraculous comeback over St John's (Shrewsbury) harrier John Green. Green held a seemingly insurmountable lead with 400 meters to go, and maybe Hubbard broke a second or two too late, but his closing speed was breathtaking, and his stubbornness was enlightening. Hubbard can hold his head up high, as runner-up in a field that deep is impressive.

Whitman-Hanson girls: Congrats go to Coach Keith Erwin and the Panther girls for hoisting the championship trophy for the first time in school history. They did it with an incredible pack, led by junior Abby Baker (15th; 19:27), and a huge group in the top 30. Gianna Cacciatorre (25th, 19:42) continued her breakthrough season, Jenny Dimascio (27th, 19:44) and freshman Kelsey Tierney (28th, 19:44) ran their best ever races, and junior Rachel Baker (30th, 19:47) executed a perfect pack race, keeping the spread to 20 seconds from #1 to #5. It's a formula that is impossible to beat, and without a senior in the group, could be repeated in 2012.

Meet to Watch

Nike XC Northeast Regional (Nov. 26, Bowdoin Park, Wappingers Falls, NY)- With the sting of Saturday's 2 point loss to Bishop Feehan still fresh, Pembroke's boys will look to earn a repeat visit to Portland, OR with a top two finish at NXN. It will take similar performances from the big three of Wes Gallagher and sophomores Christian Stafford and John Valeri to make it happen, as well as solid ones from Joe Vercollone and Pat Cunningham, whose sub-17:00 effort at All States bodes well. The Titans will be hungry; their opponents ought not to forget them.

This column is the work of Mike Miller, coach of the Weymouth High School girls' cross-country team.

SPIRIT OF THE SEASON

Thanksgiving essentials: Turkey, stuffing, pie, and football

By A.J. Spirito

Thanksgiving is a very special time of the year when families and friends get together and eat the best meal of the entire year. But there is more to the last Thursday of November than a massive feast, especially if you live up here in Massachusetts.

The game of football is a huge part of Thanksgiving even if you don't know the difference between a goal-line and a street-line.

Almost every family out there has someone who either watches football, plays a pick-up game in the backyard, or plays a high school game on Thanksgiving day. It's a big part of the holiday, even more so in a sports-heavy town like Hingham.

Every season Hingham plays Scituate in their annual Thanksgiving showdown. This year the Harbormen will head south to Scituate to take on the Sailors as the boys in red try to finish the season off strong.

High school football is a sacred tradition here in the Bay State and it brings families as well as neighbors closer together which is what this day is all about.

Every family has their own tradition when it comes to Thanksgiving football but it is something to look forward to each year whether you are a young child or a grandparent. It is truly a special day so kick back and enjoy it while it lasts folks and remember that Thanksgiving would not be the same without some good ol' classic football.

Whether you are crowding around the TV to catch some NFL action, heading out to the leaf covered backyard to toss the pigskin, or going out to spectate your local high school take on a rival, the outcome is always the same and that is the feeling of becoming closer to your friends, neighbors, and family.

Football is more than just a game, it's a part of the most special time of the year.

Happy Thanksgiving everyone and good luck Harbormen!

STRANGEST

idea of the story, well I guess this is a spot to let you know why there wasn't mention of yesterday's football game here, and again the answer is early deadline, same delivery date as usual.

We'll have info on the game next week right here.

While I have some attention, I'd like to toss out a few congratulations here.

Once again, Cohasset has shown itself to be an outstanding sports machine during the regular season and into MIAA playoffs.

The field hockey team was downright impressive again, battling to one of the finest seasons ever.

The fun part with this team is that although there are a number of graduating seniors, there are younger players ready to step in and fill those shoes.

Same with soccer.

It's going to be fun.

By the way, my prediction for the Thanksgiving Day football game is 21-14 Cohasset. At least one of Cohasset's scores will (was) on a turnover, potentially an interception return all the way back. Another will be on a short field set up by a Hull turnover. I am also predicting one kick into the ocean, possibly an extra point or field goal attempt.

Just a guess.

I'll also guess Kyle Livingstone or Jamie Faber for game MVP.

Remember, I'm writing this on Wednesday morning.

Hope you enjoyed the game, and check us out here next week for more info.

HOT STOVE COOL MUSIC

Hot Stove Cool Music charity concert set for January

Music and baseball collide when Theo Epstein returns home to join legendary baseball journalist Peter Gammons and an all-star music line-up for the 13th annual Hot Stove Cool Music charity concert presented by Ipswitch, Inc., on Saturday, January 14 at the Paradise Rock Club. The Foundation To Be Named Later fundraiser will feature performances by Grammy award-nominated Boston Native Susan Tedeschi, legendary Boston rockers The Remains, Grammy award-winning guitarist Derek Trucks, and the Hot Stove All-Stars featuring Gammons, Buffalo Tom's Bill Janovitz, indie rocker Kay Hanley, J. Geils Band's Seth Justman, folk rocker Robin Lane and more. Glee actor Mike O'Malley will take the reins as emcee.

Tickets for Hot Stove Cool Music are $40 and available now at FoundationToBeNamedLater.org or by calling musictoday at 800-594-8499. Doors open at 6 p.m.

"I'm continually humbled to see so many talented musicians come together to support this worthy cause," said Gammons. "With Theo's return to Boston and Susan, Derek, and the Remains in the line-up, this year's Hot Stove Cool Music concert is already shaping up to be amongst our best. We're looking forward to welcoming old friends and new faces as we raise money to support at-risk youth."

In addition to the all-star music line-up, the evening will feature a number of special guests and performances, along with a live and silent auction featuring signed sports memorabilia and priceless entertainment experiences.

Since its inception in 2000, Hot Stove Cool Music events have raised more than $4 million for Theo and Paul Epstein's Foundation To Be Named Later and the Jimmy Fund. Proceeds benefit the Foundation's Peter Gammons College Scholarship fund and non-profit beneficiaries including BELL (Building Educated Leaders for Life), Citizen Schools, City Year Boston, The Home for Little Wanderers, Horizons for Homeless Children, Roxbury Youthworks, Steps to Success and West End House Boys & Girls Club.

About Hot Stove Cool Music

Hot Stove Cool Music is a biannual charity concert and musical variety show held in the winter and summer months. The event was created in December of 2000 by Hall of Fame Baseball journalist Peter Gammons and former Boston Herald sports writer Jeff Horrigan. Over the past 12 years, Hot Stove Cool Music has become a staple on Boston's entertainment calendar and has raised more than $4 Million for the Jimmy Fund and Theo and Paul Epstein's Foundation To Be Named Later.

About Foundation To Be Named Later

The Foundation To Be Named Later was founded in 2005 by then Red Sox Executive Vice President and General Manager and current Chicago Cubs President of Baseball Operations, Theo Epstein and his twin brother Paul, a social worker in the Brookline public school system. Inspired by Paul and Theo's commitment to creating positive opportunities for disadvantaged children and families in the Boston area, the Foundation aims to expand the impact of youth-focused nonprofits by raising awareness and critical resources. Over the past five years, the Foundation has invested $5 million in grants and in-kind donations to local organizations and has sent more than 3,200 children to Red Sox and Celtics games. Central to FTBNL's work are strategic partnerships with a team of nonprofits that serve disadvantaged children, including BELL (Building Educated Leaders for Life); Citizen Schools; City Year Boston; The Home for Little Wanderers; Horizons for Homeless Children; Roxbury Youthworks; Steps to Success; and West End House Boys & Girls Club. With the generous support of RISO, FTBNL also created the "Peter Gammons College Scholarship," named for the beloved Hall of Fame sports journalist and humanitarian, to provide college scholarships to five exemplary Boston area students who have overcome tremendous disadvantages but have great potential. Sensory strategies subject of talk

The holidays are a time of sharing and excitement, with many new and often powerful sensory experiences. This time of year can bring peace and relaxation, but for others it can create stress and frustration. If you are the parent of a child with sensory processing disorder (SPD), or if you yourself have difficulty processing sensory information, then you know that the holidays are among the hardest time of year. The chaos and stimulation can lead to more frequent, intense, and unexpected outbursts and behavioral disorganization

Sensory integration strategies are extremely important to help individuals with SPD to remain regulated for more successful participation in daily activities. This informational overview will help parents, grandparents, teachers, and other health care professionals develop practical solutions for coping with this busy and often chaotic time, through active problem solving and sharing of ideas. Discussion will include typical stressors and strategies for creating workable structures and accommodations for daily activities, family gatherings, shopping trips, etc.

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host Sensory Strategies for "Making it through the Holidays" presented by Beth Beaudry OTR/L.

Beaudry is the Clinical Director of OT at South Shore Therapies, Inc., Pembroke location. The meeting will be held at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, Dec. 6th, at 7 pm. Please feel free to gather with refreshments and speak with the SEPAC board. Beaudry will begin her presentation at 7:30 p.m..

Beaudry has impressive clinical expertise ranging from early intervention to adult rehabilitation. She has worked in various settings including hospitals, schools, early intervention programs, home health organizations and private practice. She is certified in pediatric neurodevelopmental treatment (NDT) and has specialty training in Sensory Integration, handwriting programs, oral motor treatment and feeding intervention.

She is also a certified provider for The Listening Program (TLP) and has experience with Therapeutic Listening and Integrated Listening Systems. In addition, Beth coordinates the student intern program at South Shore Therapies with colleges and universities around the country.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit: www.cohassetsepac.com.

Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

CYBSA NEWS

New board members being sought

Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association would like to thank all those who volunteered and otherwise supported the CYBSA this past year. Collectively you made this last year a memorable experience for the players and parents.

CYBSA held its annual Awards Night on Nov. 14, players who played for the division winners were awarded team jackets, plaques and trophies.

Preparations for next year are well under way. Here are a few important dates to remember over the next month.

Wanted: new board members. The CYBSA Board of Directors is elected by the CYBSA's Regular Members.

This year, with service to start on Jan. 1, 2012, CYBSA anticipates three to four open seats for new board members. How to apply:

Visit the CYBSA website for instructions on how to apply. Statements of Interest will only be accepted via email and they must be submitted by 5 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 1.

LIFE AT CHS

Can you believe it's almost December?

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

It feels like we are never at school anymore because this week was yet ANOTHER short one. And this time, it was only two and a half days long! Thanksgiving was yesterday, and I hope all of you had a wonderful holiday! The football team played rival Hull in the annual Thanksgiving game, and their last game of the season. Great job guys! I'm sure we're all still recovering from the massive amounts of food we consumed. I want to go to the gym and run for hours to shed off the extra twenty pounds I seemed to have gained from yesterday alone...

Despite the unfavorable weather conditions, the junior and senior girls faced off on Wednesday in the annual Powderpuff game! After the administration tried to move the game to Tuesday night at 5 pm, complaints from students and players resulted leaving the game at its regular, traditional time. The physical and rough game was extremely entertaining, and the senior girls dominated as usual. Not to mention how great we looked in our white uniforms and neon yellow and blue striped socks...You wish you were 12!

The Blood Drive is rapidly approaching! Starting next week, make sure you sign up to donate blood on December 16th during school. Ask members of the Student Council for more information on either donating blood, signing up, or helping out and volunteering at the drive!

Since fall sports are all over, it is time to get into the winter sports mindset. The winter sports meeting was this past Monday. The winter sports offered at the high school are girls and boys basketball, gymnastics, wrestling, swimming, boys hockey, and for the first time ever, girls hockey! If you are planning on playing a winter sport, make sure you have all of your forms, an updated physical (within 13 months), and your user fee in by Monday! I can't believe that winter sports are already starting. I'm excited to watch some intense basketball and hockey games, and attend wresting matches. Game on!

Last Thursday at lunch, a group of seniors were honored with a pizza luncheon for earning the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship, which provides winners with free tuition for any Massachusetts public school or community college. AP Scholars and AP Scholars with Honor were also praised at the lunch. Congrats to all on a job well done!

On Friday, the entire junior class took a field trip to Walden Pond and Lexington and Concord. I'm not really sure what they did there except take a picture on the Lexington and Concord bridge and leisurely stroll around the Pond, but they seemed to have a good time. And, frankly, it got a bunch of tests that were supposed to be on Friday moved to Monday because none of the juniors were in school. So thanks guys!

Everybody should join the Book Club, which meets monthly at lunch! Read the hit novel "The Hunger Games" to participate in this month's meeting.

Can you guys believe that it's almost December? The holiday season is rapidly approaching! Today is Black Friday, marking the first day of chaotic holiday shopping. I can't say that I am somebody who is so eager to begin shopping that I line up outside the mall at 5 am, but I will get it done sooner or later. Winter weather is right around the corner as well! It's already getting dark at 4:30 pm, so start gearing up for snowfall. I'm hoping for a lot of snow days this year, since the senior privilege of not making up snow days applies to me this year. Fingers crossed! Have a great Thanksgiving break, Cohasset!

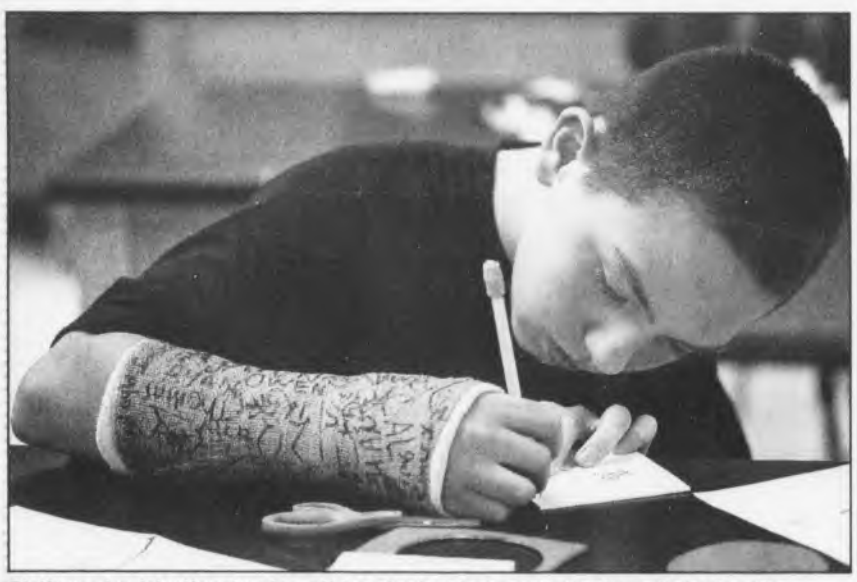
Students learn African artform

The South Shore Art Center is collaborating with Cohasset Middle School's sixth grade to enhance the students' studies of Africa. The Cohasset Rotary Club has funded this three-month-long, collaborative project.

On Tuesday, Nov. 15, artists from SSAC visited the middle school to work with the students making Adinkra (block-printing) wall hangings. A centuries-old tradition in western Africa, Adinkra expresses values and philosophies of life through a language of visual symbols printed on fabric and then worn to special occasions.



The students learned about the cultural background of this unique art form and then created symbols that reflect their own values to print along with their favorite Adinkra symbols. The students' individual pieces will be combined in a huge wall hanging that will be displayed at the school at a concluding celebration later this fall.

Emilee Lyons applies paint to her block while learing about art from West Africa.

Sixth-grader Jake Koncius doesn't let a broken bone get away from designing his Adinkra block print.

Sixth grader Thomas Guinee cuts his design while learning about Adinkra block printing from Ghana with the help of the South Shore Art Center last week.

GIMME SHELTER

Buddy and Holly looking for home to call their own

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Buddy, a male and Holly, a female. They are almost five months old and are friendly, playful and get along well with children. They would make a great, early holiday gift. They are ready to go, have all their shots, and are of course litter trained. Holly is definitely a lap cat and Buddy lives up to his name and will make a great friend.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of our very adoptable cats and kittens, including two adorable baby 4-week-old kittens, who will be ready to go (together) towards the end of December or the beginning of January.

If you're planning on giving kittens to your children for holiday gifts, HSAR suggests that it's best to adopt them prior to the holidays. That way, they will be settled in and be part of the family by the time the holidays come around.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

The Kittendales calendar is available either online or at the shelter. It makes a unique holiday gift.

HSAR will have a table at Endless Summer on Saturday, Nov. 26, from 10am - 3pm at Nantasket Beach Resort. You can support the shelter with the purchase of the Kittendales calendar. HSAR will also have sweatshirts, and an opportunity to win various baskets, filled with goodies: one with a cat theme, another with a dog theme and one with a human theme.

Hope to see you there!

McCabe joins staff at Conlon Chiropractic

Christina McCabe is a licensed massage therapist in the state of Massachusetts. She recently joined the office of Conlon Chiropractic at 8 Brewster Road, Cohasset. McCabe attended the Elizabeth Grady School amassing more than 1,600 hours of professional training, the Catherine Hinds Institute where she gained an additional 600 hours, and the Dermalogica International Institute. While attending each school she learned advanced aesthetics, aromatherapy and a range of massage therapy techniques.

McCabe offers a range of techniques from sports massage, designed to target areas of chronic pain and fatigued overstressed muscles, to Swedish massage sessions, which deliver a more gentle, nurturing touch. Aromatherapy can be incorporated into each type of massage if desired.

She urges anyone who has not yet experienced a massage to try it and feel for themselves the positive benefits that continuous treatment can do to improve physical and mental health. Appointments with McCabe can be scheduled by calling Conlon Chiropractic at 781-383-1616.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 5, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your curiosity might not be appreciated by everyone. Expect some resistance in getting answers to your questions. But stay with it. You need facts in order to make important decisions.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Some of the mystery surrounding your recent fiscal situation soon will be dispelled with a clear explanation. Use this new knowledge to help you chart a fresh financial course.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Start your Hanukkah and Christmas gift-buying now. This will help avoid problems caused by possible mid-December delays. A family member has important information.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Use a little more sense in how you plan to spend your end-of-the-year holiday dollars. Meanwhile, you continue to gain support for your stand on a workplace issue.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Wearing that big, loving Lion's heart of yours on your sleeve leaves it unprotected. Let things develop a little more before you allow your emotions to spill over.

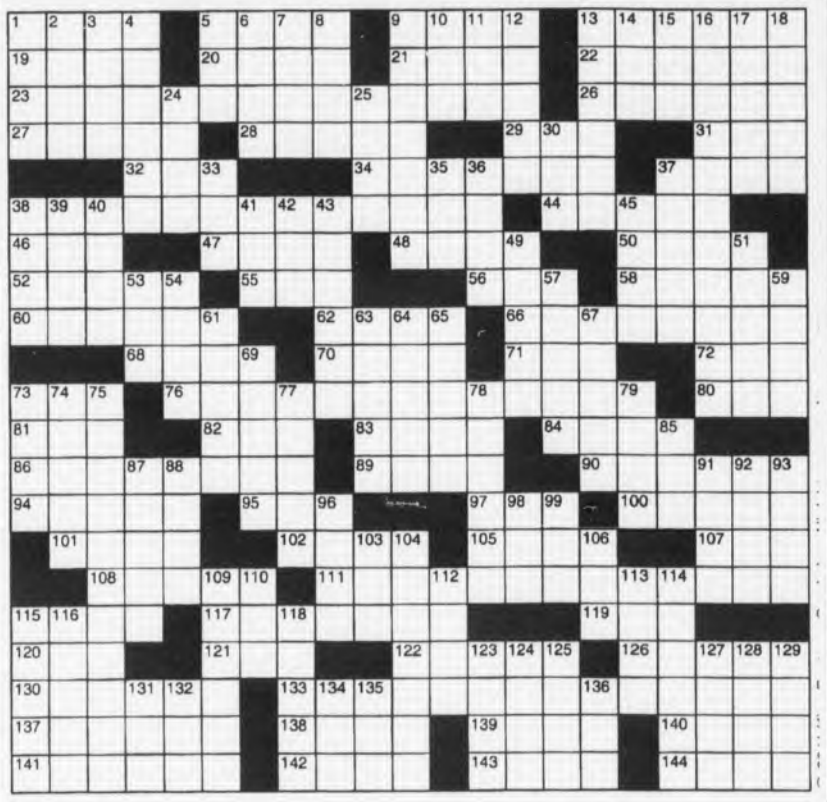
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to September 22) You might feel you're not ready to patch up an unraveled relationship. But the longer you wait, the more difficult it will be for all parties to take the first healing step.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your end-of-the-year holiday plans could be disrupted by something out of your control, but stay the course. Ultimately, things will settle back into a normal pace.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your honest approach to a workplace project earns you both respect and credit from those in charge. Meanwhile, that personal problem still needs to be dealt with.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Money could be a little tight this month. This means the usually bargain-oblivious Sagittarian should look for ways to save on end-of-the-year holidays.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Examine the facts, and you might find that it's a wiser move to shift gears and redirect some of your goals before the end of the year. Someone close to you offers good advice.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be careful that your generosity is not abused. Find out more, both about the special favors you might be asked to grant and who is asking for them.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You've come through a recent rough time in great shape. Congratulations. Now go out and enjoy your well-earned rewards. More good news comes in mid-December.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Christmas in the Square

Santa is coming to downtown Hingham on Friday Dec. 2 during the 29th annual Christmas in the Square from 6 to 8 p.m. at the corner of Main and South streets, and the celebration continues all day on Saturday Dec. 3, throughout the historic downtown. Festively decorated shops, a visit from Santa, a Festival of Trees, music, dancing, a winter wonderland of white lights, and an overriding spirit of goodwill are just a few of the features that will draw happy crowds to the annual Christmas in the Square celebration on Dec. 2 and 3. The community tradition is sponsored by the Hingham Downtown Association, working with other civic groups and area businesses in the true spirit of community.

Hingham Square will be closed to traffic on Friday at 6 p.m., with Santa scheduled to appear atop a fire truck at around 6:30 p.m. Streets will once again be filled with eager children on parents' shoulders trying to catch a glimpse of the jolly old fellow's arrival. Santa will spend the rest of the evening on South Street visiting with one and all. Seasonal music will fill the air as families move from shop to shop, greeting friends and neighbors along the way, all within a hometown atmosphere — a scene reminiscent of a Norman Rockwell painting. The charming stage is set for community groups and professionals alike to entertain those gathered with holiday music and good cheer.

BRIEFLY

Local author writes about his ancestor

When Massachusetts author P. Gifford Longley discovered the story of his ancestor, John Longley, he felt compelled to tell it. In January, he released the story nationwide in two novels. On Dec. 8, at 7 p.m., he will talk about his books at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. All are welcome to this free event.

In the first novel, "Captive," Longley shares the true story of a family torn apart by the hate, racism and greed that consumed colonial New England. Twelve-year-old John's parents and siblings are massacred by the Abenaki Indians, and he is abducted. Irrevocably separated from his loved ones, John must find a way to survive among his violent captors, using skill and wit to adapt as his uncle Jack searches for him.

Longley is an architect who has worked on building projects in Boston, New York, Hong Kong, Barcelona, and Sydney. He has three grown children and lives with his wife in the Cohasset.

BREAKING THE ICE

New Cohasset-Hanover Girls' Hockey team goes varsity

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last year, Cohasset and Hanover high schools came together to form an all-girls hockey team. As a fledgling squad, the girls played 10 games as a junior-varsity team.

Less than a year later, the team has already made major leaps and bounds. The Cohasset-Hanover "Skipping Indians," as the girls call themselves, is competing on the varsity level this season, a process that normally takes three years for brand new sports clubs.

The team, which was approved by both towns' school committees last November, has also expanded its membership.

"Last year, we had 20 to 21 kids," said coach Deb Beal, who also coaches soccer at Cohasset High. "It was very beginner level... The progress we've made is unbelievable."

And while the beginner's spirit is still the same – girls need no prior athletic experience to join the team – the number of players has increased to 30.

"We've had a huge growth in a short period of time," said Ron Ford, Athletic Director of Cohasset schools. "It's really progressed a lot faster than we thought" it would.

Chalk it up to the phenomenon of girls' hockey sweeping the country — the sport is "exploding" in popularity, said Ford.

The initiative to start a girls' hockey team in Cohasset was years in the making, according to Ford.

"We tried to get something going a number of years ago," Ford said. One local "hockey family" in particular, the Farrens, spearheaded the program.

Jim and Nancy Farren have five children who all play the sport – Amanda, Nicole, Valerie, Lauren and Jimmy – and created an ice rink in their own backyard. The Farrens began advocating for a girls' team because their daughters played the game and loved it, said Nancy Farren.

The genesis of Cohasset's first girls' team, and its partnership with Hanover, was a four-year process, according to Farren.

While there seemed to be interest, "we never had enough people from Cohasset ready to go at any one time," Farren said. "Over the years, we lost so many female hockey players to private schools because there was no opportunity [here]."

Finance director

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset is coming closer to hiring a new finance director/town accountant. But there is a brouhaha brewing about whether the two finalists can be interviewed in executive session next Tuesday.

The recent dispute started when Town Manager Mike Coughlin told the Board of Selectmen during Tuesday's meeting that he would be presenting a final candidate for the board to interview at the next selectmen's meeting. So far nine candidates have been considered for the post, he said.

Financial consultant Eric Kinsherf has been working in the financial department part-time as the interim director/accountant since John Stanbrook, the town's finance director of nine months, left the post in October.

However, several members of the Board of Selectmen, along with Capital Budget committee members, expressed their dismay that there would be only one candidate to review.

What's on deck

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Warrant articles have been discussed and debated over the past several Board of Selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget Committee meetings. Now, Special Town Meeting is upon Cohasset.

This fall's meeting, to be held at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium at 7 p.m., "is designed as a cleanup measure of outstanding issues," said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr. "There are some adjustments to the budget, some articles that are financial in nature and some structural changes within the strategy of Town Hall that I think are important for people to understand."

Smart phones can access cruiser code

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

During the month of November the police department placed "QR Code" stickers on the rear of each marked cruiser. QR Code, which is short for quick response code, consists of black modules arranged in a square pattern on a white background. The information encoded can be made up of any kind of data. In Cohasset' case, when the QR Code is scanned with a smart phone, the person would have immediate access to www.cohassetpolice.com.

"We envision this initiative being utilized by citizens that want to learn more about the Cohasset Police Department as well as drivers that have been involved in motor vehicle crashes who want to download a copy of their crash report from the CPD website," Lt. William Quigley said.

Bad checks

At 12:47 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 21), the 65-year-old owner of a local landscape business went to police to report a couple of customers had purchased materials with checks on closed bank accounts. As a result of an investigation, a 27-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court of face the charge of larceny by check. Police said he wrote a check for $166 on an account that had been closed. A 42-year-old East Weymouth man is also being summonsed for larceny by check. Police said he purchased materials with a $127 check from a closed account.

Mink coat

Kit & Kaboodle, a local consignment shop, reported to police last Monday (Nov. 21) at 1:40 p.m. that a male customer, described as 5 foot, 10 inches tall with sandy brown hair and wearing a blue puffer jacket, had stolen a $300 mink jacket from the store. Police are checking video from the parking lot and surrounding stores for clues.

Checked out

A Cohasset man, who stopped and asked an eight-year-old girl in her neighborhood if she needed a ride home, was located and checked out. It was very cold at 3:15 p.m. on Monday (Nov. 21) and the older man thought he was being helpful when he pulled up to the girl, police said. The girl reported the matter to her mother who contacted police. Police checked a neighbor's video surveillance and were able to identify and car and locate the resident.

Backed into

A Spring Street resident notified police last Tuesday when he realized his 2003 Toyota Camry had been hit in the driveway sometime that morning or overnight. As it turned out, a neighbor backed into the car accidentally. The two motorists hooked up and are handling the matter on their own.

Oven fire

Police and fire responded to a report of a fire at one of the Avalon units on Thanksgiving Day. Police said the resident was expecting company and had the turkey in the oven baking in an aluminum foil pan. Some of the grease got onto the cooking element in the oven and it went up in flames. The fire was quickly put out and the stove removed from the building, police said.

Boat dispute

A Cohasset man reported threats were made to himself and his family over the purchase of a boat from a Scituate man last week. The 33-year-old resident reported he had purchased a 15-foot boat from a 34-year-old Scituate man. The boat turned out to be 13-1/2 feet not 15 feet, police said. When confronted, the Cohasset man reported that seller made threats. Police said the seller denied the allegations and they recommended that the purchaser seek remedy through the courts, as the transaction is a civil matter.

Bullying

Items left on a teen's car at the high school last week could be evidence of bullying by another student or students, police said. Police said someone taped a tampon with ketchup to the teen's car, which prompted the boy's mother to notify the police. Police said the school is handling the matter.

Town Manager commends heroism

Police, dispatcher recognized this week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Through his questioning, Dispatcher Schmidt determined the location was actually Wheelwright Farm Drive off of Beechwood Street, miles away from the location the caller had originally provided.

Members of Cohasset's public safety team were commended during Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting for an act of heroism that occurred on Tuesday, Nov. 1.

Dispatcher Harrison Schmidt received an emergency call at 4:30 p.m. that day from a cell phone caller reporting a collapsed bicyclist at the entrance to Wheelwright Park. Through his questioning, Schmidt determined the location was actually Wheelwright Farm Drive off of Beechwood Street, miles away from the location the caller had originally provided.

Lt. William Quigley was on his way home from work when he heard and responded to the 911call. Quigley relieved a civilian from administering chest compressions and rescue breath to the unconscious cyclist.

Police Officer Jay St. Ives shortly arrived on the scene and helped Quigley use a defibrillator to administer shock to the victim. Detective James McLean also arrived and assisted with CPR until members of the Cohasset Fire Department, including Capt. Paul Bilodeau, Lt. Paramedic John Dockray, firefighter paramedic Laura Morrison and firefighter paramedic Dan Cunningham stepped in.

Thanks to the public safety team's efforts, the victim was resuscitated and made a recovery.

Dispatcher Schmidt, Lt. Quigley, Officer St. Ives and Detective McLean were all presented special certificates by Town Manger Mike Coughlin and the selectmen.

DIRECTOR

"Why not have two?" Selectman Leland Jenkins asked. "Then you've already picked... If you've already made the pick, why bring them before us? It's very important that we have diverse opinions on the financial manager."

Jack Keniley of the Capital Budget committee suggested that three candidates be brought before the board. He later said these types of interviews are usually conducted in executive session. He also suggested starting a screening committee and using a headhunter to "cast a wider net" for candidates, as was done when the town was seeking a new town manager.

Coughlin asserted his authority under the "strong" Town Manager Act that the appointment of a new finance director is his to make, but that he still welcomes the board's input.

Both Jenkins and selectman Diane Kennedy were advocating for a finance director who could work well with the selectmen and other town leaders.

"The real problem we've had in the community is having a Town Manager and finance director [not] working together with all of the boards," said Kennedy, adding that she felt the selectmen should have a chance to screen more than just "the chosen one."

Coughlin countered by citing where in the bylaw it states that the Town Manger would make the appointment, and the selectmen would have 15 days to accept or reject his decision. Bringing his recommended candidate forward would be his way of soliciting the board's input.

Jenkins challenged Coughlin that the board hired him as Town Manager, so he needed to answer to them. "I'm tired of hearing what the rules are," said Jenkins during the meeting. "We have to all feel comfortable [with the decision]. I can't take it; nothing is straight. We have to have somebody we feel comfortable with. I would like to see two people."

"The strong Town Manager act says that the appointment should be the town manager's to make, and the selectmen should affirm or reject that appointment. But in the spirit of teamwork, I have no problem with the board interviewing both candidates."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore weighed in. "It's good for you and us," he said to Coughlin of presenting more than one candidate. "It gives you extra coverage."

Carr, in a phone interview on Wednesday, said while it is Coughlin's appointment to make, the longstanding process in Cohasset is that senior managers have some input.

"This is such a critical issue for us, that we want to be sure whoever fills that role not only has the right skill set, but has the ability to work in collaborative way with everybody," Carr said.

"I think we're going to find the right person," Carr continued. "The board and the Advisory committee will look at two final candidates and be able to ask relevant questions to help Mike determine who will be the best candidate going forward... I think it's a terrific step in the right direction, and I want to commend Mike for taking the initiative to go out and recruit" a finance director.

Coughlin told the selectmen that Kinsherf has agreed to stay on for an additional 30 days to train whoever the new finance director will be.

During a phone interview Wednesday, Coughlin said he was appointed by the board of selectmen but work for the people of Cohasset. "I have to exercise my independent judgment on behalf of the citizens of the town," he said.

Coughlin said had hoped for discretion for the candidates interviewing for the job so they would not jeopardize their current positions in other towns. He reiterated during a phone interview that the board has 15 days to accept or reject his appointment.

"Politics is the art of compromise," Coughlin told the Mariner. "The strong Town Manager act says that the appointment should be the town manager's to make, and the selectmen should affirm or reject that appointment. But in the spirit of teamwork, I have no problem with the board interviewing both candidates."

However, the board interviews of the candidates may put Town Hall in a "Catch-22" situation. Coughlin said both finalists have stated that they would not interview in public because, in their towns, the Town Manager or Town Administrator appoints them subject to board confirmation.

An executive session to interview finalists would be a clear violation of the Open Meeting Law, the Mariner believes. The Mariner editor told Coughlin and left a voicemail for Chairman Carr that the paper would file a complaint with the Attorney General's Office if the executive session, which is slated to take place after the board meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 6, goes forward.

Coughlin said both indicated that once appointed or designated as the sole finalists they would interview in public. He said selectmen should follow the law both respect to the OML and the appointment process.

Community-wide event at middle school

On Tuesday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m., Cohasset Middle School will host a community-wide celebration of sixth grade students' studies of Africa in the auditorium. This event features the students' learning across the curriculum over the past three months, a collaborative project with South Shore Art Center, funded by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

The evening will showcase the students' African projects, Adinkra block printing mural and drumming skills. In addition to the student performances, there will be presentations by speakers with first-hand knowledge of African life. Frannie Noble, who lives and works at the Flying Kites Orphanage in Nairobi, Kenya, will give an overview of her work in rural Kenya. Bob Golledge will also share details of his experience with the Peace Corps in Ghana.

Tony Fonseca from All Hands Drumming will also introduce visitors to the history of African drumming as a source of communication, which has become central to musical groups around the world. All are welcome.

GIRLS HOCKEY

Hanover High had the same problem, according to the school's Athletic Director Fran Coyle.

"Neither one of us had enough kids," said Coyle, adding that Hanover had 10 girls join the team last year. "The long-term goal, once the teams get big enough, is that the schools can field their own teams."

However, Coyle noted, the eventual splitting the team into two will be bittersweet.

"The kids get to know each other," the athletic director said. And when the girls, many of whom play on other sports teams, compete against one another in field hockey or lacrosse, "you see them talking after the games," Coyle said. "Without the co-op [hockey team], you wouldn't see that side of it."

"The sense of camaraderie is different than in other winter sports such as skating or swimming," said Farren. "It's just fun... They all have such a nice time."

The players themselves echo this perception.

Farren's daughter Amanda, a junior at Cohasset High and one of the team's captains, said it has been "great to meet girls from other towns.

"We have sleepovers and team dinners at restaurants in between the towns," Amanda said. "We make it work."

Taylor Graf, also a junior and team captain from Hanover, said that the team "is really close. We have a bond."

And while Graf also plays field hockey and lacrosse, she said that there is simply "nothing like ice hockey."

"I think it's awesome," Coyle said of the girls' brand of the game. "It's a good sport for them. They work hard."

Farren said that having a hockey team provides the girls with an additional winter sports option besides basketball or swim. While the boys of Cohasset have had four sports to choose from – basketball, swim, wrestling and hockey – the girls have only ever had the two choices. Now, Farren pointed out, they have three.

However, unlike the boys, the girls' team is tasked with raising all of its own funds. This is because the team is still brand new, hockey parent and fundraising volunteer Michelle Cayer of Cohasset explained. The amount needed to fund the team for a year is around $25,000.

This is why, this Friday evening, the girls will be hosting a pasta dinner at Saint Anthony's in Cohasset (see sidebar).

"We're completely self-funded," said team manager Charlotte Barszewski, a junior at Cohasset High who said she was "inspired to help [the team] out."

"It's amazing in this economy to start up a team and keep it funded," Barszewski said.

The girls have managed so far by holding a car wash and selling tickets for this Friday's dinner.

"We're happy to have the team," said Farren, "and we're going to fundraise till we drop."

In addition to spearheading the team's fundraising campaign, the Farrens have also reached out to local "hockey families" to donate gently used gear to the girls, setting up a donation bin on their front lawn. So far, these donations have outfitted 11 of the players.

"We've tried to keep [the program] as cost-efficient as possible," Farren said.

The team has also benefited from sharing the ice with Hingham High School at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham, where the "Co-Han" team practices twice a week. The rink owners at Rockland's Bavis Arena have also been accommodating, said Coyle.

Getting ice time in this area, where the sport is especially popular, is "tough," Coyle explained.

"We have very cooperative, awesome rink owners for the girls' programs," said Coyle. "We appreciate what everyone's done for us."

With local support and an 18-game season ahead of them, it seems the Co-Han "Skipping Indians" are off to a good start.

The team has joined the Southeastern Massachusetts Girls' Hockey League and will be squaring off against teams from as nearby as Scituate and as far as Dennis-Yarmouth.

Both Coyle and Ford credit Beal's dedication as coach for getting the team off the ground and onto the ice.

"We got the right person running the team in Deb Beal," said Ford, adding that Beal has previously been named the Boston Globe's "coach of the year" for soccer. "She's the type of person who's very patient and a good teacher; she's the right person to have in that role. With a young program, you want someone who's going to be patient and grow the program on a steady basis."

Coyle concurred. "I think Debbie Beal is a great person and has the right attitude for the whole thing," he said. "The big thing with any young team is staying really positive with all the kids."

FUNDRAISER:

Cohasset-Hanover Girls' Hockey Pasta Dinner

The combined girls' hockey team is hosting its second-annual pasta dinner/fundraiser tonight at Saint Anthony's Church Hall, located on 10 Summer St. in Cohasset. Please contact Michelle Cayer at michelle@hernanssalon.com to RSVP; tickets are also available at the door.

The girls will be serving a pasta dinner cooked by Mark Tosi of Pastene Pasta.

The team would like to invite players from the boys' hockey team and their families to come dressed in their jerseys.

Coughlin wins wager against Hull

During last week's annual Thanksgiving Day football game, Cohasset's Town Manager and Board of Selectmen had more to be thankful for besides the Cohasset's Skippers' triumph over the Hull Pirates.

Coughlin placed a friendly wager with Hull's Town Manager Phil Lemnios prior to the game, and the Skippers' victory sealed the deal. Per the terms of the bet, Lemnios will be treating Coughlin and the Cohasset selectmen to a dinner at a venue in Hull.

Coughlin celebrated Cohasset's victory during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting, presenting the board's chairman Ted Carr with the football from the winning game.

STM MONDAY

A quorum of 100 registered voters is needed for the Special Town Meeting to get underway.

Below, some articles of interest:

• Article 1: Amendments to Fiscal 2012 Operating Budget

As the town has been working to "organize its financial division," said Carr, there will be some changes in the budget with "personnel shifting around," as consultants have been hired and will continue working in the financial department into the new year.

• Article 10: Transfer of Funds for Senior Center Needs Assessment

This item was voted on during a recent selectmen meeting during which a few other proposed articles concerning Cohasset's future senior center were taken off the warrant. This needs assessment is a town initiative, according to Rick Stockwood, a communications consultant who works with Cohasset's Social Service League.

"We are inviting our friends to vote in favor of it," Stockwood said. "It's important for the needs assessment to happen so that when this [senior center] gets built, it will get built with the community in mind.

"Coming on Monday and supporting [the article] is about moving it forward," Stockwood concluded. "A quarter of Cohasset's population is 50-plus; there will be a large increase of seniors over the next 10 years. The community can be proactive now."

• Articles 12 & 13: Leases of Town Property for Solar Energy Arrays on the school roof and DPW landfill

The Alternative Energy Committee has partnered with the School Committee to bring about the solar panel project for the roof of the Middle-High school, while also trying to get a solar array built on top of the capped landfill located at 81-91 Cedar Street.

The town could purchase clean energy at a reduced price through a net metering agreement with a solar energy vendor. Upon passing, these articles would allow the town to issue RFPs or RFQs to go out to bid for an energy vendor.

Carr believes this will be a hot topic at Monday's meeting.

"I think the opportunity around developing alternative energy through solar licensing is a terrific opportunity for Cohasset," Carr said. "There's so much open and green space, some articulated areas in town like the DPW center and school roof, for solar panels. It could lower the cost of energy by $100-250,000 per year; it's a huge economic value to everyone in town."

Not to mention an environmentally sound measure, Carr added.

"That's why we're part of the Green Communities Act," said Carr. "The value of exploring these alternative energy opportunities is great for Cohasset."

• Article 15: Transfer to the Sewer Commission Enterprise Fund

The Sewer Commission went before the Board of Selectmen last month to request a capital reserve fund transfer to the commission's enterprise fund to cover excess paving costs that fell outside the project's original scope of work. The project was the Little Harbor sewer expansion, part of a $2 million project, and the board agrees that it makes sense for the town to absorb some of this cost.

Shopping CAN Be Fun!

By Elizabeth Johnson

Before

After

Black Friday has come and gone. You either conquered the crowds to reap the benefits of discounts and sales or avoided it all like the plague.

What else do you avoid shopping for? See if any of these sound familiar: Do you take your daughter to the mall but never try on anything for yourself? Do you wear the same 2 or 3 pairs of pants because you fear the size you'll need to buy if you go to a store for new ones? Are shoes the only thing you focus on because, well, your feet don't change sizes if you gain 10 lbs.?

Are you left wondering, "Can shopping for clothes EVER be pleasant?"

Of course it can! Clothes shopping can be enjoyable under the right circumstances. When you head out with a positive self-image, a concept of how you want your personality to shine, and an understanding of your body's natural shape, trying on new outfits can be a very enjoyable experience! It is the opportunity to see your character, individuality and creativity reflect back at you in the mirror. You can create whatever canvas you want for yourself: sporty, sexy, chic, sheer...

If you want to experience the pleasure, ease and reward of clothes shopping for a body you feel comfortable and confident about, Get In Shape For Women is your solution.

"Get In Shape For Women is a transformation studio for women where we offer small group personal training," explains President and CEO Brian Cook. "As opposed to one-on-one training that can feel solitary and repetitive, our group training is dynamic and supportive with 4 women working with a personal trainer towards a common goal of improved health and fitness."

Get In Shape For Women offers the support and accountability that is so hard to come by during the holidays. The certified staff schedules appointments, motivates you through your workouts, and supports you with nutrition guidelines and one-on-one sessions. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com.

Client Colette Lawrence says, "For over eight years I only talked about cutting back in my dietary habits and working out. I have always struggled with having self-discipline to go to the gym. After one last failed and frustrating shopping experience, I was now motivated, not to mention I was approaching fifty years old.

I walked into Get In Shape for Women and quickly realized this is exactly what I needed. The workouts are scheduled, divided by time with a trainer and time on your own, as well as having bi-weekly weigh-ins and motivational personnel. All of these things fit my need to be held accountable.

I am very proud that my recent shopping spree with my daughter was a pleasant experience. In six months I lost twenty pounds, ten percent of my body fat and three jean sizes. I have lots of energy and have never been in better shape. Thank you, Get In-Shape for Women."

OUR VIEW

Please check egos at the door

If we had our druthers then when voters check in at Monday's Special Town Meeting there would also be a box to check that the voter had left his or her ego at the door.

We could envision a huge coat closet where one could pick up their ego on the way out. We wonder how many would turn up in the Police Beat as missing? But we digress.

Let's face it: Cohasset has always been a place where large personalities, big egos, arrogance and a sense of entitlement have found a home. That is not so say that all Cohasseters fall into those categories – but they are substantial enough in number to make a statement.

Lately, in our view, personality clashes have become the norm at some town government meetings. We find this totally unnecessary.

Can we put our egos and staunch beliefs about the "right" way things should operate aside just long enough to allow some fresh air in the room?

The town is in a financial mess, according to many town officials. We can play the blame game or get down to business.

Surely with all the intelligence around – there should also be enough common sense – where everyone can come together and work things out.

We encourage everyone to attend Monday's Special Town Meeting and try to become part of the solution, not part of the problem.

This week we had hoped to write an editorial about the Norman Rockwell-esque Village Fair but had to put that pen aside to address the growing smudge on that picturesque scene.

Toys for Tots drives

• Cohasset Police are joining with the Marine Corps for the annual Toys for Tots campaign through Dec. 24. New toys and games can be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters, on Elm Street, 24 hours a day, and seven days a week. Toys and games should not be wrapped.

• Conlon Chiropractic, 8 Brewster Road, is a drop off location for Toys for Tots. Drop off donations of new, unwrapped toys at the office from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, now through Dec. 15.

Commissioner clarifies sewer 'deficit'

The article last week about the Town's Finance Department was a bit short of the mark regarding the Sewer Commission's finances. We have two distinct areas of financial management responsibility: the operations budget and costs associated with the recent sewer project. It was correctly mentioned that the Sewer Operations Budget closeout for FY11 was in the black. We finished the year on the plus side of the ledger with some free cash and net retained earnings contribution.

Dan Sullivan was quoted as saying there was a $640,000 deficit on the Sewer Project books. Your readers need to know that this apparent "deficit" is the result of erroneous booking of costs either not associated with the sewer project or costs which should have been shared with the Town's accounts or the Water Commission. We have been trying to reconcile the Town's books vis-a-vis the Sewer Project for the past 14 months, and have not been able to complete that task because of the extent of the mess in the Town's accounting. We have a commitment from Mike Coughlin that this reconciliation will be at the top of the list following Special Town Meeting. I can assure all our customers and interested citizens that when the reconciliation is finished, the sewer project will be substantially within the authorization passed by Town Meeting. There will be no deficit in the sewer capital account.

Water, sewer bills driving folks away

I would like to add my two cents to the problems of Cohasset's water and sewer management:

I am writing from the perspective of a resident whose water bill is 10 times what it was 15 years ago. The expense that was voted in has terrible consequences on many of the elderly who are living on limited income. I think it will drive many out of town.

Most of the discussion in the Mariner is about the billing between the Town and the schools and how they are billed by the Water Department but I find there is little discussion about the increase of the costs for the Grinder Pumps. I am billed $500 per year for a Grinder Pump which the Department believes will fail. I am also billed $35 as a quarterly charge. Why a quarterly charge? Does it cost $35 to send out the bills each quarter?

Also I believe some are upset because some who have not paid are going to have their water turned off. I think that is outrageous. It may be a form of protest about the mismanagement but should be settled in a civil manner Not turning off their water. Your rules and regulations are not a place to hide mismanagement.

The last Newsletter update mentioned that the legal bills concerning the Bear Hill Tank came to $50,000. The legal bills that the Water Dept. incurred are a mystery to me. How much did the Water Dept. spend on legal fees when the Town fought Barry and the landfill? I think that battle went on for years.

Every citizen should attend Town Meeting Monday.

Atlantica's Thanksgiving Feast, superb!

On Tuesday, Nov. 22, the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor continued a popular tradition by offering a delicious Thanksgiving feast for the seniors of the South Shore Community Center. Some members of the Cohasset Common Tai Chi members assembled for the feast and would like to extend our thanks to the chef Garry Payne and recognize the generosity of Joe and Janet Campbell.

The volunteer wait staff some of which were from the Cohasset High school impressed us with their efficiency and friendliness and added pleasure to this event.

Campbells, Atlantica staff truly appreciated

This time of year we give thanks for gifts received, and at Cohasset Elder Affairs, we'd like to express our gratitude to Joe and Janet Campbell and the dedicated staff and volunteers from Atlantica Restaurant. Through their efforts, over 100 seniors celebrated an early Thanksgiving overlooking the scenic waters of Cohasset Harbor. Guests enjoyed a traditional turkey dinner; replete with "all the fixings," conversation and camaraderie, along with views stunning views of Cohasset Harbor.

Through the dedication of individuals like Joe and Janet, Cohasset offers a welcoming environment for seniors, and retains an engaged and active group of elders.

Please accept our gratitude and appreciation for offering your time and location for such a well-received event.

VETERANS

Iraq/Afghanistan illnesses

JOE MCELROY

Nine infectious diseases associated with military service in Southwest Asia or Afghanistan during the Gulf War and other conflicts in Iraq from August 2, 1990 to the present and in Afghanistan on or after Sept. 19, 2001 are categorized as "presumptive." Most of these diseases must be diagnosed within one year of return from service, though some conditions may manifest later. To obtain disability benefits, veterans only have to show service in Southwest Asia or Afghanistan, and a diagnosis of one of the nine diseases within the designated time after service. This expedites processing time.

The conditions covered are: Brucellosis, Campylobacter jejuni, Coxiella burnetii(Q fever), Malaria, Mycobacterium tuberculosis, Nontyphoid Salmonella, Shigella,. Visceral leishmaniasis, and West Nile Virus. Eligible veterans may apply for benefits at http://vabenefits.vba.va.gov/vonapp. Both health care and service-connected compensation may be possible.

Burn pit exposure to related illnesses is still under study. The study addresses burn pit areas in which jet fuel is used to burn refuse. Sometimes the refuse included plastics, metals, rubber, chemicals, petroleum, medical and human waste. Short-term health effects include burning eyes, nose and throat irritation, cough, short-term nausea, headaches and skin rash. The long-term health effects are currently undetermined, but are being studied. Your Veterans' Agent is available to answer questions and assist in initiating claims.

MAKING TRACKS

Salt being stored in the salt shed.

Ready for winter whenever it arrives

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

...Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow — This phrase, from a famous wintertime song may sound familiar to you. But, it portends of things to come. This is the time of year when the DPW begins their actions in preparation for their winter road tasks. Cohasset was fortunate that the snow scare we had several weeks ago never materialized. But, it will catch up with us sooner or later. Today, we thought we'd give you an insider's look at the details and planning that the DPW needs to undertake for their wintertime roadwork.

So, who can guess how many miles of road they must plow, salt and sand around our little Town? The number may amaze you. To make it easy, we'll give you the answer. Cohasset has about 38 miles of accepted Town roads and another 12 miles of private ways that they plow and keep open during the winter. That's a total of 50 miles of roadway. To accomplish this, the Town uses nine of its own trucks with plows and 12 private plow trucks used, only when necessary.

There are two key pieces of equipment that are used to keep the roads clear. The first of these is very obvious, the plow. The second is the sander. Most of the plows have been set up with a quick connect/disconnect means. That is, the truck only needs to drive up to the plow, as it sits, and let their attachment point automatically engage the plow. To disengage the plow, the operator needs to pull a couple of levers to effect a disconnect. This gives the DPW the maximum flexibility in how they use their trucks. The plows can be hooked up at the last minute, and be ready to go. Otherwise, the truck is not encumbered with a plow until it is needed.

As a matter of general interest, the plows that service our main roads are 10-1/2 to 11 feet wide. But, since they are carried at an angle the really can't plow the full lane width. That's why you will often see two trucks operating in tandem. This allows them to cover the full lane width and a bit more. One truck would cover less than one lane by itself. Smaller plow trucks are used on smaller roads and private ways so that they can follow the twists and turns of some of these smaller roads.

Most of our sanders are stainless steel, which gives a much longer life than the regular steel bodies that we used to use. However, even though the sander bodies now hold up significantly better than they used to, there are components that do need to be replaced and maintained. These are the hydraulic pumps and hydraulic motors that turn the rotating disks that fling the salt onto the roadway. You will have to forgive us a bit here. When we talk about sand, we are actually referring to a mixture of salt and sand, which is what we apply to the roads. The sand is for bite on the ice while, of course, the salt is for its melting properties. The sanders are loaded or unloaded onto the truck beds when needed, like the plows. When there is no threat of snow in the forecast, the sanders are removed and the trucks are used for their normal uses. This again, gives the Town the most flexibility.

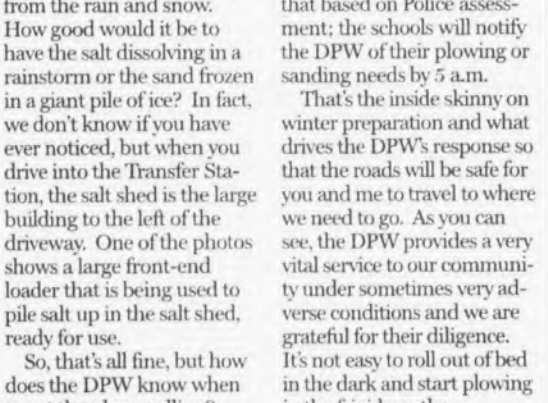
The salt and sand are stored in our salt shed where they are under a roof, away from the rain and snow. How good would it be to have the salt dissolving in a rainstorm or the sand frozen in a giant pile of ice? In fact, we don't know if you have ever noticed, but when you drive into the Transfer Station, the salt shed is the large building to the left of the driveway. One of the photos shows a large front-end loader that is being used to pile salt up in the salt shed, ready for use.



So, that's all fine, but how does the DPW know when to get the plows rolling? They don't just stick their head out of the window and look for snow. The whole process is actually initiated by the Police Department. If you think about it, this makes the most sense. They are the only Town department that has wheels on our roads 24-7 every day. When they sense that that the roads have become unsafe, they call the DPW to mobilize. Generally for overnight snows, depending on when the snow actually starts, the DPW usually gets their plows on the road when 2 to 4 inches of snow has fallen. Of course, later snow events will be responded to more promptly. Sanding is done under icing conditions and after the plowing is completed. The schools also have an agreement with the DPW that based on Police assessment; the schools will notify the DPW of their plowing or sanding needs by 5 a.m.

That's the inside skinny on winter preparation and what drives the DPW's response so that the roads will be safe for you and me to travel to where we need to go. As you can see, the DPW provides a very vital service to our community under sometimes very adverse conditions and we are grateful for their diligence. It's not easy to roll out of bed in the dark and start plowing in the frigid weather.

COMMENTARY

Some thoughts about governance of Cohasset

TOM CALLAHAN

One response of the Board of Selectmen to its removal of three Conservation Commissioners is to create yet another committee to study the structure of town government. But for too many elected boards, there is nothing inherently wrong with the current structure. The problem now, as can be said of most problems of the last 20 years, are intangible not structural. Transparency, competence, professional management and better inter-town communication would go a long way to solving most problems. However, some ideas:

1. Accept that change must be made, since many problems are frustratingly recurring.

2. Accept that "this-is-a-small-town" and "these-are-our-friends-and-neighbors" can no longer explain away boards and major problems, or be a controlling governing philosophy.

3. If this new group in fact recommends changes, actually consider them! As recently as a year ago, such a committee created to respond to the still foremost problem in the town recommended a change in governance, i.e., the elimination of elected water and sewer commissions. That suggestion has fallen on deaf ears.

4. Finally pass a recall petition process.

5. Consider a representative town meeting to address low attendance and meeting-stuffing.

6. Recognize that past town manager problems were personal or personality/management style in nature, not a function of the position.

7. Support having the kind of manager that is hands on, won't defer responsibility, and is intent on effectuating change over the cries of boards' self-importance and "this is the way we've always done it". Unfortunately, but predictably, that bristles some in the various town fiefdoms and there is already tangible resistance.

7. Have the Town Manager make all board appointments, as other town managers do, unburdened by sentiment or agendas.

8. Have citizens (& BOS) show more respect to town boards. Speaking from experience, this is the root of the problem with Con-Comms, for ex. (in Cohasset and elsewhere). The Cat Dam issue was one of bad treatment by certain abutters and BOS, not the other way around.

10. Eliminate all non-required elected positions, since one real, demonstrative and historical governance problem in Cohasset is having too many chiefs. Separate elected status leads directly to the fiefdom mentality that results in hidden problems and internal conflict. We need but one chief executive and one chief administrator.

10. State law unfortunately creates the present system of having two almost independent governments within one town, school-side and town-side. What could occur is improved communication, with the BOS and School Comm. each creating a permanent liaison to the other, and the new town manager and new superintendent institutionalizing regular meetings between them.

11. Eliminate any duplication of services between school-side and town-side. Cohasset is too small for it. Consolidate financial functions (as we once did). This would facilitate communication between the Superintendent, Town Manager and Finance Director, and allows all finances on both sides of government to see the light of day.

12. Support modern, coordinated financial software and systems in all departments. This is a core problem. And hire a qualified, competent new Finance Director.

13. Changes in the utilities have been long recommended by many in-town and out-of-town observers (this author @ 2000, Mass. Muni. Assoc. @ 2006, outside auditor and Water Study Grp. 2010). I would suggest that going back to the '80s thru to the present, these two boards and their inefficiencies, incompetence and/or possible wrongdoing have cost the town an inordinate amount of money. It is time to end it. Combine the departments into a new consolidated department, under the direct management of the Town Manager and a superintendent.

14. Combine the utility boards and other public works boards (especially the Senior Housing Committee, which I fear is another financial problem in the making absent professional management) into an appointed Public Works Committee. The PWC would vet all public works projects and utility rates. The utilities would continue to be self-supporting via enterprise funds, but rate calculation and daily management would now lie with the professionals.

14. Consolidate Capital Budget and Advisory Committees into a Finance Committee of 11 members (BOS appoint six, Moderator two, School Comm. three). Bringing in the School Comm. as a co-appointing authority, unprecedented, makes it a stakeholder and the new Committee can become the vehicle through which negotiation of the budget is achieved.

16. BOS members need to meet more frequently with the boards they are liaisons to, and avoid making judgments about them from one contentious hearing.

17. Because of state law, the land use boards necessarily have a degree of independence, but some effort at a common land use vision should be made, avoiding surprises, conflict, and unnecessary litigation.

FOR THE RECORD

The voice of the people

GREGORY MATHIS

Community journalism isn't just baby announcements, school lunch menus and cute photos from the school play.

There's a lot more happening in the community that readers want to know about, especially with regards to how their hard-earned tax money is being spent.

We don't have the staff to conduct extensive investigative reports, but that doesn't mean we can't keep an eye on what town officials are doing or not doing.

Part of the media's role in society is being a watchdog of government. That doesn't just mean the president of the United States, the governor of Massachusetts or big government in general. And these watchdog principles don't just apply to the big media companies such as the New York Times or Washington Post.

While we're not likely to break Watergate, a lot happens at the local level that needs to be kept in check. Sometimes we do a good job with that, and sometimes we could do a better job.

Questioning authority is what helped build our country and helped build the power of the press. Think of where we would be if we didn't have a forum to challenge what our government officials say or do.

That's why I was surprised recently by the reaction from readers in one of the towns we cover who were upset that we were questioning the use of taxpayer money to send out a brochure that promoted a particular political cause and questioned a town board for not posting an important agenda item that led to an influential vote before a special Town Meeting.

It seems the residents were angry because they were expecting us to serve as cheerleaders for the project, but truthfully, neither question we raised had anything to do with the project and everything to do with the process. It had to do with holding town officials accountable to conduct their business in an open and transparent manner as is required by the Open Meeting Law, and to put taxpayers on notice that tax money may have been used for purposes it shouldn't, according to guidelines set forth by the Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

Many communities will be tackling Proposition 2-1/2 overrides and debt exclusions over the next couple years just to retain and maintain services. Some communities will be looking to build new schools as part of the Massachusetts School Building Administration program or other municipal building such as police stations and libraries.

Readers — whether they read a big daily newspaper, a small town weekly newspaper or get their news from the Web — will want to know how their tax money is being spent and why.

We'll continue to do our part and ask those tough questions and demand that local government is conducted above board and is adhering to the many state laws that ensure transparency in government. Readers can do their part by bringing questions or concerns to our attention to be included as part of our Public Service Journalism commitment. Together, we can provide a true public service that will make the community more informed when it comes to these important matters.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

Boston, Mass. and Halifax, Nova Scotia

MARY KENNEDY

November 14, 2011: At 4 p.m. the Canadian ferry Princess of Arcadia, left Digby, Nova Scotia, for a three-hour trip across the Bay of Fundy to Saint John, New Brunswick. On board were the usual passenger cars, motorcycles, long-haul trucks, and, resting on a flatbed trailer, one forty five-foot white spruce tree bound for Boston.

December 6, 1917: At 8:40 a.m. in the harbor of Halifax, capital of Nova Scotia, the Norwegian ship Imo, carrying relief supplies, accidentally collided with the French munitions vessel Mont Blanc, chartered by the French government to carry almost 3000 tons of picric acid, guncotton, and TNT to Europe. (It was the fourth year of World War I). Within minutes, the Mont Blanc caught fire and about twenty minutes later erupted into a gigantic fireball, rising more than a mile high and forming (ironically) a mushroom-shaped cloud. To this day, the greatest accidental man-caused explosion in history. (The atom bomb was not accidental).

Halifax was — literally — devastated. Over one square mile of the city lay in burning ruins, and the working class area called the North End was completely destroyed. All buildings along the shore were obliterated. About 2000 people were killed by fires, collapsed buildings, and debris. Some 9000 people were injured, many permanently blinded by flying glass. Fragments of the Mont Blanc rained down for hours over the whole city. A mile away, large telephone poles were snapped in half like pipe stems in the pressure wave of air caused by the explosion. A giant tidal wave washed away the railway track. In the city of Truro, a distance of 60 miles, glass was blown out of windows. The noise of the explosion could be heard as far away as Prince Edward Island, 130 miles north, and Cape Breton, 220 miles east.

Within hours, news of the disaster was telegraphed to the rest of Canada, England, and the United States. The people of Boston were horrified. Since 1749 when Halifax was founded, both cities had enjoyed a close business relationship relating to the shipping and fish trade. The bond between the two cities was strong. At 10 p.m. on the day of the explosion, a relief train, carrying doctors, nurses, medical supplies, and food, left North Station. Plowing steadily north through heavy snow for 700 miles, it finally arrived at 3 a.m. on December 8. The Nova Scotia medical staff, working non-stop and without sleep for more than 30 hours, were exhausted.

November, 1918: The grateful citizens of Halifax voted to send a Christmas tree to Boston in thanks and remembrance for the immediate response and assistance from the Boston Red Cross and the Mass. Public Safety Committee.

In 1971, the custom was revived, and has continued every year since then.

On Thursday, December 1, 2011, the white spruce was lit on Boston Common to usher in the Christmas season of joy and to celebrate the continuing friendship between two cities.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

HEALTH NOTES

Bring back season of 'good will'

STEVE BOBO

The season for whatever reason has drifted away from its characterization as a religious holiday. Many see this development as a straying away from the true meaning of the season

Mind over Matter — Perhaps the news from the health front is the beginning of the creation of a consistent health policy from the country's leadership, vital because many local health care providers while trying to conform to Federal and State mandates and generally meet conflicting regulations concerning administration of health delivery. An example is that a drug in one state may be illegal to use in another. Resolution of the many provisions of the medical issues listed in the Congressional health bill requires informed oversight at the highest administrative level and will take considerable discussion to resolve. The effort will soon devolve into a series of low-key discussions by knowledgeable experts about what's possible and presented as a series of statements of policy about health issues, which we all will use for guidance.

Fortunately, the flu problem is less severe than expected and the numbers of ill are small, vaccine is now generally available for all; more than enough for our kids and most others wishing to receive it. Continue to check the Board of Health for the latest updates about administration of the vaccine at schools and at flu clinics by the Town. Every-thing should be well organized into 2012.

Welcome for many has been the scaling back by the media and many stores of Christmas to a time after Thanksgiving. People practicing all faiths deplore the commercialization of a religious holiday. Nevertheless, Dec. 25 has become a more widespread celebration. The term ecumenical now embraces all faiths and an acceptance of Christian religion as only one facet of religious worship by reverent people. Other religions, equally devout with different sets of ideals, and nearly all of the older religions contain elements of love and devotion similar to the Christian precepts and most contain the element in one form or another of gift giving to demonstrate devotion at year's end.

The season for whatever reason has drifted away from its characterization as a religious holiday. Many see this development as a straying away from the true meaning of the season. However in view of the many devout people practicing a diversity of religions, most of whom participate in celebrations this time of year, it can be posited the holiday season, although touted, sometimes too commercially by the billion or so Christians on earth of the seven billion living here, and still devoutly practiced by many, has gathered a considerable non-ecumenical following.

Recognize other faiths: We agree that the purpose of adopting a faith is to learn to accomplish the betterment of mankind. Then our end of year holiday is an appropriate time for those of all other faiths Jewish, Islam, Shinto, and all others older and more recent, to celebrate, including such faiths as Baha'i, Druze, Hasidism, and many, un-recognized by English speaking people. Now is also a good time to include those who don't overtly worship in the end-of-season festivities.

Communication devices and systems including tablets, cell phones, the Web, and the information they carry among with all forms of communication used by these devices in the "cloud" have changed the character of the season, its events, and even its literature and art – and many will perceive an improvement. Traditionalists must concede that much of what the media is presenting now is fresh and attractive and use of the old standbys in a different context has improved even the best of the old tales. Scrooge, Santa, Jack Frost, reindeer and elves have all appeared in often different and refreshing form.

To make the season what it should be in this cloud of increased communication, too much data and too many facts, we need a broader look at the way we bind together all people in a closer relationship of charity, forgiveness, love and Good Will.

Casinos and the Music Circus

How the new legislation could impact local entertainment venues

"The bill is balanced, and we believe that the Music Circus will continue to be an economic engine for the town of Cohasset during the summer months."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This past August, Tropical Storm Irene forced the South Shore Music Circus to cancel its final act of the summer – the classic rock band Styx – and end its season prematurely. But tempestuous weather may not be the only force that could take talent away from the venue.

Officials around the state have voiced their concern that the controversial casino bill, signed into law by Governor Deval Patrick last Tuesday, Nov. 22, will negatively impact small businesses such as restaurants and community theaters. Specifically, there has been fear that places like Cohasset's South Shore Music Circus will be unable to attract the same caliber of entertainers that the new casino venues will pull in.

"National studies show that casinos draw from other forms of retail and entertainment venues — there will be an impact to local business," said Senator Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, Republican, who voted against the bill. "There will definitely be an impact on the Music Circus because casinos [also] use musical acts. Those independent venues will have a hard time competing with that. We tried to take steps in the bill [to help small venues] but don't know how effective those will be."

State Representative Garrett Bradley of Hingham, Democrat, voted in favor of the bill. A "longtime supporter of expanded gaming," Bradley told the Mariner he believes the new casinos will minimally impact independent venues.

Bradley pointed out the language in the bill that limits the amount of seating the casino venues will be allowed to have; it must be either less than 1,000 seats or over 3,500.

The 60-year-old South Shore Music Circus seats 2,250. Those lobbying to protect small venues like the Music Circus were hoping the margins would be a little less similar, according to Ted Carr, Cohasset's Board of Selectmen chairman who formerly worked for the state in the economic development office.

Carr was "one of many people" who "worked together to try to affect change in the legislation to put a moratorium on the seats in the venues." Carr said he advised the South Shore Music Circus, which also worked closely with the Massachusetts Cultural Council and Representative Bradley, to lobby for protections in the bill.

Cohasset Town Manager Mike Coughlin was also an advocate for local theaters such as the Music Circus concerning the casino bill.

"Thanks to the work of the leadership of the South Shore Music Circus and chairman of the board Ted Carr, they were able to lobby the legislature to protect smaller venues such as the Music Circus," Coughlin said. "They not only lobbied for the town really heavily, but also established a coalition with other theaters, including the Hanover Theater in Worcester."

The Hanover Theater was given $6 million in incentives from the state for renovations, said Carr. "At the end of the day, this allows these venues to do what they do best — provide quality entertainment and to continue to function and compete."

Both Carr and Coughlin believe the lobbying was "ultimately successful."

"The bill is balanced, and we believe that the Music Circus will continue to be an economic engine for the town of Cohasset during the summer months," Coughlin said.

Carr wanted to make it clear that the South Shore Music Circus was not concerned with making a profit.

"The South Shore Music Circus also funds 135 local non-profits, the majority of them in Cohasset," Carr said. "If they were no longer here, those other non-profits would also suffer."

Despite the scare, Carr said, "the Music Circus is alive, well and vibrant. They are a well-operated organization, and there's no issue around the South Shore Music Circus having any difficulty operating."

However, "the gaming legislation, had it remained the way it was, would make it incredibly difficult, if not impossible, for them to have long-term success," Carr said.

While Carr said that the "result is satisfactory to everyone" in the short term, "time will tell" what the long-term effects of the bill will be.

"We did everything we could from the town's perspective," said Carr. "We'll see how it goes, and will be watching closely."

While some are satisfied with the protections in the bill, with supporters like Representative Bradley calling the new law "an overall plus for jobs and revenues," Senator Hedlund is still wary.

"There is a lot more bad with this bill than good," said Hedlund. "If you look at the casino bill, we create all kinds of earmarks of where the money's going; it's a very convoluted process, [but] most will not go back into general fund. The proof is in the pudding in other states; we have those models to look at, and they have affected those [musical] acts. We tried to take some steps [to protect small venues] and we'll see. It's a risk, regardless of good intentions and the steps we tried to take."

A spokesperson from the South Shore Music Circus could not be reached for comment.

SENIOR SCENE

Hummingbird feeder waits for spring

LOUISE SMULLEN

It's hard to believe that Thanksgiving Day is behind us, and we are now in the season of Advent. I hope everyone had an enjoyable day of thanks with friends and family.

A month ago the humming bird feeder was brought in, cleaned and stored away to await the return of the tiny creatures from the Deep South next May, and I'm somewhat of a bird watcher. The backyard feeder is frequented by blue jays, cardinals, red-bellied woodpeckers and a variety of smaller birds. Hanging just outside a dining room window is a thistle feeder, at times covered from top to bottom with finches. For two years in a row a snow bunting stopped to feed there on its way south. On occasion I've been rewarded with the sighting of those illusive scarlet tanagers. One day a pair of strange birds landed on a branch just outside the back door. They stayed just long enough for me to grab my handy field guide and identify them as cuckoos! How exciting it is to spot a new bird!

Our thanks go out to Joe Campbell, manager of the Atlantica restaurant. He and his wife once again served a delicious turkey dinner to about 100 of Cohasset's elders.

We were pleased to have a visit from Paul Murphy, the animal control officer for Cohasset and Norwell. He told of past experiences with both domestic and wild animals in our area. After Hurricane Katrina, Officer Murphy joined others in New Orleans where they rescued five thousand pets.

Questions and discussions followed concerning both pets and animals in the wild. As we all know, some we have locally are deer, foxes, coyotes and fisher cats. The latter is a type of weasel and does a good job of keeping the squirrel population down. They are very vicious.

One of the seminars was presented by the Shawna Diaz and Rebecca Una of the American Red Cross. The subject was "Preparing for the Unexpected," such as hurricanes, tornadoes, fires, and earthquakes. They talked about items for an evacuation kit, which should contain copies of important documents. Also plans should be made for what to do about pets. There are some shelters, which now accept pets, but they are few.

Local author captures shocking true story

Longley to read from two novels

By Erin Dale

When Cohasset resident and architect P. Gifford Longley moved to Massachusetts nine years ago, he began researching his family's genealogy. Little did he know what digging into his past would lead to — the discovery that not only could he trace his roots back to colonial Massachusetts, but that his family harbored a tragic story that was in danger of remaining lost.

"It took moving to Massachusetts to find out that I'm from Massachusetts, historically speaking," said Longley, who grew up in New Jersey.

Mere curiosity moved Longley to join Ancestry.com and begin the journey into the Longley family past. The architect was shocked to learn that, in 1694, several of his ancestors had been brutally murdered in a late-night sneak attack in Groton, Mass. during the French-Indian Wars. William and Deliverance Longley and five of their eight children were killed; the remaining three were taken into captivity by Abenaki Indians.

This shocking event, written in black and white in historical accounts of the area, sparked Longley's imagination, compelling him to dig deeper and flesh out the rest of the story.

"After three years of research," Longley shared, "it dawned on me that I had the makings of a historical novel."

Longley's discoveries brought the story to light, and the architect who admittedly had little writing experience before embarking on his project soon brought the characters to life in two books: "Captive" and "Compelled."

What prompted Longley to start routing through his family's past was a 25-year-old letter from his grandfather that a cousin wanted a copy of. Longley re-read the letter and found himself intrigued by several family facts recounted there.

"At that point, the internet had been invented," recalled Longley. "I joined Ancestry and started plugging in facts."

Not long after, Longley stumbled across the story that would rock his world and shake up his knowledge of his family history.

"My grandfather never knew this story," Longley said. "Four generations before that had no knowledge of it.

It's astonishing to think that a story this significant could have been lost."

The account of 12-year-old John Longley's capture and eventual return to Groton particularly gripped the writer.

"It just called to me," Longley said. "I had to write the story."

"Compelled," then, was the obvious choice for the title of the second novel, according to the author.

"It occurred to me that every one of the characters is being compelled to do something. I felt compelled to write down the story and give it more than raw genealogical data..."
P. Gifford Longley

"It occurred to me that every one of the characters is being compelled to do something," Longley said. "I felt compelled to write down the story and give it more than raw genealogical data — that intensely researched process, trying to get the facts, and putting boots on, hitting the ground and visiting" the places where these events took place.

The architect-turned-author admitted that this project was his first foray into fiction.

"I had flashes" of interest in writing, Longley said, "but was primarily interested in math and science. Somehow I wound up [becoming] an architect, artist and author."

Self-conscious of his writing ability, Longley first began bouncing his ideas off of a "well-written" friend. After spending three to four months drafting "several false starts," Longley had developed a basic outline.

"Armed with the facts" he had thoroughly researched, Longley settled down to write. "It was my goal to bring it to life."

"Captive" and "Compelled" were completed in between sessions with a writers' group Longley started with a few friends and fellow local writers. The author said he was plowing through his books' chapters and would bring something to read to the group every Tuesday night over the course of several months.

During one meeting, one of the group members revealed receiving a publishing contract to write children's books. Once Longley's novel was complete, he began researching publishers and decided to ask his published friend for a recommendation.

Longley sent a query letter and story sample to Tate Publishing; the company quickly requested the entire manuscript. When Longley asked his colleague how long it would take to hear something back, she responded "a few months."

Longley's manuscript was read over a weekend; that Monday, the publishing company held a marketing meeting; before the end of the week, Longley received his publishing contract in the mail.

The contract was obtained, but the work was hardly done. Longley worked with his editor to split his story up into two shorter books, which he was reluctant to do at first.

"It ended up working out," he said. Now, the author likes the books better this way. The first book, he explained, deals largely with the English settlers' perspective, while the second delves further into the natives' side.

Writing this story gave Longley "a sense of Providence, intervention," the author said, which was "a critical thing for me to weave through the story — nothing happens by chance. There are circumstances that led to every event that took place, and eventually led back to the fact that John returned [to Groton]... and why I'm here today."

The author hopes that his story will encourage readers to search into their own family history as well.

On Thursday, Dec. 8 at 7 p.m., Longley will be discussing his books and reading excerpts at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The author said he also plans to read a section from a historical account on the Groton raid in order to juxtapose the "sterile" black and white historical facts with the "flesh and blood" human story of what happened to the Longley family.

Cohasset rolls over Hull

By John R. Johnson
Gatehouse News Service

Cohasset senior running back Kyle Livingstone surpassed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season in Cohasset's 34-6 victory over Hull, helping the Skippers (6-5) to finish the season with a winning record.

Aside from those two milestones, the victory was big for another reason, as it made up for the last time Cohasset stepped on the field at Hull, when the Pirates handed Cohasset their only loss of the season in 2009.

"I was a sophomore cornerback on that team and we still went on to the playoffs, but it just wasn't the same after we lost," said Livingstone. "I wanted to make

Three-way battle for final spot

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

There are three teams that are battling for the final playoff spot in the Fall Season of the Legends Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League with one game left.

The Whalers presently have the final playoff spot by one point over both the Toros and the Crusaders.

They took over the fourth-and-final playoff spot with a 32 save performance by goalie Dan Nason as the Whalers got goals from Scituate's Steve Concannon and Kevin Mackin of Duxbury in their 2-0 win over the Toros.

The Stingers will be the Whalers final opponent as they will come off a 4-2 loss to the first-place Saints.

Mike Ryan scored two goals, while both Paul Murphy and Todd Roach had a goal and an assist each for the Saints in the win. James McNeill added two assists for the Saints, who face the Crusaders in their final game of the regular season.

Scott Kelly and Dave Christensen both of Pembroke had a goal and an assist each for the Stingers. Joe Murray of Norwell added two assists for the Stingers.

The Crusaders got two goals and an assist from Jim Callahan in their 4-4 tie with the Sharks. Scott Mondeau and Mike Simon were the other goals for the Crusaders.

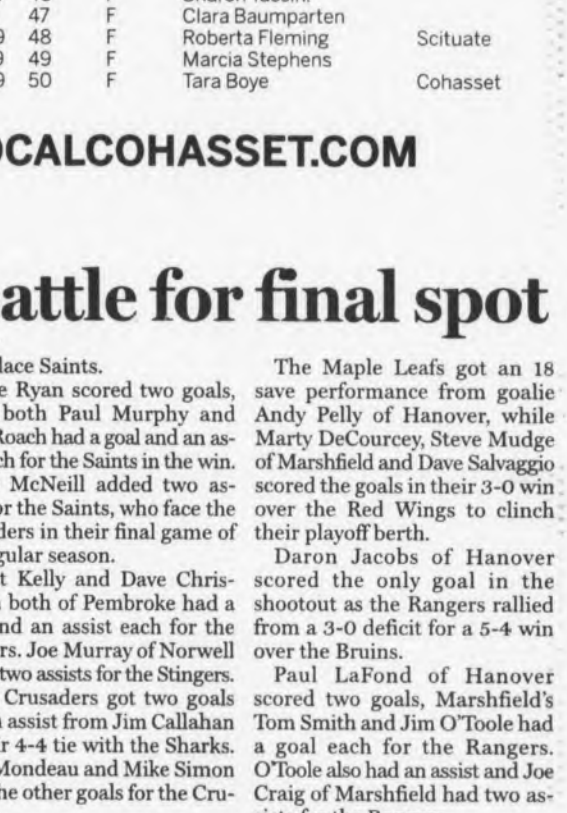
Richard Petrosino of Marshfield and Jay Faherty both had a goal and an assist while Dana Dolabany of Norwell and Tim Cruz also of Marshfield had a goal apiece for the Sharks, who face the Toros in their final regular season game.

The Classics Div. playoff spots are all secured as the Black Hawks, Maple Leafs, Canadiens and Bruins all qualified for the four berths.

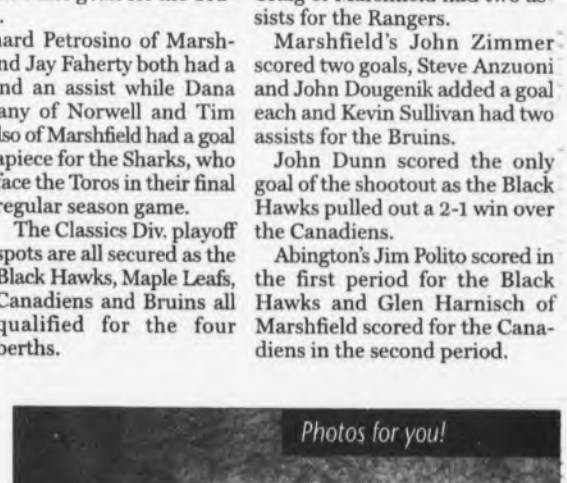
The Maple Leafs got an 18 save performance from goalie Andy Pelly of Hanover, while Marty DeCourcey, Steve Mudge of Marshfield and Dave Salvaggio scored the goals in their 3-0 win over the Red Wings to clinch their playoff berth.

Daron Jacobs of Hanover scored the only goal in the shootout as the Rangers rallied from a 3-0 deficit for a 5-4 win over the Bruins.

Paul LaFond of Hanover scored two goals, Marshfield's Tom Smith and Jim O'Toole had a goal each for the Rangers. O'Toole also had an assist and Joe Craig of Marshfield had two assists for the Rangers.



Marshfield's John Zimmer scored two goals, Steve Anzuoni and John Dougenik added a goal each and Kevin Sullivan had two assists for the Bruins.



John Dunn scored the only goal of the shootout as the Black Hawks pulled out a 2-1 win over the Canadiens.

Abington's Jim Polito scored in the first period for the Black Hawks and Glen Harnisch of Marshfield scored for the Canadiens in the second period.

a statement and make sure that didn't happen again. This is their Super Bowl and it's our Super Bowl, too."

Livingstone's statement included 141 rushing yards and a 20-yard score to put Cohasset up 7-0 early in the second quarter. It marked the fourth consecutive year that Cohasset has had a running back eclipse 1,000 yards.

Cohasset has won two in a row in the series, and took a one-game advantage (13-12) as the teams celebrated the 25th edition of the rivalry.

Cohasset benefited from excellent field position and from six Hull turnovers, including a fumbled punt that allowed the Skippers to take a 14-0 halftime lead when quarterback Jamie Faber scrambled 11 yards for a score with seven seconds left in the second quarter.

"There was a lot of talk going on this week about what happened two years ago," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw. "None of it was derogatory toward Hull, but we expected to win. Hull never gives you anything, so our focus all week was that we couldn't just come here expecting to win. We had to take it to them."

Cohasset did just that, taking a three-touchdown lead on its first series of the second half when Spencer Wakefield scored from 2 yards out. Wakefield opened the drive with gains of 19 and 18 yards.

Hull advanced deep into Cohasset territory on the next possession but couldn't convert on a fourth-and-3. Livingstone broke off a 43-yard run, which was followed by a 39-yard TD pass from Faber to John Collins for a 28-0 Cohasset lead. The Skippers pushed across one more score on a 29-yard scoring run by Mitch McNary. Shane Haggerty kicked four extra points for Cohasset.

The Pirates got on the board late in the game when junior Jon Young followed up a big gainer from Paul Cardoos with a 10-yard TD run.

Holly and jolly at the Jingle Bell Walk

The 17th annual Jingle Bell Walk, sponsored by the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset, took place last Friday, Nov. 25. As tradition holds, the holiday festivities began with Santa and Mrs. Claus arriving at Cohasset Harbor via fishing boat. Check out the fun and photos captured by photographer K.A. MacDonald.

Village Fair has something for everyone!

The Village Fair returns to the Cohasset Common tomorrow, Saturday, December 3rd from 10am to 3pm. The three worshiping communities on the Common join together once again to bring to Cohasset this wonderful town tradition. Proceeds from the event go towards the ministries of First Parish, Second Congregational, and St. Stephen's, as well as to the town-wide charitable organization, Cohasset Appalachian Service Project. Here is what is in store for you when you arrive at the Common on Saturday.

At St. Stephen's, the stone church on the hill overlooking the Common, four unique opportunities await you. The Book Fair has received many generous donations, and thus boasts books numbered in the thousands. Come browse the collection of hardbacks, paperbacks, bestsellers, classics, children's books, audio books, DVDs, and CDs, and purchase a few for gifts or for yourself. When you are finished with the books, amble over to the Bake and Gift Sale. Cookies, fudge, candies, pastries, pies, breads, jellies, sauces, and relishes will abound, as well as small gift items, including beautiful handmade jewelry. After buying all those wonderful baked goods, you'll probably be a bit hungry yourself, so make your way to the Village Kitchen, which will have soup and hot drinks ready for you.

As you shop these three sales upstairs in Walton Rodgers Hall, send your children downstairs to the ASP Secret Room. Children, escorted by an ASP teen volunteer, begin by making a list of those for whom they will be buying gifts. Then, in the "retail area" they can purchase gifts for their siblings and parents (and pets!) that range in price from $1 to $7 each. Finally, they will move through the cashier to the "wrapping room" where they will wrap and label their gifts, ready to put under the tree!

When you are done at St. Stephen's, walk down the hill to the ReUUsable Sale at First Parish's Trueblood Hall. You will be able to browse many gently used items ranging from china to toys, antiques to jewelery, sporting goods to linens. But that's not all: ASP will be at First Parish as well, selling authentic Appalachian crafts in the hallway. Coffee, tea, cider, and donuts will also be available to provide sustenance for your walk across the Common.

At Second Congregational, you'll find the famous Chowder Bar, along with a cheese table, crafts, table, and silent auction. For the children, there is a "Make-it-Yourself" craft table. And once an hour, show up for a Surf & Turf raffle for filet mignon and shrimp. Finally, from 11am to 2pm, go out on the Common and meet Santa Claus.

Thank you in advance for your support of local ministries and the Cohasset ASP. Every year the Village Fair is a fantastic event for the town of Cohasset, and we invite you to come out once again to the Common this Saturday for another fabulous fair. See you there!

GIMME SHELTER

Howie is quite the gentleman

Howie would probably qualify for our senior-to-senior program, which features a reduced rate to seniors who adopt a senior cat.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Howie, an orange, domestic medium hair male feline. He's quite the gentleman: good-natured, 5 year old male cat. Howie, who is five, would love to be in his own home for the holidays. He would probably qualify for our senior-to-senior program, which features a reduced rate to seniors who adopt a senior cat.

Howie would probably be happiest as an only cat, and would make a great companion. Please come and visit Howie. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of HSAR's very adoptable cats and kittens.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

The Kittendales calendar is available either online or at the shelter. It makes a unique holiday gift. There may be a short wait as the calendar sold out at the Hull Holiday Showcase and HSAR has had to re-order.

LIFE AT CHS

So much to talk about!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Hello, Cohasset! It's finally December, but the weather feels more like April or May. When is it going to snow? I think all the seniors would agree with me when I say we should have a snow day as soon as possible...

Can you believe that winter sports have already started? On Monday, the seven winter sports teams started their first practices. Some are still recovering from the grueling sessions intended on whipping athletes back into shape. Others are lucky, and only had a three-day break between sports to keep them up to speed. Regardless of if teams are ready or not, the first scrimmages are already happening, and games begin in just over a week.

The Spinnsheet came out last Wednesday, but the Spinnaker staff is already gearing up for the Holiday issue! It will either come out right before or right after winter break. Local businesses should make sure to buy ad space and anybody interested in writing for the Spinnaker should talk to Editors-in-Chief Whitney Jaffe and Julia Canney.

Peer Leaders met on Friday. High school Leaders went into the middle school for the third session with their classes. Rumors, stereotypes, and bullying were all topics discussed.

The Volunteer Club is going to Cradles to Crayons on December 14th! Talk to Ellie Tedeschi, Isabel Robinson, or Chrissy Secatore if you want to come. Please continue to donate winter clothes, coats, books, and toys. Any and every donation is greatly appreciated.

The Yearbook Club is still accepting new members. There are two meetings every week: one right after school, and one around 7 pm. Be a part of making your high school memories last forever. Underclassmen: all grades are welcome to participate, so come to the next meeting. Seniors: if you still have not submitted your write-ups and pictures, do so as soon as possible!

The American Red Cross Blood Drive is coming to CHS on December 16th. If you are 16, weigh at least 110 pounds, and fit the rest of the requirements, sign up to donate! If you're 17 and really awesome, you can be a Double Red Cell Donor. For males, you must be at least 17, 5 feet 1 inch and weigh 130 pounds. Females must be at least 17, 5 feet 5 inches, and weigh 150 pounds. Remember, 16 year-olds need parental consent to donate, so sign up soon so you have time to get those forms in. See anybody on Student Council for more information.

A quick reminder: AP Exam money is due by the end of January. Each test costs $87. If you do not take the AP Exam, you do not get credit for the class, so make sure you hand in your money before the deadline. Bring your checks into the guidance office.

If anybody has any ideas about Semi or anything else you would like to see student council do, talk to your class representatives! We need ideas to make the school year run smoothly and be more fun and entertaining. But please, be realistic with your requests. The lunch menu, tardy policy, and school schedule are unchangeable.

That's it for this week, Cohasset. May December bring you good tidings!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS. Her column appears monthly during the school year.

PROGRAM AT FIRST PARISH

The December Dilemma addressed

When families are trying to blend holiday traditions, the winter season can feel more like a minefield than a celebration. When the family is attempting to blend different religious heritages as well as particular traditions, decisions like where to go for "the holiday" can become fraught with tension and misunderstanding. And to make it all even harder, time seems to accelerate at this time of year and choices get made in a whirlwind, without time to contemplate, consider, and identify what is most important and space to find creative ways to honor each person's truth.

This holiday season, set aside some time for just that sort of reflection and deliberation. Please join the Rev. Dr. Anita Farber-Robertson, Interim Minister of First Parish of Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 11 from 12:30-2 p.m. for a facilitated conversation on The December Dilemma at the Parish House (23 N. Main St.) of the First Parish of Cohasset Unitarian Universalist Church.

Participants will spend time recognizing how difficult these choices can be and discussing ways in which different religious traditions can be honored with no loss of meaning.

All are welcome, and there is no fee for this program. Participants are asked to RSVP to Sandy Bailey, First Parish Administrator at 781-383-1100, or sbailey@firstparish.org in order to assure sufficient seating. Childcare will be provided.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 12, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Make your holiday preparations one step at a time in order to avoid being overwhelmed and leaving things undone. That confusing family situation continues to work itself out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Ease this year's holiday money pressures by letting your thrifty side guide you as you look for those perfect gifts that typically reflect your good taste and love of beauty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll have a good handle on potential holiday problems if you delegate tasks to family members, friends or co-workers — most of whom will be more than happy to help out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Right now you are especially vulnerable to holiday scams that seek to take advantage of your generosity. Best advice: Check them out before you send out your checks.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The upcoming holiday season gives the Big Cat much to purr about. Relationships grow stronger, and new opportunities loom on the horizon, just waiting to be pounced on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A changing situation brings conflicting advice about how to go forward with your holiday plans. Your best bet: Make the decision you feel most comfortable with.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans get back on track after some confusion about the direction you expected to take. A potentially troublesome money matter needs your immediate attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your holiday preparations are on track. But you need to confront a personal situation while you can still keep it from overwhelming everything else.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Tight financial matters ease a bit during this holiday season. But the sagacious Sagittarian is well-advised to keep a tight hold on the reins while shopping for gifts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't put off making decisions about this year's holiday celebrations, despite the negative comments you've been getting from several quarters. Do it NOW!

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The holidays will bring new friends and new opportunities. Meanwhile, be careful to use your energy wisely as you go about making holiday preparations.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's good news coming from a most unlikely source. And it could turn out to be one of the best holiday gifts you have had in years. Remember to stay positive.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

VILLAGE FAIR

Quentin, Maeve, and Emma Humphrey have a talk with Santa Saturday afternoon in Cohasset during the Cohasset Village Fair. For more photos, see page 30. PHOTO/CHRIS SHORES

A Cohasset holiday tradition

The Village Fair returned to the Cohasset Common last Saturday. The festive event included the traditional used-book sale at St. Stephen's; the ASP Secret Room where youngsters could shop for friends and family; bake and gift sale; Second Congregational Church's famous chowder; a Rusty Skippers concert; the ReUUsable Sale at the First Parish House; a visit from Santa Claus, and so much more! Every year the Village Fair is a fantastic event for the town of Cohasset. For more see page 30.

Voters in 'yes' mood

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Solar panels, a study for a new senior center, and unpaid water bills were hot topics at the Special Town Meeting (STM) on Monday, Dec. 5 at the High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Cohasset citizens began filing in at 7 p.m. A quorum of 100 voters was needed for the meeting to start; this was reached at 7:19 p.m. with 174 registered voters.

Monday night marked Town Manager Michael Coughlin's first Town Meeting in Cohasset. He told the crowd that while he is only four months into the job, he hopes to remain in Cohasset at least another four years.

Also in attendance was U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, who currently represents the state's ninth Congressional District. If the State Legislature passes its redistricting plan, Cohasset will become part of the ninth district in 2012.

The crowd broke into applause when Town Meeting

Water Dept. contract up for renewal

Commission shows selectmen possible plans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio has his way, the subject of water department billing will never come up during a Town Meeting again.

DeCaprio, along with fellow water commissioners Chris Seebeck and Leonora Jenkins, shared a comprehensive presentation detailing an updated contract for the water department during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

The presentation made the claim that the department's problems can be traced back to their current contract with American Water Works, which is up in 2012.

DeCaprio said the department does not have an operational problem and should have no trouble paying its bills.

"The message is clear," said DeCaprio. "With $4.7 million in revenue and a $600,000 operating costs, we don't have a revenue problem."

The messiest issues in the water department date back to 2009, DeCaprio explained, during which the department's operator contract increased by $336,000 from fiscal year 2008 to FY'09.

Toys for Tots drives in Cohasset

Mission
The mission of the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots Program is to collect new, unwrapped toys and distribute those toys as Christmas gifts to needy children.

About
The Marine Toys for Tots Foundation enjoys one of the best programs to support ratios within the nonprofit world. More than 98 percent of monetary donations go to their mission of providing toys, books and other gifts to less fortunate children. The 2 percent, which is spent on support, principally covers fundraising expenses — not one donated dollar goes to pay for salaries or any other manpower costs. (Source: toysfortots.org)

Local drop-offs
• The Cohasset Police Department has joined with the Marine Corps for the annual Toys for Tots campaign. New toys and games can be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters, on Elm Street, 24 hours a day, and seven days a week though Dec. 24. Toys and games should not be wrapped. For more information, call the station at 781-383-1212.
• Conlon Chiropractic, 8 Brewster Road, is a drop off location for Toys for Tots. Drop off donations of new, unwrapped toys at the office from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, now through Dec. 15. For more information, call the office at 781-383-1616.

Assessors request info

Cohasset Board of Assessors has made several requests for Income and Expense information from rental property owners and commercial and industrial property owners for fiscal 2012. In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 59, Section 38D, failure to comply with the Assessors' request will result in a $250 fine assessed to the fiscal 2012 tax bill.

The Board of Assessors will accept Income and Expense information through Dec. 16, 2011, from owners who wish to avoid the $250 fine. The Board of Assessors intends to assess the fine for those who do not provided a completed form by the final deadline. For more information, call the Assessors' Office at 781-383-4114.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

POLICE BEAT

Spate of recent car crashes

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• Police responded to a two-car crash at 8:30 a.m. on Monday (Dec. 5) at the lights at Beechwood Street and Route 3A.

Police said a 31-year-old Cohasset man in a 1996 Volvo sedan was traveling west on Beechwood and had the green light to go across Route 3A when he was struck by a 1998 Mazda RX7, operated by a 70-year-old Scituate man, that ran the red light.

Both cars were towed; there were no reported injuries. The Scituate man, who said he was blinded by the morning sun, was cited for failure to stop for a red light.

• There was a three-car, chain-reaction action at 9:16 a.m. on Monday (Nov. 28) on King Street by Dunkin Donuts. Police said a 2006 Nissan Murano, operated by a 56-year-old Cohasset woman, had slowed in traffic; the car behind her, a 2004 Toyota Prius, operated by a 77-year-old Cohasset woman also slowed. The third car, a 2008 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset boy, struck the Prius, pushing it into the Nissan. He was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

The only vehicle that had to be towed was the Prius. No one was transported to the hospital.

• At 2:35 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 30) a parking lot accident in Shaw's Plaza was reported. Police said a 73-year-old Hingham woman in a brand-new 2011 Infiniti G-25 with all the bells and whistles hit the gas pedal instead of the brake and ran into three unoccupied cars. The other cars were a 1991 BMW sedan owned by a 23-year-old Scituate woman; a 2008 Toyota sedan, owned by a 36-year-old Brockton woman, and a 2003 Ford Taurus, owed by a 42-year-old Brockton woman.

Police believe the Hingham woman may have been unfamiliar with the operation of her new car but have asked the Registry to conduct a medical evaluation. The Infiniti was towed.

• At 8:48 a.m. on Thursday (Dec. 1), there was a two-car accident at Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. Police said a 2005 Honda CRV, operated by a 51-year-old Hull woman, was headed east on Jerusalem Road and went through the stop sign at Forest Avenue hitting a 1999 Nissan Altima, operated by a 75-year-old Cohasset woman. Both cars were towed. The Hull woman was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign.

Out-dated

The Board of Health was notified after police last week received a complaint about out-dated food products at the Mobil Mart on Sohier Street. Some of the milk had expiration dates as far back as August, police said.

Missing keys

The town building department had to change all the locks in the library after a contractor lost the master keys last week, police said.

Cell phone

A caller reported to police last Wednesday (Nov. 30) that she believed her iPhone valued at $300 had been stolen at a house party in town. Police asked her to contact the party host and obtain a copy of the guest list.

Email scam

Police are investigating an apparent email scam that was reported last week by a local resident. Police said the 46-year-old woman received an email on Nov. 27 asking that she become a "secret shopper" and complete evaluations on Western Union

The woman replied, expressing interest, and received a Fedex package with two money orders for $925 each (a total of $1850), police said. She was asked to cash the money orders and return $1500 to the company which said she could keep the $350. She took the money orders to Bank of American which recognized them as bogus. She then contacted police.

Harassing calls

A 61-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Friday that she had been receiving harassing phone calls. The caller's number was not coming up on her caller ID, police said. The caller would say or leave the message "help me, help you" and then laugh, police said. She was advised about how to contact Verizon security, police said.

Coffee thrown

A 65-year-old Cohasset man reported to police on Sunday (Dec. 4) that he was walking when a vehicle drove by and the occupant threw a cup of coffee at him. The incident occurred at about 9:10 a.m.

NEWS UPDATE

Tax classification hearing held over to next week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen has yet to take a vote, but it looks like the town will stick with a single tax rate again this year.

At Tuesday's selectmen's meeting, the Board of Assessors recommended that Cohasset adopt a uniform tax rate for all property classes, as it has always done. A split rate between residential and commercial properties would be "bad for the community," according to Deputy Assessor Mary Quill, because the rate would be so much higher for commercial properties that it could discourage businesses from coming into town. The assessors did recommend a small commercial exemption, a split rate between commercial and industrial classes.

The town's total property value is over $2.4 billion, said Quill. Only 7.1 percent of this valuation is commercial, industrial and personal, meaning that nearly 93 percent of the tax burden lies with residential property owners.

Quill reported during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting that the proposed tax rate for fiscal year 2012 is $11.92, up from FY 2011's rate of $11.59. This rate still needs to be certified by the Department of Revenue. Therefore, the hearing was left open until next week's selectmen meeting, during which the board is expected to vote and set the tax rate.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Signups sell out in record time

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Here is a scene from the Cohasset 2011 Triathlon. Race Director Bill Burnett points out that the triathlon benefits Cohasset by encouraging volunteerism, bringing business and visitors into town, and promoting a healthy lifestyle. COURTESY PHOTO

The Cohasset Triathlon is still over six months away, but when registration opened on December 1, the event's organizer Bill Burnett reported that it experienced the fastest sell-out in its six-year history.

Not only did the June 24, 2012 event sell out — it did it fast. Burnett said registration was full within 50 minutes of going live, and would have gone faster if the website had not become bogged down. Some folks compared the sign-up process to trying to purchase tickets for a rock concert, he said.

The triathlon will see 850 individuals in 30 relays racing on foot, bicycle and in the ocean; 200 of the race's participants are from Cohasset, Burnett said, making town residents the largest contingent in the event.

Burnett is grateful for the strong show of support in Cohasset.

"I have been approached by nearly 75 people — Cohasset residents and triathlon participants — who want to be part of the process to ensure the triathlon is a staple event for Cohasset for years to come," Burnett stated in an email.

The key purpose of this race is a charitable one, and Burnett wants to focus especially on ways the race can give back to the town of Cohasset. The triathlon has raised more than $75,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) over the last five years, according to Burnett. Last year, the triathlon also donated $4,000 to the Cohasset Food Pantry. Burnett hopes to partner with the food pantry again this year.

The triathlon also benefits Cohasset by encouraging volunteerism, bringing business and visitors into town, and promoting a healthy lifestyle, Burnett said.

"People feel like they are giving back to the community through the event," said Burnett. "We live in a very healthy, active community. The racers come back [each year]— they absolutely love this thing."

The triathlon made the news recently after Burnett approached the Cohasset Board of Selectmen with possible date changes for next year's race. After sharing ideas and holding discussions with the local clergy and Sandy Beach Association, the Sunday, June 24 date was arrived on; the event usually takes place on the fourth Sunday in June.

Both Burnett and members of Cohasset clergy were hoping to change the event to a Saturday to better accommodate Sunday morning church services. However, the MS Ride takes place on Saturday, June 23, utilizing the same roads that the triathlon would. That date was quickly thrown out.

The Sandy Beach Association appeared before the selectmen last month and suggested the triathlon change to either the first weekend in June or second in September, the week after Labor Day. Burnett expressed his concern that the water would be too cold in early June and vetoed the suggested September date because school is back in session.

The fourth weekend in June works best for the triathlon, Burnett said: "It's tradition."

A consensus was reached during the Nov. 8 selectmen meeting, and the June 24 date was voted on and secured for 2012. Burnett is hopeful to find an even better date for 2013.

"I have been approached by nearly 75 people — Cohasset residents and triathlon participants — who want to be part of the process to ensure the triathlon is a staple event for Cohasset for years to come."
Bill Burnett, race director

"We must find a solution to work together to make an end of June date work for everyone," Burnett said over email. He added that he hopes to invite all three parties affected by the triathlon - The Sandy Beach Association, local clergy and downtown businesses - to come together and iron out solutions. "I want people to feel part of the decision."

Burnett said that he also met with the organizers of the MS Ride over breakfast on Wednesday morning and hopes to reach some kind of agreement with them.

"The bottom line is, there is good dialogue occurring and it will continue to occur," said Burnett.

Famous racers rave over Triathlon

"Bill Burnett and his team in Cohasset execute one of the best triathlons in the region. The event is safe and competitive. As an athlete myself, I thank Bill, his sponsors, and the Town of Cohasset for supporting the event that promotes an active healthy living lifestyle." – U.S. Senator Scott Brown

"As a swimmer representing the United States National Team for 16 years, I attended and participated in many events and met many event directors. None have impressed me more than Bill Burnett and his team at the Cohasset Triathlon. Their 'fastest-to-sell-out' triathlon is a result of warm hospitality, admirable organization and a festive atmosphere." – Olympian Gary Hall, Jr.

Cohasset mourns Jack Worley

Served as town's first Rec Director

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Jack Worley, who retired as Cohasset Recreation Director after more than 30 years in 2008, passed away on Monday. PHOTO/NANCY WHITE

He did not live in Cohasset but it sure seemed as though he did.

Jack Worley served as Recreation Director for more than 30 years, retiring about 3-1/2 years ago. However, even in retirement he did not stay away. Worley filled in for Recreation Director Ted Carroll whenever Carroll needed him to. During his time with the Rec Department, Worley was almost always the first one to arrive at Town Hall and the last one to leave.

With his office near the front door to Town Hall, Worley provided a helpful, friendly face — he was indeed Town Hall's very own good will ambassador.

But sadly, Worley will no longer be a familiar figure at Town Hall. He passed away Monday night after a brief illness.

For Carroll, Worley's loss means saying goodbye to his longtime mentor and friend. Carroll started working for Worley at the Rec when he was only 16 years old.

"Every staff person that has come through this office in those 30 years will all say the same thing: Jack was the nicest and best man to work for," Carroll said. "His influence has made an impact for generations as those that have worked for him have become better teachers, better parents and just better and kinder people in general."

Carroll said one of the greatest lessons he learned from Worley was to love the profession and put the needed time in to do the job right.

Although they continued to work together professionally after Worley retired and Carroll was hired as the new director – Carroll said he will miss their friendship most of all.

"It was his friendship and the fact that he was like a father to me that meant the most," Carroll said.

When Worley first came to Cohasset in October 1976, the town was eager to have him on board and launch the department — so eager that the town hired him without having any money in the budget to cover his salary. Worley had to wait for one month before officially starting his new job while the town figured out how it was going to pay for his position.

In the early years, Worley went about his business with just the bare essentials. He set up his office with used furniture from the town dump in the ticket booth off the auditorium in Town Hall.

Worley persevered through the lean times and, under his leadership, the Recreation Department grew by leaps and bounds.

Veterans Agent Joe McElroy has been a long-time fan of Worley's.

"Jack was the most positive person I have ever met," McElroy said. "He loved his job and he worked tirelessly for the youth of the town. He was always receptive to new ideas and considered each one thoughtfully.

"Jack took an 'expansive' view of his responsibilities; that is, he tried to support town-wide initiatives rather than dismissing them as not within his purview. I never met a Cohasset Director who accomplished more with a very limited budget. He realized that the taxpayer had limitations and always tried to field vigorous programs on a 'bare bones budget.'"

In a 2008 Mariner story featuring Worley's retirement, then Town Manager Bill Griffin described Worley "as one of the most dedicated and professional public servants I have ever had the pleasure to work with."

Just before he retired in April 2008, Worley was asked what he hoped his legacy would be.

"When I came here I was the first full-time director and for years, and still, recreation is considered a non-essential service," recalled Worley, who lived in Marshfield. "Now, I hope I've built it up to the point where residents realize as much as they need fire, police and schools, they need recreation.

"Kids need to have constructive outlets for leisure. I've seen three generations of kids who are more apt to seek out recreational opportunities than prior generations."

Worley said what he liked best about Cohasset was its people.

"It's the residents' willingness to pitch in and get involved. Some say it's the harbor or the ocean, but, to me, it's the people that make this place special," he said.

The Board of Selectmen held a moment of silence in memory of Worley during their meeting this week.

A memorial visitation is scheduled from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 10 at the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Road, Scituate.

A Memorial Funeral Mass will be held at 1 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 10, at Holy Family Church, 601 Tremont St., Duxbury.

WEIGHT LOSS: One Stop Shopping

By Elizabeth Johnson

Losing weight is not easy. It takes a comprehensive program, or "One Stop Shopping" so to speak, that includes not only exercise and sensible nutrition, but also change, commitment, support, and time. You're eager to change your behaviors and thoughts, and you know you are committed to the end result. That just leaves two key variables to tackle...support and time.

Where do you find unwavering support and accountability to stick to positive change...and how do you find the time?

First of all, you need to search out and find a way to be held accountable to reaching your goal. Find someone other than yourself to help hold you accountable. Too often we are "professional" goal-setters, but don't know how to celebrate our progress and reframe our setbacks so we are held accountable to the results we want.

This brings you to the second hurdle: time. The reason you haven't seen results before when you tried to lose weight is because you didn't have the right system that maximized your time. You can't possibly follow one plan for exercise, have yet another program for nutrition, and hope to coincidently find enough accountability and support in your pre-existing network of friends and family to get you to your goal. That requires too much to juggle everything.

So...where will you find this "One Stop Shopping?" Where will you find cardio, weight training, supportive nutrition and built-in accountability all under one roof to help you meet your goals while maximizing your time investment? Only at Get In Shape For Women.

"Get In Shape For Women is a transformation studio for women where we offer small group personal training," explains President and CEO Brian Cook. "As opposed to one-on-one training that can feel solitary and repetitive, our group training is dynamic and supportive with 4 women working with a personal trainer towards a common goal of improved health and fitness."

Get In Shape For Women knows that commitment is hard. Feeling empowered to choose a health and fitness program that supports you and respects your time and busy schedule is critical. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4565 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com.

"I had been putting off getting in shape and losing weight for a long time. Having tried many diet and exercise programs that didn't seem to work, I had just about given up. I was getting concerned about my weight because of how it affects your health. Then I walked into Get In Shape For Women. The small size and four to one client to trainer ratio really appealed to me. The trainers are very supportive while motivating you at the same time. Because you are weighed every two weeks you are held accountable for your weight loss. The "one stop shopping" of working out and a healthy eating program at the same place works really well. I am down eleven pounds in just four weeks and feel great!"

AROUND TOWN

Cohasset Education Foundation holding annual appeal

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset! As we are enjoying this holiday month of December, I am asking for us all to take a little extra time in your day to remember those who are struggling and lend a hand, an ear to listen or a warm hug to help them through the days. Sometimes, that is all it takes to help make a difference.

There's still time to invest in excellence in education and donate to the Cohasset Education Foundation 2011 Annual Appeal. Currently the CEF has over $120,000 in grant requests from Cohasset teachers and Administrators and we need your support to turn these requests into opportunities for all children in the Cohasset Public Schools. Fill out your donation envelope or visit www.cohasseteducation.org to donate today. Many thanks in advance.

Food drive

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food Pantry on Saturday, Dec. 17th at the Stop and Shop from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The staff at the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products prior to the Christmas and New Year Holidays. Committee volunteers will be at the Stop and Shop to pass out lists of needed items and to collect food donations.

The Food Pantry also welcomes and greatly appreciates donations of cash or store gift certificates. The need is still there despite improvements in some sectors of the economy, according to Food Pantry staff. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance.

On stage (me!)

I am so excited (and scared at the same time as I am in the show) to invite you all to a great holiday show for family and friends. I, along with the wonderful cast would love to see you in the audience. The Hat Trick Theatre will be presenting the wonderful, family holiday show, "A Christmas Carol." Charles

After a lifetime devoted to the accumulation of wealth, holding everything else in contempt including friendship, love and the holiday season, the miserly and miserable Ebenezer Scrooge is made to see the error of his ways. After a night of spectral visitations from his old partner Jacob Marley, the Ghosts of Christmas Past, Present and Future, our grumpy and stingy friend is transformed and discovers the joy in himself, his family and those around him.

It's a tribute to Dickens, his literary genius and social consciousness, that we are still breathlessly engaged in this wonderful classic. Family entertainment, bringing the Christmas spirit to each and every one! Great cast and a wonderful show! Dates are Dec. 9,10,15,16,17 at 8 pm and Dec. 11,18 at 4 pm. Kendall Hall, First Parish Church, Town Square, Plymouth.

For reservations contact Sally at hattriq98@aol.com or 1-508-747-6856. Tickets also available at the door. $20 Adults: 16 & Under $15. Hope to see you there!

Pizza bash

Here is a date for all high schoolers should mark down so you can attend. You and your friends are invited to CSCR's Student Staff Pizza Bash on Wednesday, Dec. 28th from 11 to 1 p.m. at the Center for Student Coastal Research, 40 Parker Ave. Stop by for a slice and to learn about the different opportunities available for high schoolers at this fun, student-run nonprofit. You don't need to love science to enjoy CSCR. We're also looking for students interested in photography, finance, website development or PR. As always, students can contribute as much or as little time as they like ... but we are hoping to get as many students involved as possible in 2012!! For more information please contact Jack Buckley at:

This sounds like a great opportunity for all!

"A serial dieter and weight re-gainer, I've now lost 30 lbs. and 3 pant sizes. For me it seems being consistent and maintaining motivation over time is at the root of the change. CLARIFICATION

School wins settlement to fix floors

A brief on the high school floors that appeared in the Nov. 18 Cohasset Mariner warrants clarification.

It was announced during the Nov. 16 school committee meeting that the school department has won a $500,000 settlement to replace the floors at the high school. The school was in litigation with contractor S.J. Services, Inc. for four years.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said that the floors needed repairs after a chemical stripper was used on the floors and was evidently left on for too long, causing the tiles to erode. While DeGennaro said that the school has been working to replace areas as needed since the damage was done, "there is still a lot of wear and tear."

The settlement money will be placed into a revolving account until the school can begin replacing the floors next summer.

PUBLIC HEARING CLOSES

Stop & Shop plans to open gas station

Plans are to raze the existing site and install four gasoline pumps with eight pumping positions covered by a canopy.

The Planning Board closed a public hearing on Wednesday, Nov. 30, that got underway in July to review Cohasset Stop & Shop's plans to install a fuel facility at the former Sunoco site across the street from Cohasset Plaza at 391 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Local attorney Richard Henderson represented Stop & Shop. The board is scheduled to deliberate on the plans on Dec. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

Plans are to raze the existing site and install four gasoline pumps with eight pumping positions covered by a canopy. The site would also include a kiosk with a restroom for a single attendant and a vending machine. The two existing curb cuts on Route 3A would be modified and there would be a curb cut on upper King Street that would be used as an exit-only from the station.

Plans are to have one entrance and one exit onto Route 3A. Those wishing to make a left-hand turn onto Route 3A northbound from the facility would exit onto King Street and then make a left at the lights.

Stop & Shop will be adding landscaping throughout the site, said Lisa Davis, planning consultant to Stop & Shop.

The right-turn-only exit onto Route 3A from the site would be angled in such a way as to discourage a motorist from trying to turn left and head north, Davis said. There would also be signage indicating no-left-hand turns.

Davis said Stop & Shop hopes to both construct the new facility and open it in 2012.

Points awarded to customers at Stop & Shop can used for discounts on gas purchases.

TOWN MEETING

Moderator Dan Evans introduced Lynch as a special guest. Lynch told the Mariner that he has been to Cohasset several times before and has always enjoyed his visits.

The big news of the night was that the Town voted to pass 13 of the 16 articles on the STM warrant; only three articles, two of which involved stabilization funds, the other involving a transfer to the Sewer Commission enterprise fund, were indefinitely postponed. Of the 13 articles passed, five were adopted unanimously.

Voters were in favor of:

• Amendments to the Fiscal Year 2012 operating budget, including an appropriation of $75,000 to pay for financial consulting services, as the town continues to sort out its finances

• Transferring funds to pay unpaid bills, including a $270,074.33 general fund transfer to tackle the water deficit

• A $15,000 transfer from the capital stabilization fund to buy the Fire Department a new thermal imaging camera

• $13,000 to pay for gas and plumbing general expenses

• $10,000 for wiring expenses

• $1,5000 to pay for a parking clerk budget amendment

• $15,000 to hire a consultant to conduct a needs assessment for the proposed new senior center

• Authorizations to lease the roof of the Middle-High School and the landfill at 81-91 Cedar Street to a solar energy vendor, for the purpose of installing solar voltaic arrays that will allow the town to purchase energy at a lower rate

• Renewing a $1 per year, 30-year lease of town land at 15-19 Lighthouse Lane for the Sailing Club

• $7,604.97 for clerical assistance to the Sewer Commission

Monday night marked Town Manager Michael Coughlin's first Town Meeting in Cohasset. He told the crowd that while he is only four months into the job, he hopes to remain in Cohasset at least another four years. PHOTOS/K.A. MACDONALD

Dr. Edward Woods, who is a Town Meeting regular, asks for a point of clarification.

Tony Horwitz exchanged stories and laughs with his many fans.

SUNDAY AUTHOR TALKS

Horwitz draws from far and wide

This past Sunday, Dec. 4, was the third in a series of eight visiting author discussions as part of Sunday Author Talks, sponsored by Rotary Club of Cohasset.

More than 170 people came to meet and listen to New York Times best-selling author, Tony Horwitz, author of Midnight Rising. The audience included book enthusiasts from all over the South Shore and as far away as Rhode Island.

The next Sunday Author Talk will be Sunday, Jan. 8 at 4 p.m. It will include a panel of three authors: Brunonia Barry, The Map of True Places; Randy Susan Meyers, The Murderer's Daughters; and Ilie Ruby, The Language of Trees.

All Author Talks are free, however, seating is limited, so call the library at 383-1348 to reserve a spot. Visit cohassetlibrary.org for a complete list of events.

Cohasset Resident Donald Evans makes the most of his time while he and wife, Sheila Evans—long-time Library Trustee—await Horwitz's talk on Sunday.

Cohasset residents Betts Murray and Betsy Millard enjoy wine and cheese at the post talk reception sponsored by A Taste for Wine & Spirits.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Solar power

Alt. energy articles pass with flying colors

By Erin Dale

Cohasset may soon be the latest town in the Commonwealth to invest in solar energy. Thanks to the votes of its citizens, the town will be able to lease the roof of the Middle-High School and on the capped landfill located at 81-91 Cedar Street for the installation of solar arrays.

This is an initiative that the Alternative Energy Committee has worked on alongside the School Committee over the past several months, particularly with School Committee vice chair Jeanne Astino and school business manager Dave DeGennaro. Both committees have drafted an RFP (request for proposals) to bid for a solar energy contractor to lease the town property for 20 years for $1 per year and install and maintain solar voltaic panels.

Tanya Bodell, a recent addition to the Alt. Energy Committee who brings to the table 18 years of professional experience advising on electricity industry issues, gave a presentation at Special Town Meeting detailing how solar panels could potentially help the town save 25 percent on energy costs.

"The economics do work," Bodell told the voters. "It's a potential win-win."

On behalf of the Board of Selectmen, Selectman Fred Koed said that they voted unanimously to recommend both articles for Special Town Meeting.

"We think it's a good idea to move forward in order to stabilize our electricity in the future," Koed said.

However, Capital Budget Committee chairman Steve Gaumer cautioned voters that his committee did not have a chance to review the articles prior to Special Town Meeting, and therefore could not give their recommendation.

"We trust this is an extraordinarily valuable proposition," Gaumer said, "but we just don't know... We caution Town Meeting to stick with the process to make sure there is proper vetting of hard-earned capital."

Gaumer said during a phone call on Tuesday that there was a misunderstanding between the Capital Budget and Alt. Energy Committee.

"I received an email a few hours before our last scheduled meeting from the committee saying that they were told by the Town Manager that they couldn't go before Capital Budget without a review by the town manager first," Gaumer said, "so they canceled their meeting with us. Mike [Coughlin, Town Manager] believes it was a misunderstanding."

However, the chairman continued, "The bylaws are clear — maintenance of town capital items as a warrant item get reviewed by the Capital Budget Committee, who in turn advise the selectmen and Advisory Committee. What we saw last night [Monday] and heard secondhand seems like a reasonable proposal, but there are a variety of details we would have liked to ask about in order to protect the town and know about the vendor process.

"It might be that we don't have information that could be provided by the proponent to clear up those questions," Gaumer said. "We would prefer that the process be adhered to, simply because if something doesn't work in the future, the town at least took steps to engage in open and thorough discussion with all the facts available."

Alt. Energy Committee secretary Marie Caristi-MacDonald, who works in the Town Manager's office, said that a "procedural misunderstanding" and "timing problem" occurred.

Tom Gruber, town engineer of the Greenbush Operations office, is taking over the RFP to seek solar power vendors, said Caristi-MacDonald. Gruber, who only recently got involved in the project, did not have a chance to review the proposal and wanted to do so before making a case before Capital Budget. Gruber said that he has been working on a draft of the RFP and will attend the next Alt. Energy Committee meeting, scheduled for Monday, Dec. 12.

"From what I'd heard, they were very interested in it," Caristi-MacDonald said of Capital Budget. "We had great approval from the Selectmen and Advisory board."

Despite not garnering Capital Budget's support, Special Town Meeting voters approved the two solar array articles almost unanimously.

School Committee members present were satisfied with the meeting's outcome.

"We're very pleased," said DeGennaro.

"Not only will it save money — it's just the right thing to do for our environment. It's a win-win in so many ways," said Dr. Helene Lieb, School Committee chair. "Educationally speaking, we have an environmental science course here at the high school, and that's an academic tie-in. There are so many positive things."

Dr. Lieb added that this move would also help strengthen the "town-gown relationship" by "doing a project that the town and the schools are going to be doing together."

Bodell said after the meeting that she was "very happy" the articles passed.

"I think this is a very good step for the town," she said. "It's not the only step, it's not the last step, it's not the first step, but it's one of many steps that we need to take if we decide to move forward with this. And I look forward to walking through those steps."

Wiping out the water deficit

Voters approve $270K for unpaid bills

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Deficits found in the water and sewer enterprise funds have been a matter of concern in Cohasset. Town Manager Mike Coughlin addressed these issues right off the bat during Monday night's Special Town Meeting.

The town, said Coughlin, "has been under fire over complex finance issues. Thanks to the employees of this town, we've been able to turn a corner. Our principal issue tonight is to resolve the last of these budgetary difficulties and set the tax rate. I just want to say that the only reason we are here is because of the dedicated work of the staff of Town Hall, and I'd just like that to be recognized."

Coughlin proposed amendments to the Fiscal Year 2012 operating budget; among these, a $75,000 transfer from health insurance and general expenses to pay for:

- Interim finance director Eric Kinsherf to stay on past Dec. 31 to train a new finance director, when the new employee is hired
- Interim treasurer collector Dan Sullivan to stay on past Dec. 31 to assist with the new financial software implementation
- An audit of the sewer capital project

An article asking for a transfer to the sewer enterprise fund, meanwhile, was indefinitely postponed.

Coughlin called the $75,000 appropriation to pay for financial services "the most important" of the moderate spending he had proposed.

As part of Article 2, voters approved the transfer of funds to cover unpaid bills, including $270,074.33 to be raised from the Fiscal Year 2012 tax levy and general town revenues in order to tackle the water deficit

Summing up the water deficit "in a nutshell," Coughlin said that the $270,000 deficit is "basically the result of an inability to have enough resources in the last fiscal year to pay our bills. We ran out of money in Fiscal Year 11."

The good news, Coughlin said, is that the town has been running a general fund surplus to the tune of $300,000, thanks in part to the Avalon Communities construction project, which has become a principal source of new growth for Cohasset. This revenue will allow the town to set the tax rate, the Town Manager said. Being able to do so, Coughlin explained, will "send a very strong message" to the Department of Revenue (DOR).

During the audience discussion portion, Capital Budget Committee Chairman Steve Gaumer asked Coughlin if he believed $75,000 would be enough to cover the three elements discussed. Coughlin responded that it would enough to see the financial department through the remainder of the fiscal year.

The motion was adopted with a majority voice vote from the townspeople; a few "nays" were heard from the section where the Capital Budget Committee members and Water Commissioners sat.

In addition to the $270,000 water deficit, Article 2 also tackled a few odds and ends, such as selectmen bills of $580.98 to Verizon and $117.26 to Fox Associates for letterheads. The Town Manager said these bills were submitted late because of "bad internal processes," and that he was confident "this will never happen again." He noted that the water department could not pay their bills due to insufficient funds in their enterprise fund.

Once again, both the selectmen and Advisory voiced their support for the article, with a caution from Andrew Willard of the Advisory Committee.

"We find it wholly unacceptable to find bills on here such as stationary and phone bills," Willard spoke on behalf of the committee. "We implore the committee heads to do their jobs and close out their books in June, as we are required to do under state law."

Roy Fitzsimmons of 116 Doane Street had a question regarding the water deficit, asking why collected fees had not paid the bills. Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio said, in summary, that the water department could not pay these bills because they were unable to collect.

When Fitzsimmons asked how long it would take the water department to pay off their debt, DeCaprio estimated that it could take 22 years.

Fitzsimmons questioned if this was due to "mismanagement," to which DeCaprio responded that the water commission had $33 million in debt spent rebuilding the system. He also explained that the department has a $1.8 million budget for expenses and had $400,000 in uncollected receivables this year.

DeCaprio told Fitzsimmons and the crowd that the issue was on the agenda for the following night's selectmen meeting, and that anyone interested should attend and ask questions (See related story).

When Richard Avery, 22 Surry Drive, voiced his concern that the town was in danger of setting a precedent of having unpaid water bills paid by the whole town, DeCaprio agreed.

"Only the water department should be paying water department bills," the Water Commissioner said. "We also should not be subsidizing the town of Cohasset."

DeCaprio called the issue "a temporary problem," saying a surplus in retained earnings would allow the department to "pay back every cent," although he admitted to not understanding "the accounting issues as well as the people behind me," referring to the financial consultants.

Avery said he would "like some assurance the water department will pay back the Cohasset taxpayers."

The Town Manager told the voters to "have faith."

The town, water and sewer departments must "act as one," Coughlin said, "to work together to resolve these issues." He added that he hoped the town would see "robust retained earnings" and had faith that "the water commission will do as they said — return those monies to the general fund" once the bills are paid off.

"Right now, we have no choice but to pay past bills," Coughlin concluded. Otherwise, "we won't set the tax rate, and everyone will suffer."

Avery responded, "That sounds like assurance to me."

Selectmen chair Ted Carr told the crowd that it is "the number one priority of the Board of Selectmen to figure out these financial issues," and that the board has worked with the Town Manager for the past four months "in a collaborative way" to understand the problems. "We will keep the people of this town informed."

The townspeople voted to adopt the article, allowing the unpaid billing issue to be resolved.

NEW FINANCE DIRECTOR

Selectmen to review final candidate next Tuesday

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

By this time next week, Cohasset could have a brand new finance director/town accountant in place.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin said in a phone call Thursday morning that a final candidate for the position will come before the Board of Selectmen next Tuesday night. This measure allows the selectmen, along with Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore, the chance to interview the candidate. The board can then decide to either accept or reject the Town Manager's recommendation, and will have 15 days following the official appointment to do so.

Coughlin is pleased with his selection and believes the selectmen will be, too.

"The individual is highly-qualified, with over 20 years of experience in municipal accounting, a recognized and certified town accountant with a statewide reputation," said Coughlin. "I feel very gratified that such a fine candidate is willing to join team Cohasset and can't wait to bring this candidate before the Board of Selectmen. This is a real coup for the town."

The good news comes on the heels of some contentious discussions between Coughlin and the selectmen regarding whether the board should be allowed to interview two or more final candidates during executive session. Coughlin, asserting his right under the Town Manager Act, made it clear to the board that the appointment of a finance director is the Town Manager's to make (Article 4, Section 21 of the town bylaws).

In a letter to the Board of Selectmen, addressed for Dec. 6, Coughlin wrote, "We must recognize that the Town Manager Act was passed by the voters of this community. In essence it is the community's constitution. It is our law. Under the Act, while I am appointed by the Selectmen and 'responsible to' the Board, I work for the people of this community" (for full text, see page 17).

"The Town Manager Act was drafted to allow the Town Manager to pick his own team," Coughlin said to the board Tuesday. "By not allowing me to bring my candidate forward, someone else is picking my team."

Coughlin initially offered to allow the board to have input once he had selected a final candidate; last week, however the selectmen insisted that they see at least two.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said that traditionally, the board has always had a say in senior management positions; since financial problems are the biggest ones plaguing the town, Carr felt that this appointment is especially crucial.

"You said you would work in a collaborative way and be open and transparent," Carr said to Coughlin.

Conversely, interviewing two candidates in an executive session, as the board originally planned to do, would be a direct violation of Open Meeting Law. Last week the Mariner wrote that we were prepared to file a complaint with the Attorney General's Office, should the illegal executive session have taken place.

"If we are going to signal that this town is ready to fully embrace the law, it must start with this appointment," Coughlin said in his letter. "Put simply, it would be a violation of the Open Meeting Law to go forward with that process."

"I know what the law is," said selectman Leland Jenkins during Tuesday's meeting. "I still want to see two different accountants."

"We are your supervisors, and we are giving you basic direction of what we want," Carr told the Town Manager. "This is the direction of the Board of Selectmen — we took a vote on it... We've read the bylaws, too. We're not asking for a lot."

Coughlin countered that since taking the Town Manager post on Aug. 1, "I have included you on every decision before I do it. I informed you of my intent in advance regarding the finance appointment, and I agreed that I would not formally appoint someone without bringing them in front of you."

Although the Town Manager eventually agreed to allow the board to review two candidates, Coughlin said Thursday morning that one of the finalists has chosen to withdraw their application. This was of Coughlin's concerns that he expressed to the selectmen when they asked to screen two people — that due to confidentiality issues that could threaten a candidate's current job, one could decide to drop out of the running.

Elsa Miller, chairperson of the Board of Assessors, spoke up on the matter during Tuesday's selectmen meeting. According to Miller, finance directors she has worked with in various towns "would not go back to interview if they had to go before the board and read their resumes." She warned that forcing them to do so could result in losing a good candidate. "I saw this happen twice with accountants in Wareham," said Miller. "You need to respect the Town Manager ruling."

Miller's advice proved to be a cautionary tale, as one of Coughlin's two chosen candidates withdrew. However, Coughlin is confident that Cohasset got the right front-runner.

"You can't search for any second candidate better than this one," said Coughlin.

The final candidate will be interviewed during an open session at the Tuesday, Dec. 13 selectmen meeting.

WATER DEPT.

This is where the department is today — weighing their options and deciding whether to renew their contract with American Water, or go out to bid for a new contract, which would include a 20-year lease that transfers all operating risk to the new operator.

The department also experienced a 15 percent dip in production volumes, down 27 percent from their peak in 2004. Not having revenue from fire hydrants then caused water to take a major hit. This, DeCaprio said, created "the perfect storm of problems for us in one year."

These problems were exacerbated by problems in Town Hall, DeCaprio explained.

"The biggest issue predates the three of us," he said, referring to the current commissioners. "Seven months into the fiscal year, we had no idea where we stood, and the problems mushroomed."

The commission learned that things were not as dire as they seemed at first; while the department did have a $265,000 operating deficit, it was paid back in full a year after stabilization funds covered the cost.

"Every dime has been repaid" from FY '09, DeCaprio said.

And while Cohasset's water rates are high by state standards, the commission's presentation pointed out that rates have increased only four times since 1989. The reason the hike has been severe lately (with a 40 percent increase in 2007), according to DeCaprio, is because "we've been playing catch-up."

To come up with resolutions for these many issues, a Water Planning Group (WPG) was appointed by the board of selectmen in March 2010, whose members included John Beck from the Sewer Commission, Ed Lappen from the Advisory Committee and Steve Gaumer from the Capital Budget Committee, among others. Through a review of the department's budget processes, the group was able to identify weak points and discuss how to prevent a repeat of the problems. The group also found that the largest variable in operating costs over the past several years was the department's contract with American Water.

The WPG made the following recommendations, which DeCaprio read directly from the group's minutes:

- Review the most recent rate structure report and determine whether an updated analysis is needed based on need on increase rates
- Shift the emphasis toward the quarterly charge to improve the predictability of revenue forecasting
- Future capital projects should have a specified source of revenue
- The operating contract with American Water, which expires in 2012, should be renegotiated and/or extended on more favorable terms, or else examine alternatives such as self-management

This is where the department is today — weighing their options and deciding whether to renew their contract with American Water, or go out to bid for a new contract, which would include a 20-year lease that transfers all operating risk to the new operator.

Essentially, this means the department "is selling the water company without [actually] selling the water company," DeCaprio explained. "We would retain control over operations" while the new operator would absorb any revenue risk and factor that into their contract.

Another option would be for the water department to take their operations in-house and hire an engineer/consultant as the plant manager. DeCaprio and the rest of the commissioners are leaning toward the first option, which will evidently allow the water department to reduce its costs by $500,000 (currently an excess margin to American Water for its employee costs) and return it back to the ratepayers.

"We will be able to reset rates much lower with a new contract," DeCaprio said. "People's water bills will be going down, not up."

The water commission believes they will be able to immediately reduce customer rates by 40 percent in the first year of their new contract.

An added benefit of transferring the operating risk from the water department to an operator is that the water commission would be freed up to focus on water quality — "which should be 98 percent of our focus," said DeCaprio. "The other 2 percent should be customer relations."

The commissioners said that this new contract would also relieve Town Hall of the burden of managing the water department's billing, with only one invoice to keep track of; this would, essentially, "take the water department out of the loop of Town Hall, in a good way."

The next step for the water department, if they pursue a new contract, would be to go out for bid with a Request for Proposals (RFP) and select an operator. Since it involves a 20-year lease, the water commission will have to present a warrant article for Spring Town Meeting in order to sign a concessionaire contract.

DeCaprio said that the commission plans to hold a series of public forums in the months leading up to the annual Town Meeting in order to give the townspeople as much information up front as possible.

While there were several questions and concerns about having the department run in-house (Selectmen Leland Jenkins said the town had outsourced because the last time it was in-house was a 'disaster'), and Town Manager Mike Coughlin stated his concern about permitting issues, both the board and town manager thanked the commission for the "good information."

OUR VIEW

Being aware this season

Police warn residents that during the holiday season, they see an increase in the amount of housebreaks and thefts from vehicles.

Anyone who reads the weekly Police Beat on Page 3 knows that housebreaks and break-ins to cars are all too common.

Discovering that someone has broken into your home or car is a sure way to wreck your day, week and month.

While a break-in and theft are not the victim's fault – there are steps we can take to lessen the chances of the crime happening to us.

Police recommend that residents make their house look like someone is home. They suggest using timers for lights; telling a trusted friend or neighbor when they are away; never leaving a house key hidden outside; making arrangements for having their paper and mail stopped while away; and planning ahead to have any gifts or packages that are being shipped to their home picked up.

For cars, police recommend never leaving valuables in sight; always lock the doors no matter how short of time the motorist plans to be away from the vehicle. After making purchases, police urge shoppers to put the packages in the trunk, out of sight. Nothing is more obvious to a thief than bags of new gifts with receipts making them easy to return for quick money, police said.

At Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham last year, a man purchased a new computer and placed it in the back seat of his car, then continued shopping. When he returned a short time later his window had been smashed and the computer stolen. Potential thieves are watching to see what the shopper does with those large expensive items.

Police also ask that people always lock their cars. Thefts from unlocked, parked cars in residential driveways occur throughout the year.

Board of Assessors requests information

Cohasset Board of Assessors has made several requests for Income and Expense information from rental property owners and commercial and industrial property owners for fiscal 2012. In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 59, Section 38D, failure to comply with the Assessors' request will result in a $250 fine assessed to the fiscal 2012 tax bill.

The Board of Assessors will accept Income and Expense information through Dec. 16, 2011, from owners who wish to avoid the $250 fine. The Board of Assessors intends to assess the fine for those who do not provided a completed form by the final deadline.

Jingle Bell Walk support appreciated

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset would like to express its appreciation to the many merchants and volunteers who lent a helping hand at our 17th Annual Jingle Bell Walk.

As the bells rang out from St. Stephen's Church, thanks to Mary Kennedy; Santa and Mrs. Claus accompanied by a Christmas Tree and their many elf assistants arrived at the Community Center. All our volunteers were ready to go with jingle bells, hot cocoa, and cookies waiting. The Christmas Tree led Mrs. Claus, Santa, the merry Elves and all assembled in a community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites. The crowd was delighted to enjoy holiday musical selections from the Rusty Skippers Band and Big Ryan entertained the children with wonderful stories. There was a Santa's Village where children made their own ornaments, open bowling and Santa listened to each and every child's wish list.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to the many contributors and volunteers who helped make the day a great success!

DPW fiscal '11 unpaid bills

At the Dec. 5 Special Town Meeting, it was said that Public Works failed to submit their FY'11 bills on time which led to them being put on the warrant. This is a false statement and should be clarified. The unpaid bills which were voted on were submitted on July 13, 2011, two days before the deadline date.

The true explanation on why they were not paid is that there was a deficit in the Public Works Budget due to uncollected fuel fees from both the Water and School Departments. These fees would have more than covered the costs of said bills.

In 22 years of processing the towns' bills, I can only remember one other instance where Public Works had an unpaid bill on any Town Meeting Warrant.

Reading, technology and our kids

SAMANTHA SEARS

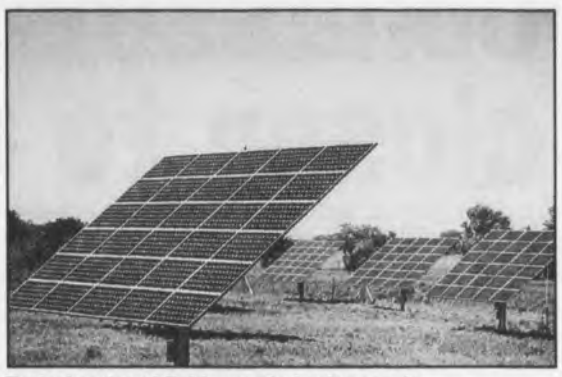
For many individuals in our society, childhood memories consist of time with your family or parents. Parents were role models, super heroes, support systems and friends. Looking back, I'll bet many people can say some of their fondest memories were formed while reading with a parent. These reading memories could have transpired at the breakfast table, during naptime, before bed, or just a moment alone with Mom and Dad. However, today a child's memory of reading is slowly disintegrating with the increased use of technology. Children have more technological opportunities than those in the past. Unfortunately, technology has captured the minds of children in a way reading used to do.

Regrettably, the activity of reading is no longer the "go to" hobby for children of this generation. New technological gadgets such as iPods, Wii, Nintendo DS, television, computer games and much more, have taken over the minds of our young children. According to Jim Trelease's "The Read-Aloud Handbook," "Wiring the home or school is a long way from wiring the brain."

Jim Trelease is a zealous advocate of read-aloud activities with children. His book, "The Read-Aloud Handbook," addresses the positive influence reading-aloud can have on a child. His book suggests recommendations on how to make reading enjoyable for children, as well as, answering many common questions a parent may have regarding their child and reading. Jim Trelease is an inspiration and a well-renowned author whose only objective is to maintain the act of reading to children. He urges parents and teachers to take the correct steps in order to advance the reading level and knowledge of their children. Trelease describes that the ultimate focus of his book is to support and teach parents, teachers and adults that the goal of reading-aloud is not only to improve their child's reading, but also to increase their academic success and make positive connections between the child and his or her reading experience.

Nevertheless, with these advancements in technology, we are allowing technology to be more available to all different age groups; and even though, the media continually reminds us that these gadgets and activities are not as beneficial as we think, we as a society continue to place these technologies in the hands of our children. This practice needs to change. Reading has been proven to increase a child's vocabulary, comprehension skills, writing techniques, speech and so much more; so let me ask you this, "Why do we continue to purchase these technologies that stray away from these achievements? Why don't we strive for our children to be successful in school and in life?" Action must be taken to resolve this problem.

Studies have been conducted and it has been confirmed that television is one of the largest obstructions for child development. According to Trelease, Seattle's Children Hospital's research suggests that "for each hour of daily television viewed by the child before the age of three, the risk of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) by the age of 7 is increased by 10 percent." It also suggested that the average number of hours the television set is on in a household is approximately 1,460 hours a year.



In order to make a positive change, parents have to become devoted to read-aloud activities in the home. The first step is to get your child to want to read and

Harnessing sun power

Town Meeting actions... If you attended Town Meeting, you may remember Articles 12 and 13 that both dealt with the addition of solar electricity generation to the Town's infrastructure. Both of these articles passed handsomely. In one case on the Middle High School roof and the other on Cohasset's capped landfill on Cedar Street behind the Transfer Station. Although, in concept, these are very similar projects, in some respects they are quite different. Several weeks ago we did talk a bit about solar projects in broad-brush terms, but today we will delve into the subject deeper.

There are lots of ways that clever people have captured the sun's energy to serve various purposes. You may remember in your youth, at one time or another, using a magnifying glass to concentrate the sun's heat to burn a piece of wood or even to start a fire. That's a very primitive use of the sun's vast energy.

Solar to A.C. power.

However, that's not very efficient. It would be tough to heat your home or cook a meal this way. Although, some clever people have improved on the thermal capture efficiency from the sun and have used it for space heating or cooking on a limited basis. But, that's not what we are talking about here. We are talking about an approach that is on a much grander scale that generates a nice series of benefits for the Town. These projects generate electricity that can be used or sold by the Town.

Typically, the way these projects work, especially for a Town, is that a developer will lease suitable space from the Town and erect a solar electricity generation facility on that space. The developer can take advantage of incentives that are designed to encourage the construction of solar facilities. Since, these incentives most always include tax rebates or tax reductions they are not useful to the Town since it pays no taxes. However, the developer can use these incentives to offset a portion of the costs, operating expenses of the project or the developer's taxes. Bingo, a match made in heaven!

So how do these systems work? The fundamental building block of all solar generation systems is the solar panel. These contain semiconductors that have the ability to turn the sun's energy directly into direct current (D.C.) electricity. The more solar panels in a system, the more power can be generated. But, direct current is what batteries generate and generally is not useful to supply commercial power. But wait; there is another technical advance that comes to our rescue. Using semi-conductors it is economical to build a device called an inverter that can majestically change direct current power into alternating current (A.C.) power, which is the basis for almost all of the US's electricity supply systems. Now, we really have a useful system. We can change solar energy into electrical A.C. power for widespread use.

The illustration shows the flow of energy from the sun and the components that can be used to convert to A.C. power. If there is no need for direct current power, the battery and charge controller in the illustration can be eliminated. So, to summarize, a series of solar panels and an inverter can convert the power of the sun into A.C. power that is compatible with the power grid. The resulting power can be consumed by the Town or passed on to the National Grid electrical power grid.

In order for the Town to be able to sell power to the electric utility, the Town must have a "Net Metering Agreement" as a part of the developer's deal. This Net Metering Agreement spells out the arrangement between the developer and the electricity company and the Town which defines the terms under which we can provide power to the grid and the utility compensation to the Town for that power.

Solar development contracts are typically a long-term contract. In our case, it is for 20 years. One of the major advantages of this arrangement is that it fixes our cost for the energy we are able to generate. And, generally it will be below the going market rate. So, we get to use electricity at a discount and sell power at a known rate to the grid. Scituate, which has recently, entered into a solar development agreement for their landfill, estimates that they will save about $250,000 each year over the present costs. ...Sounds good to us!

GROWING ON THE FARM

It's garlic planting season

JON BELBER

Once the garlic is planted, it can take on the role of a seed beginning to grow and then going dormant during the cold, winter months. The seed will have a head start come February, when the days lengthen in sunlight and the weather thaws.

"But why does it grow?" asked a child to Janice McPhillips, as she held up a garlic clove. Janice, a farm educator at Holly Hill Farm, was discussing the where and how of planting garlic. She, like many of us if asked that existential question, might be caught speechless. Her reply was to offer, "Everything in nature wants to grow." Farmers, gardeners and growers work to answer that question as we eagerly complete the task every season and every time we work with plants.

A garlic bulb is technically part of the stem that people use for cooking. Many gardeners know now is the time to plant garlic cloves (the popped individual pieces of the whole bulb). It is similar to planting tulip and daffodil bulbs. These warm days, with expected rain, are ideal situations for planting. The roots will get rooted and established, feeding off the nutrients in a well-drained, fertile soil. Hopefully there is a lot of added compost in the planting bed. One can bury the garlic, pointy side up, flat side down, twice the depth of the clove, then cover and mulch with a light layer of straw. The straw will hopefully prevent any weed seeds from getting established, as well as tuck in the garlic to protect it from winter storms. Once the garlic is planted, it can take on the role of a seed beginning to grow and then going dormant during the cold, winter months. The seed will have a head start come February, when the days lengthen in sunlight and the weather thaws.

The garlic that Janice held up was separated from a bulb that had been pulled out of the ground in July. All garlic is ideally harvested in July, so it has time to cure and dry before the fall. Once dry, the garlic can also last a longer time, well into the winter months, when one can pull it out of the pantry for cooking. Janice, farm teachers and I are teaching and planting garlic at the farm in the education garden with students from the South Shore Charter Public School, and at three Scituate elementary schools, four Hingham elementary schools, the South Shore Collaborative, several independent schools and the South River School in Marshfield. Back at Holly Hill Farm, the farmers sunk over 4,000 cloves in to a dry corner of the Ice Pond Meadow.

One hardy clove may yield 4-8 cloves as a bulb when it is time to harvest next July. (Garlic scapes and green garlic is a whole other article come June). For now, there is garlic bread to make with the left over smaller cloves and questions still to answer.

Many teachers, students and staff at the forementioned schools are the fortunate recipients of parents' and lunchroom chefs' hard work as they prepare garlic bread for the cafeteria crowds.

As to why does it grow, I'll leave that up to the individual, as I ponder and dream about this lovely, little healthy crop, wanting to grow, all settled in the ground for a long winter's nap.

Holiday Stroll: A wonderful event

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When the holiday wreaths – bedecked with starfish and bows – are decorating doors and shop windows downtown, you know it's almost Christmas in Cohasset. And Christmastime here means that it's time, once again, for the Holiday Stroll.

The spirit is alive and well this year with local businesses both downtown and along Route 3A. And while it's been an unseasonably warm December, temperatures are expected to drop to the 30s in time for Saturday's stroll.

Sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, the Saturday, Dec. 10 event kicks off at noon and lasts until 7 p.m. Merchants along 3A start spreading holiday cheer at noon with refreshments, face painting, arts and crafts, special sales and food and toy drives.

The village festivities begin at 4 p.m. with the Carillon Concert with Mary Kennedy at St. Stephen's. There is also a mini-parade featuring Santa on a hayride. Afterward, kids and fans of St. Nick can enjoy "cookies with Santa" at Coldwell Banker and get their photo taken. The Grinch is also rumored to be making an appearance at Atlantic Brokerage.

At 5 p.m., the First Parish Christmas truck will be parked in front of Darilynn's, serving hot chocolate and cider and leading revelers in Christmas carols. The Rusty Skippers will also be playing carols at 5:45. Many downtown businesses will have open houses, warm drinks and goodies throughout the stroll.

While time-honored traditions will still be upheld, there are a few new additions this year. The tree in front of Pilgrim Bank, for instance, will have a patriotic theme this year; Ann Marie Goff is placing laminated cards featuring the names of Cohasset men and women who are serving or have served in Afghanistan and Iraq. The tree will also be decked out with yellow ribbons and miniature flags.

New downtown businesses, including Bumble Bee Landing, will be joining in the stroll for the first time. Visitors to Bumble Bee can enjoy a "kissing ball demonstration" and drawing.

Participating businesses, as always, will be marked with the wreaths and balloons.

Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's and president of Cohasset's Chamber of Commerce, hopes that folks will stop in local stores when they do their Christmas shopping. The stroll is a great way to do just that, she said.

"There are a lot of great gift ideas here in town," said Evans. "It's easy, convenient and stress-free.

"Small businesses serve the community," Evans added. "They give back and donate to all these fundraisers" such as the Cohasset Food Pantry and Toys for Tots.

Supporting the smaller shops, especially, helps Cohasset "keep a vibrant center," said Evans. "Plus, it carries on tradition."

To carry on the tradition with your friends and family, visit the stroll this Saturday. See the list, below, of participating vendors and their various events.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Cohasset closer to new senior center

Voters in favor of feasibility study

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For members of the Cohasset Elder Affairs, Social Service League and Board of Selectmen, it's been a long time coming, but during Monday night's Special Town Meeting, another crucial step was made toward the town getting a brand new senior center.

Town Meeting voted almost unanimously to approve paying $15,000 for an independent feasibility study that will assess the needs of a potential senior center. The amount will be raised from the Fiscal Year 2012 tax levy and general town revenues, and appropriated to the Town Manager's FY 12 budget.

Advocates of the project feel that a new senior center is needed to accommodate the growing elderly demographic in Cohasset, which is expected to account for 33 percent of the town's population in the next decade, according to Board of Elder Affairs chairman John Campbell. Addressing the needs of the expanding seniors population is crucial now, Campbell stressed to Special Town Meeting voters.

Several others spoke to the crowd to voice their support for the article, which may have helped sway the vote. While some felt that the article was premature at this early stage in the process, the boards and committees working toward this goal were happy to take a large step forward.

Another article was passed to help the future senior center along – an amendment to the Board of Elder Affairs membership. This will allow the board to add associate, non-voting members to give their input on the proposed senior center "on behalf of the seniors of Cohasset," Campbell explained. The measure would come "at no cost to the town," said Campbell. "We're just looking for good people to work with us.

HEALTH NOTES

Managing health issues worldwide

STEVE BOBO

Major health problems on much of the rest of our planet seem to be starvation and birth control with AIDS as a specific and massive problem.

The Not So Brave New World with its new demographics – what for Cohasset?

Small towns like ours change only when necessary, hopefully, to make the best of ideas brought from other places – by news from outside, new neighbors with different ways, the strength of family habits, customs and the education system's impact on our children. We cope as best we can with wars and recessions. The flavor of life is colored by fads, foods, frustrations and many small events that give unique character to our lives.

The two major changes – long term, that we must live with at present are: A temporary, perhaps, climate change, bringing the South Shore, at best, squirrelly weather patterns and perhaps a snowless winter. Warming is probably because of the increase in CO_2 in the atmosphere; hopefully, a temporary phenomenon until we can cope with our energy sources like cars and power plants.

A more difficult problem is the increase in numbers of older people worldwide. This is a relatively recent condition considering the life of the planet, brought on by an improved understanding of genetics, diseases and health matters in general.

If we are to curtail the incidence of illness in our population, it will be necessary to find a better way of disseminating medical information and services. Clinical trials are part of clinical research and at the heart of all medical advances, which look at new ways to prevent, detect or treat disease. Treatments are burgeoning, like new drug combinations, surgical procedures, devices or new ways to use existing treatments. The goal of trials is to determine safety of new treatments. They offer hope for many and an opportunity to help researchers find better treatments for others in the future.

Cancer is an important problem locally and worldwide. Locally, some sources have reported organ transplant recipients have a high risk of developing 32 different types of cancer, according to a new study. Future research may lead to better strategies for preventing cancer among transplant recipients as well as the general population.

Worldwide, longevity has increased steadily with the eradication of pestilential killers like dengue, malaria and small pox and their replacement with more subtle ailments from known health risks like overweight. Also, we seem to be losing control of sexually transmitted diseases like AIDS. Major health problems on much of the rest of our planet seem to be starvation and birth control with AIDS as a specific and massive problem.

AIDS is a problem both locally and internationally. This year, we commemorate World AIDS Day during the 30th year since the first reported cases of AIDS, a milestone that has led many to reflect on how far we have come since those dark days when HIV infection was almost always fatal. Remarkably, three decades of scientific progress in HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment have brought us to a time when we can begin to imagine an AIDS-free generation.

Delivery of Wellness Initiatives Leadership — In 30 years, the National Institutes of Health has established and supports the world's leading research program on AIDS. Other agencies are also concerned with health of the citizenry directly and indirectly. For example last week, Donald Berwick, the chief of Medicare for a year, cited a number of inefficiencies before he left that post. Those charged with the responsibility of ensuring the availability of health services, must ensure that the services meet established needs and noted inefficiencies eliminated. Without such oversight, the inefficiencies will make our already costly system unworkable.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS:

Board members and town officials speak up on the senior center

• Paul Carlson, selectman liaison to the Senior Center Planning Group:
"Modern senior centers have proved very popular in similar towns around the Commonwealth. Nevertheless, we need more information about the services that should be provided, the potential usage of the building, and the appropriate size and scale. Therefore, the Board of Selectmen is recommending that the town commission an independent study to look at the various issues concerning the senior center. Topics that the consultant should address are demographic trends, additional services that people will want or actually use, and how many people are likely to participate. This study will help the relevant town boards and Town Meeting decide how large the center should be, what services need to be included in our budgeting, and whether to go ahead with the project. We hope to present more information to the Spring Town Meeting about the size, scope and cost of this project. In the meantime, we need this information to make informed decisions."

• Tom Reardon, Advisory Committee:
"On this article, the Advisory Committee was split four to two in the negative. The concern of those of us who voted against this article is that the town has not been well served over time by voting for pieces of projects without having a more comprehensive sense of what's involved and what the town exposure truly is. We urge that Special Town Meeting is not appropriate for this kind of request, but rather should come before the Spring Town Meeting in the context of the budget."

• Peter Pescatore, Advisory Committee Chairman:
"Representing the minority vote, we thought that this feasibility study was important to help us gauge what the need in the town may be in terms of the number of the citizens that would use this kind of facility, [and] to help us size it correctly and make the right kind of decision to get a really good facility that will work for the town. We think that it's an important thing to go forward."

• John Campbell, Elder Affairs Board Chairman:
"Recognizing that the senior population of this town, as is the case across the country, has gone up substantially over the last four or five years, and is projected to be close to a third of the population of Cohasset – 33 percent-plus – in the next eight years. For that reason, we feel it's important that we make progress moving forward with the issue of the senior center, and critical to that progress is the study the town wants us to do to establish what the needs really are. We think we have a pretty good sense of that, but an independent study [would be] provided at a very reasonable cost—a nominal cost. If this article does not pass, if we have to wait till spring to get the study done...it kind of ties our hands for the next four, five, six months. We don't feel it's fair to the seniors of this community to delay because of this article not passing. The selectmen voted unanimously in favor of it; my board, the Elder Affairs and a lot of other people, I think, will be in favor of a small expenditure to dot the 'i's' and cross the 't's' for the senior study."

• Marita Carpenter, Social Service League President:
"At the Social Service League, a big part of our services is to provide support to Elder Affairs. We all know that Cohasset Elder Affairs needs new home. I would really ask for your support passing this article tonight so we can get this study done, and do it right. Please support Cohasset's elders."

• Mike Coughlin, Town Manager:
"My wife isn't present because she's actually home cooking for the senior center meals program for tomorrow and the next day... It's been said that a great society is measured by how it educates its young and how it takes care of its elderly. And when we're running a general fund budget [surplus] of $300,000, it's only fitting and appropriate that we invest, and I use that term invest, the small sum of $15,000 to make sure that we have everything we need to make the case to fund a first-class senior center through a public/private partnership."

COMMENTARY

'Cohasset is at a crossroads'

MIKE COUGHLIN

It has been said that we are a nation of laws not men. It is the cornerstone of our democracy. I have come to realize that the town's failure to follow the law is the very crux of Cohasset's problem.

Editor's note: Town Manager Mike Coughlin presented his remarks at the Selectmen's meeting Tuesday.

I have been Town Manager for four months and I can say with pride and without hesitation that much has been accomplished. Nevertheless, we have come to a crossroads — one fork leads to success while the other only increases the probability of the town living with the same issues that have crippled this community financially for years.

At the December 5th Special Town Meeting, our community took a major step forward in restoring the confidence in our community's finances. Last year, Cohasset was unable to submit its tax recap in a timely fashion, which is the cornerstone of municipal finance and a key indicator of stability. We came very close of repeating this year.

Shortly after taking over in August, it was brought to my attention that the accounting issues were much deeper than initially believed. The prospect of being unable to submit the tax recap for a second year in a row loomed on the horizon. Through an extraordinary effort by your town hall "team" we are about to do what many believed impossible and what we couldn't do a year ago — submit the tax recap.

When I announced in October, that we were going to submit the Town's balance sheet to the DOR by November 22nd – some thought that the schedule was too ambitious. DOR also did not feel we could get this job done right in so little time. Yet we did it sending a message to Boston that "Team Cohasset" is not just a catchy phrase — it is becoming a fiscal reality.

At the special town meeting, "Team Cohasset" did it again. We have resolved the budget issues and we are now going all out to submit the tax recap by Dec 15. We also approved funds to continue the overhaul our community's finances. Monies approved will allow the consultants to continue, underwrite an audit of the Sewer Capital Project fund and fund a new study of water and sewer rates. I am also pleased to report that the DOR will begin a comprehensive Financial Management Review the first of April. Initial coordination will begin in March. More needs to be done.

It has been said that we are a nation of laws not men. It is the cornerstone of our democracy. I have come to realize that the town's failure to follow the law is the very crux of Cohasset's problem.

It is clear that for years the laws relating to financial accounting were not followed, the laws relating to procurement were not observed, the Open Meeting Law has been scoffed at and perhaps most importantly the simple law of human decency – treating our employees with dignity and respect has been ignored. In going forward, this must dramatically change.

At recent meeting, the decorum and respect demonstrated towards town employees is not worthy of the standards that Cohasset has set for itself.

More importantly, my ability to effectively manage pursuant to the Town Manager Act has been made more challenging. Going forward, this too — I hope will change.

Under the Town Manager Act and Article 4 Section 21 of the town bylaws, the appointment of the Finance Director/Town Accountant is within the purview of the Town Manager. Once appointed, the Board of Selectmen has 15 days to reject that appointment.

In the spirit of compromise, I agreed not to formally appoint until the Board of Selectmen had an opportunity to interview that candidate. Instead, the Board requested that I bring forward two candidates and that these interviews be held in Executive Session.

If we are going to signal that this town is ready to fully embrace the law, it must start with this appointment. Put simply, it would be a violation of the Open Meeting Law to go forward with that process.

We must recognize that the Town Manager Act was passed by the voters of this community. In essence it is the community's constitution. It is our law. Under the Act, while I am appointed by the Selectmen and "responsible to" the Board, I work for the people of this community.

As defined by the act, I am also the Chief Financial Officer of this town with a fiduciary responsibility to the town, the taxpayers and to the Department of Revenue. In recent months, the Director of Accountants has expressed concern whether these fiduciary responsibilities were being compromised- first to the former Finance Director and most recently to me personally after the balance sheet was certified and just prior to the Special Town Meeting.

The cornerstone of this fiduciary responsibility is to follow the law and to provide the right environment for our financial professionals to do their jobs. Whether it is the appointment process or the implementation of a software system, the responsibility lies with the Town Manager. Consequently, I am respectfully requesting that the BOS honor the process in the Town Manager Act and the town by laws concerning the appointment of the Finance Director/Town Accountant.

To that end, I also expect the BOS to hold my appointee and me fully accountable. Consequently, I am requesting that this matter be deferred until Dec. 13th. It would be my request that I be allowed to provide the name of one finalist who be interviewed by the Board of Selectmen in Open Session on that date.

At the same time, I would ask the Board to immediately foster an environment where the professionals tasked with serving the citizens of this great community are allowed to do their jobs and likewise be held accountable.

In closing, I believe "Team Cohasset" has turned a corner and great days are ahead. In "Going Forward" I am inspired by West Point where I attended command school. In the Army, it was duty, honor, country — in Cohasset, we must to forge an environment of Duty, Honor, Community with the hope as General Douglas McArthur reasoned.... "These three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be and what you will be."

enjoy what they are doing. Parents, you should be reading to your child every day regardless of the age, reading comprehension ability or reading ability. The earlier you start, the better.

So my suggestion to you is to make a change in your home. Reverse this technology craze! Instead of turning on the TV, open a good book with your child and enjoy the benefits of reading-aloud with your family. Reading with your child and family can create new connections and better relationships. As a result, you can watch your child develop into an avid reader.

Volunteer to support our seniors

ORONTE & RICHARDSON

Without volunteers to help keep the Café and many other Elder Affairs programs going we would certainly be lost, but there is more that can be done.

Sponsored by The Friends of Elder Affairs the Cohasset Café held each Monday morning at the Lightkeepers provides Cohasset seniors with an opportunity to gather, grab a cup of coffee, and chat about the events of the day or the days of yore.

From April through November, this weekly event is a forum for our seniors to stay engaged on current events, locally and nationally, share some advice with the group, socialize with friends, old and new, or to be reminded of just how special Cohasset is from the vantage point of the Lightkeepers. We would love nothing more than to keep the Café open year-round, but as winter weather looms and access to the Lightkeepers and the current location of Elder Affairs becomes impossible we are forced to close the Café and say goodbye for the season.

With seniors representing nearly one-quarter of the residents of Cohasset we think each year at this time how much more we could be doing for those who have given us so much. Without volunteers to help keep the Café and many other Elder Affairs programs going we would certainly be lost, but there is more that can be done. Budgets are tight, we spend each day running from here to there and back again, but we cannot take for granted that much of what we love about Cohasset can be contributed to the legacy of our seniors.

In 2012, we ask that you take a moment to think about our seniors. You can volunteer at the Café, volunteer at Elder Affairs, take a moment to check-in with your neighbors and ask if they need anything, or support the efforts to build our seniors a year-round center that they can call their own.

Wouldn't it be nice to not have to say goodbye for the winter!

Karen Golden Oronte is President, The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, and Mary Kay Richardson is Vice President, The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Willcutt Corner is a regular column in the Mariner. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Send us your stuff

Time to start it all over.

Winter sports are ready for face time.

Well, I can't hold it off any longer. The winter is finally here, although as I write this it's more like spring or early fall, a fact that I truly don't have a problem with.

It may not feel like it outside, but I see it on TV with the Christmas specials (catch the Eureka special episode on SyFy if you get a chance. It's an instant classic) and on the radio, well when I'm not listening to sports talk or trying to change the channel when that holiday music comes on.

Getting to the point though, basketball and hockey and wrestling are all on the agenda starting the next few weeks.

There's indoor track and so much more.

Let me start here with a quick request.

Coaches, players, parents and friends, as we embark on another great season, I'd like to get everyone in the loop when it comes to getting some newspaper face time.

In other words, send me your stuff.

In the winter time, between the four towns I cover, there are about 22 or 23 teams to follow.

That's just the high school varsity.

Add in youth sports and JV and middle schools, well the number grows.

That's why I am asking for your help.

If you have a team that hasn't been in the paper, feel free to write up a few words and send them my way.

That's wwassersug@wickedlocal.com or 781-837-4577.

That's at every level.

If you're a player, maybe a team captain, ask your coach if you can write a few paragraphs and send it on.

School newspaper writers, if you have a hot sports scoop, I'm listening. Coaches, if you don't hear from me or miss my call, write it up or give me a call, or ask a parent or player to be media liason.

I do ask to keep things positive though.

Youth coaches and parents, let's get those kids in the news.

Snap a photo or two and send it over. Just try to make sure it's at least 1 MB so it will print.

Youth roundups are always invited.

We don't need long stories there. Give me a score and name three or four kids who

Local rider wins title

Outstanding performance leads to Belgium trip

Things have been going well for Cohasset's Nate Morse.

In the past few weeks, the Cohasset High School junior who competes in Cyclocross, a bicycle competition combining road, off-road racing with various obstacles and hazards, won the Verge New England title that capped a 15-race series that started in September.

Morse won the Men's Overall Amateur Division and took second-place in the Junior Division, missing the top spot by one point.

He has also been selected to participate in the Eurocross

Sixth grade girls win in dramatic fashion

To paraphrase the old song, "What a difference a year makes!"

Last year as Fledgling Fifths, the current Cohasset sixth grade Old Colony League (OCL) girls travel team trekked to Kingston in the second week of the season. The Blue & White were treated rather rudely by their hosts, who towered over the Cohasset girls, to the tune of a 34-7 defeat. Kingston would go on to an undefeated, championship season in which the Kingston girls won all of their games by an average margin of 30 points over every OCL rival.

So when Cohasset, which finished with an 8-6 record last year, good for sixth place played well or tried hard.

You'd be surprised how many kids get their names in the paper after just a few weeks.

When the roundups are shorter, it helps in the editing process.

Like I said, all it needs is a simple score, Sailors 5, Outoftowners 2

Then a roundup – Ace Stevens hit three crucial free throws (or scored a hat trick) as the Skippers (your team here) beat the Outoftowners 5-2 on Saturday at Outoftown Stadium.

More roundup – Anthony Ravioli led the Sailors with 22 points, while Wayne Parish and Mike Zealous chipped in eight points (or each scored a goal) in the victory.

Horace Wagner had a stellar day on defense.

The Skippers play Saturday morning at arch-rival Atlantis.

Right there is a perfect example of what we'd need in youth sports, even if all the above names are fictional characters from my sixth-grade stop-motion Super-8, no sound animated sci-fi classic, Mike Zealous – Space Hero.

That's it.

Don't worry about play-by-play or detailing every bucket or goal. Don't pull your hair out making up nicknames for the kids or finding the NBA or NHL star they most resemble.

Those kinds of things are usually edited out anyway. If one gets in, score yourself a magic invisible pineapple for the trophy cabinet.

Seriously though, I appreciate it when people step up and help out.

It's good for everyone.

For students, in the past some teachers have worked with us to use your printed stories as extra credit.

It's also fun to see your name in the paper.

I am also always thrilled to get ideas for spotlights and feature stories too.

So remember the next time you notch a hat trick or hit that game-winning three-pointer from midcourt at the buzzer, send it to your Mariner.

As a famous TV psychiatrist used to say – I'm listening.

Camp in Belgium that brings together the top 17-and 18-year old riders in the world.

"Every year a group goes over with Jeff Proctor, who runs it and you get a chance to see how different cycling is different in Europe," Morse said. "I haven't raced in Europe yet."

Morse said he's seen the style there.

"It's a higher level of riding," he said. "Europeans are faster. I think that's ingrained in the culture. Instead of football and baseball, people there grow up riding. European riders are also generally more aggressive. They're not afraid to put you into a post or a tree. It's like a combination of hockey and bike riding."

Morse said early exposure is a big thing for Americans who compete in the sport.

"The point is to bring the young guys over before they move into the elite categories," he said. "They'll see what they're facing."

Morse is excited about his Belgium trip, which starts next week and ends Jan. 1.

"I'm absolutely excited," he said. "It will be a lot of fun, an eye opening experience. I'm staying at the U.S. Team house."

Morse has continually improved.

Last year, he finished fourth at Nationals, and at the time wasn't thrilled with himself.

"Thinking back, I'm pretty happy," he said. "I had been riding second until the last lap. Then I got cramped. I was nervous. My stomach wouldn't take in food. I lost two places in that last lap."

Cohasset's Nate Morse brings his bike up a hill during recent competition.

BASKETBALL

in the 12-team OCL, drew Kingston in the season opener Sunday, the Blue & White knew they would be in for a challenging encounter, to say the least.

But when the buzzer sounded to signal the end of the first half, the Cohasset girls found themselves trailing by a slim 7-6 margin. As evident by the low score, the contest through the first 20 minutes was a hard fought, defensive battle in which neither team yielded any loose ball or rebound without a fight and no layup was uncontested.

During the intermission, the Cohasset girls practiced their free throws, knowing that close games always come down to success, or failure, at the free throw line. Although the offense on both sides picked up somewhat in the second half, neither team was able to open up more than a three point lead. Moreover, the intensity that had been on display in the first half increased exponentially, with all nine Cohasset girls — Aidan Chamberlain, Mary Catherine Crumley, Lauren Cunning, Zoe Doherty, Kate Fitzpatrick, Elle Hansen, Leanne Hayden, Margaret Norton, and Kate Quigley — and their Kingston rivals taking turns hitting the floor and wrestling for every loose ball.

The back and forth play continued until Kingston hit a free throw with about three minutes to go to tie the game at 16-16, where matters stood at the end of regulation, sending the game into overtime. With both teams pressing full court from the outset of the two minute OT session, open looks at the basket were few and far between at either end.

Cohasset had the final chance to win in OT with an inbounds play under the Kingston hoop with 2.6 seconds on the clock. But with Kingston effectively defending against an easy bucket inside, Hansen, who was inbounding the ball for Cohasset, was forced to throw it deep to Crumley just inside the three point line. Mary Catherine took a dribble and was ready to throw up a shot, but she was run into by a Kingston player. The ref called a blocking foul as the final buzzer sounded, sending Mary Catherine to the free throw line with 0:00 showing on the clock.

Crumley, who was standing alone at the line with an empty lane in front of her, bounced the ball a couple of times, took a deep breath, took a quick look at the hoop — and nonchalantly swished her shot. The delirious Blue & White girls raced onto the court to mob their teammate, while their stunned Kingston counterparts were trying to comprehend that they had lost a game for the first time ever.

Hansen led Cohasset with eight points, followed by Hayden with four, Crumley with three, and Chamberlain with two. But the real story for the Super Sixers was their total team defensive effort that held Kingston to its lowest point total by far in two seasons, especially in the frantic final two minutes of regulation and two minute OT session, in which every Cohasset girl played a role in keeping Kingston off the board.

The OCL squad travels to Pembroke Saturday and hosts Norwell Sunday.

Cohasset's other sixth grade girls travel team, which plays in the Kingston Sports Center League (KSCL), also enjoyed a successful debut with an impressive 18-10 win over Duxbury.

The Blue & White, who never trailed in the contest, featured a balanced scoring attack in which seven of the nine girls made an entry into the scorebook. Ciera Carlyle had four points with Libby Lydon, Bridget Desjourdy, Sara Nisbet, Kiley Crough, and Caitlin Marat all chipping in with a bucket apiece.

The KSCL squad is back in action Saturday at 4 p.m.

Local rider receives Dressage Bronze Medal

Rattenbury and Anasazi honored

Congratulations to Michaela Rattenbury for being awarded the United States Dressage Federation's (USDF) Bronze Medal signifying competence as an equestrian competing at First, Second and Third levels of dressage. The honor requires achievement of two qualifying scores at nationally recognized shows in front of certified judges for each of the three progressive levels of training.

Scores must be earned at different competitions and with different judges. Horse and rider are judged as a pair against a standardized ideal for each section of the tests to assure uniformity nationally.

Rattenbury, a student at Cohasset High School, began her quest for the USDF Bronze medal while riding under Rita Brown at Longmeadow Farm in Scituate. She spent the last two years daily caring for and riding an American bred Trakehner horse, named Anasazi, in Marshfield and taking lessons from multiple local trainers to prepare. Michaela and Anasazi completed her First Level dressage scores last season and worked through the winter learning and perfecting the skills required for the next levels.

This summer she completed all remaining required scores in just four rides at four recognized shows. She not only received qualifying scores for each test ridden, but also placed first in each class even riding against adult and professional riders.

Michaela and Anasazi were also awarded the Junior High Score Rider award at the Carbery Fields Dressage Show in Connecticut where she rode Third Level.

The USDF will honor Michaela and present her with a certificate and the Bronze medal at the Annual Awards Banquet and Salute Gala.

Michaela will also be recognized in the USDF Yearbook which highlights the nations top horse and rider teams at each of the US and FEI Levels.

Michaela intends to continue riding and competing through the Intercollegiate Dressage Association Program at the college she attends next year.

LIFE AT CHS

Cradles to Crayons drive is underway

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Can it just be Christmas Break already? Most of the college kids will be returning next week, and it just does not seem fair that we will be stuck in school until the Eve of Christmas Eve. But, frankly, it's not really looking a lot like Christmas with this 60-degree weather and cold rain instead of snow.

The Student Council Blood Drive is next Friday, December 16th in the gymnasium. Sign up all week during lunch to give blood for the American Red Cross. The table will be up front, near D Gill. It's a great cause, an amazing thing to do around the holidays, and you will get free snacks and a coupon to Chili's. So why not do it?

The Volunteer Club still needs your help. The Cradles to Crayons Coat Drive will continue until next Wednesday, December 14th. On the 14th, all donations will be brought to the Cradles to Crayons Giving Factory in Boston to be sorted and distributed to local needy families. Give the gift of giving this year.

The Debate Team had their first debate on Tuesday. This year, the topic is Space Exploration. The Math Team has had a few meets already, and are doing very well. Great job to of the both teams.

The Holiday Edition of the Spinnaker is coming out the Friday before break! All articles are due next week. Speaking of deadlines, seniors must submit their Yearbook write-up. Parents, your ads for the Yearbook are overdue as well. Send them in before it's too late.

This week was filled with winter sports scrimmages. The first basketball games are on Tuesday, December 13th. Boys Varsity will tip off at 6:30 in Abington while girls will play at the same time at home. The girls' hockey teams first-ever Varsity matchup will take place on Wednesday, December 14th at 2 in Norwell. The boys' hockey team will play on the 14th in Abington at 5:55. Wrestling, gymnastics, and swim meets are coming up soon as well. All of the winter sports teams are going to be amazing this year, and I can't wait for all of the post-season matches!

That's all for this week, Cohasset. Enjoy the weekend!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High. Her column runs weekly during the school year.

Holiday Stroll Caroling Saturday

A Holiday Caroling Stoll will take place Saturday, Dec. 10. Meet at Parish House on the Common at 4:30 p.m. At 4:45 p.m. walk downtown to Darilynn's Gift Shop and enjoy hot chocolate, coffee and cookies.

Caroling, led by Allegra Martin and the First Parish Choir, begins at 5 p.m.

I LOST, NOT GAINED, 7 lbs. OVER THE HOLIDAYS!

Before

AGE 60

I went to check out Get In Shape For Women on November 24th - 3 days before my 60th birthday. I had no intention of joining until after the holidays in January - I was going to have one last splurge. I was convinced to join for 6 months that very day. Instead of gaining weight over the holidays I lost 7 pounds to my amazement! On December 22nd, I knew the Get In Shape For Women program would work to change my lifestyle, and I upgraded to a full year.

Before Get In Shape For Women I had never been on an elliptical machine or a treadmill, never lifted weights or used any other machine. I had always done my own exercises at home, skied and hiked - but this was truly a new experience in my life and I loved it! I feel absolutely great. I'm thrilled that I've gone from a size 16 to a size 6. 30 pounds lighter and 17 inches thinner. The manager at my studio sends daily emails with all sorts of information to motivate and keep you on track. What gym does that? I thank the staff for their nutrition expertise and the trainers for all their support. Without them I would not be writing this success story. Also, I'd like to mention that I've not been sick one day since joining.

Patrice is a 'work of art'

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Patrice, a white and black female, with unusual markings. She is a natural "work of art." Patrice was born to a feral (unhomed) mother. She was brought to the shelter and rarely ventured down from the highest possible perch. Our experienced "foster mom" offered to take her and thus socialize her. Patrice, who is 8 months old, is now a lap cat, purrs frequently and is sure to delight any household that decides to give her a "forever home." HSAR hopes to find Patrice a home for the holidays. If interested please call Polly at 781-925-0073 or Judy at 781-534-4902.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

Patrice, who is 8 months old, is now a lap cat, purrs frequently, and is sure to delight any household that decides to give her a "forever home."

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

The Kittendales calendar is available either online or at the shelter. It makes a unique holiday gift. There may be a short wait as the calendar sold out at the Hull Holiday Showcase and HSAR has had to re-order.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 19, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) I know, dear Lamb, that you don't like anyone trying to take charge of one of your projects, but try to be a bit more flexible. A new idea could help hasten a positive result.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) I'm sure, like the time-thrifty Taurus that you are, that you've done much of your holiday shopping. But don't relax yet. Wrap those gifts now to save yourself lots of unwanted pressure.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be receptive when a family member or friend asks to confide in you. Your positive reaction could ensure that he or she will have a happy holiday experience.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't be rushed into wrapping up that workplace problem. Consider leaving it until after the holidays. This way you'll have the facts you need to reach the right resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You'll get news that will make you glow brighter than the lights of the holiday season. Be sure to use what you learn both carefully and kindly, to avoid giving the wrong impression.

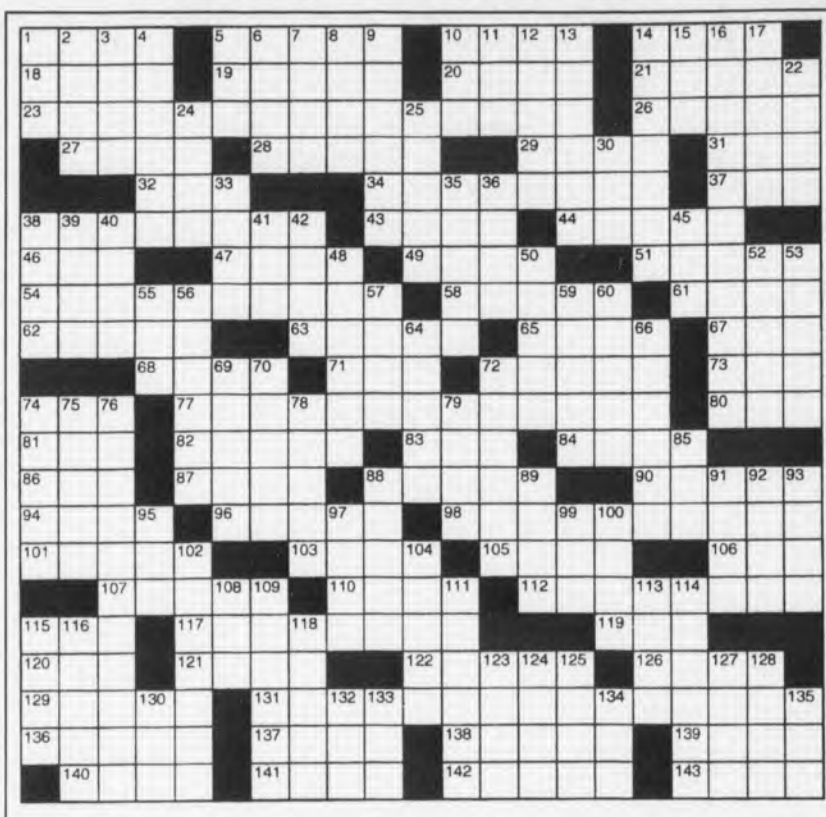
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That frayed relationship could be mended in time for the holidays if you were more flexible. Give a little, and you could get back a lot more than you imagined.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Things might not seem to be settling down as quickly as you would prefer. But it might be just a little holiday time flutter. You'll soon get news that will lead to more stability.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Stop getting so involved in everyone's personal problems that you lose precious time with loved ones. Remember, even the Supreme Court closes for the holidays.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) All signs point to a bright holiday, with all of those pesky problems finally resolved in your favor. Share the good times with people you love and, of course, who love you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your plans should not be set in stone and cemented over. Leave some openings in case you need to make changes. Spend the holidays with your nearest and dearest.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Surprise! This holiday finds you on the receiving end of the generosity of those who are usually the recipients of so much that you give so freely and lovingly.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) That piece of good news assures that you'll be swimming in clearer, calmer waters this holiday season. There might be a storm or two ahead, but you'll weather it all in fine style.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a flair for seeing things as you'd like them to be, as well as a gift for turning your perceptions into reality.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Moderate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

PROGRAM AT FIRST PARISH

The December Dilemma addressed

When families are trying to blend holiday traditions, the winter season can feel more like a minefield than a celebration. When the family is attempting to blend different religious heritages as well as particular traditions, decisions like where to go for "the holiday" can become fraught with tension and misunderstanding. And to make it all even harder, time seems to accelerate at this time of year and choices get made in a whirlwind, without time to contemplate, consider, and identify what is most important and space to find creative ways to honor each person's truth.

This holiday season, set aside some time for just that sort of reflection and deliberation. Please join the Rev. Dr. Anita Farber-Robertson, Interim Minister of First Parish of Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 11 from 12:30-2 p.m. for a facilitated conversation on The December Dilemma at the Parish House (23 N. Main St.) of the First Parish of Cohasset Unitarian Universalist Church.

Participants will spend time recognizing how difficult these choices can be and discussing ways in which different religious traditions can be honored with no loss of meaning.

All are welcome, and there is no fee for this program. Participants are asked to RSVP to Sandy Bailey, First Parish Administrator at 781-383-1100, or sbailey@firstparish.org in order to assure sufficient seating. Childcare will be provided.

John H. Meyer

WINDHAM, ME. – John Hornblower Meyer, 92, died at home of heart failure on November 29, 2011.

The son of Alfred R. Meyer and Helen Hornblower Meyer, John was born in Belmont, MA, on November 20, 1919. He graduated from Milton Academy in 1938 and Yale University in 1942. While at Yale, he was a member of the swimming team, including the 1942 squad that won the NCAA championship. In that meet, John finished second in the 200 yard breaststroke, utilizing the newly devised dolphin kick that later became part of the butterfly stroke.

After graduation, John joined the Army, rising to the rank of Captain in the 694th Quartermaster Truck Company, serving primarily in England during World War II.

John earned his MBA at Harvard Business School in 1947. He spent his entire professional career at United Shoe Machinery Corporation in Boston. At the time of his retirement in 1972, he was a Vice President and the company's Chief Financial Officer.

From 1947 to 1977, John lived in Cohasset, MA and was active in local affairs, serving on the school board; vestry of St. Stephens Episcopal Church; and the boards of the South Shore Community Center and Cohasset Yacht Club. He was instrumental in establishing the Cohasset Swim Center. He also served as chairman of the board of The Boys and Girls Camps of Boston; president of the Treasurers Club of Boston; and trustee of Plimoth Plantation, which was established on land bequeathed by his maternal grandparents. He was an incorporator of the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank, Massachusetts General Hospital, and the New England Deaconess Hospital. Always attuned to our nation's heritage, John was a member of the Union Club of Boston, Forty-Nine Club, Sons of the American Revolution, and the Boston Athenaeum.

John moved to Windham, Maine in 1977, fulfilling a lifelong dream of farming, while remaining active in civic causes, including the local Boy Scout Troop and Kiwanis club.

John had an abiding love of the ocean and sailing, including membership in the Blue Water Sailing Club. He played tennis and golf for decades, never quite reaching his goal of breaking 100. With his wife Patty, he engaged in numerous elder hostel excursions, developing a commitment to Native American culture. Most of all, he enjoyed spending time with his extensive family, orchestrating sportive activities at his Mt. Desert, Island, ME and later Frye Island, ME summerhouses; presiding over grand reminiscences at birthday and Thanksgiving gatherings; and holding spirited discussions about current affairs. Throughout his life, he maintained his conservative fiscal values, while supporting community engagement and encouraging younger generations to hold on to their idealism.

John is survived by his wife Patricia (Darling), as well as his 11 children/ stepchildren and their spouses: William and Barbara Burnham of Grosse Pointe Shores, MI; Robert and Gretchen Burnham of Sewickley, PA; John H., Jr. and Martha Meyer of West Rockport, ME and Littleton, NH; Peter and Eileen Meyer of East Falmouth, MA; August and Patricia Meyer of Randolph, VT; Sarah Woodhead of Pomfret, VT; Harriott and James Shea of East Montpelier, VT; Dorothy and Timothy Storrow of Gill, MA; Christopher and Patricia Hidell of Hull, MA; Bennett and Carol Hidell of Windham, ME; and Brooke Hidell and Jessica Shivik of South Casco, ME. Meyer, Jr.

VILLAGE OFFICE

Plastic surgeon sets up shop

Ford grew up in Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There's a new doc in town. Cohasset Village has a plastic surgeon, and it's the first such practice to open in this town. Dr. Christian Ford, who grew up in Cohasset, opened the doors to his new plastic surgery practice on Dec. 1.

Dr. Ford's office, located on Depot Court next to Mr. Dooley's, the new Irish pub, has a warm, relaxing atmosphere and could become a fixture in the neighborhood. While Ford's private practice serves as home base for cosmetic procedures — such as brow lifts and Botox injections — more complicated surgeries that require anesthesia are handled as out-patient operations. Ford also works out of hospitals along the South Shore and South Coast, including Tobey Hospital in Wareham and St. Luke's in New Bedford.

With a degree from Boston University School of Medicine and residency at Stanford under his belt, coming back to Cohasset was always in the works, said Ford.

"I have many fond memories," he said of growing up in Cohasset. "It's a hard town to beat."

Ford, whose family moved to town when he was eight, grew up on Sohier Street before moving to Jerusalem Road.

"I am a product of Cohasset school systems, from grade three to graduation," said Ford. "I had wonderful teachers — good people who really made an impression on me."

Ford graduated from Cohasset High and spent a year at Colby College in Maine, but soon wanted to get back to Massachusetts. The next year, he transferred to BU. Ford, who always planned to practice medicine, became interested in plastic surgery in particular during med school, when researching wound healing. Ford's findings were published in the Annals of Plastic Surgery.

After spending six years completing his residency at Stanford, Ford missed his family and headed back east, securing a job at Southcoast Hospital in Dartmouth, Mass. in 2009. Ford spent two years working there, concentrating on breast reconstructive surgery and body contouring for gastric bypass patients.

Ford is passionate about his work, saying that for him, surgery is more of a calling than a career.

"I knew that I wanted to do medicine as far back as I can remember," said Ford. Despite plastic

TM appoints finance director

Gallagher was his top choice

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Scituate's town accountant is joining "Team Cohasset."

Mary Gallagher, who has served in Scituate for 20 years, was officially appointed Cohasset's finance director/town accountant during the Tuesday, Dec. 13 Board of Selectmen meeting.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who made the appointment after allowing the selectmen to interview Gallagher, along with Advisory Chairman Peter Pescatore, said that Gallagher was his top choice.

"She is a very respected team player [in Scituate]," said Coughlin. "I believe she will fit in well here. She's not afraid to speak her mind, and Mary is able to deliver."

"I feel great about it; I'm excited. I'm looking forward to going back where I started."
Mary Gallagher, Finance Director

He had interviewed nine candidates with the help of independent financial consultants Eric Kinsherf and Dan Sullivan, who have been working part-time in as interim town accountant and treasurer collector, respectively. Coughlin said that Kinsherf and Sullivan "grilled" the candidates; Kinsherf told the board he was especially tough on Gallagher, given her experience and level of expertise.

Coughlin had told the board that they would have two final candidates to Next steps for solar power

AEC weighing its options

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The group debated whether or not the town should have two separate RFPs for the landfill and the roof.

Fresh off of a Special Town Meeting victory, during which townspeople voted to approve leasing town land and the school roof to potentially house solar panels, Cohasset's Alternative Energy Meeting met Monday night to discuss their next steps.

Town engineer Tom Gruber, who is helping the committee draft a request for proposals (RFP) for solar energy vendors who would install a solar array on the town landfill at Cedar Street, attended Monday's meeting to "listen and learn." School business manager Dave DeGennaro and School Committee members Jeanne Astino and Linda Snowdale were also present. DeGennaro has drafted an RFP to find an energy company to install panels on the school roof.

The town meeting vote allows the town to lease out the landfill property and the school roof for 20 years at $1 per year to a solar energy

William Quigley

Name: William Quigley.

Occupation: Deputy Chief of Police.

Best day of your life: I really don't have a "best day" that I can think of. I've been very fortunate and try to consider every day a "best day" Life is short....try to have fun and make a difference.

Best vacation: I enjoy our department trips — we have several every year. Whether it is snowmobiling deep into Maine, Police Week in Washington DC, or hanging out on the beach in Aruba. There is a ton of camaraderie and officers from other towns have even started to come with us.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: 4th of July.

Favorite meal: Buffalo Chicken.

Best book: "Deception Point" (Dan Brown).

Best actor: Clint Eastwood.

Best TV show: "Tosh.0" (not really the best, but it is comical).

Best music, group, or artist: The Killers....but I also like traditional Irish music.

Pet peeve: Negative people (complainers).

Most embarrassing moment: I was in a coffee shop in uniform and was paying for my purchase. There was a pretty large line. I thought the cup with money on the counter was a take-a-penny / leave-a-penny cup. I helped myself to the cup and removed 15 cents because I didn't want to break a large bill. After rifling through the cup I noticed there was a large note on the back that read, "TIPS". I returned the young lady's 15 cents and added a couple dollars to the cup to smooth things over.

Fun fact: I use to work as a news photographer. I'm still very much into photography and have giant collection of cameras and lenses (I have to find a cheaper hobby...).

Goal: To continue to have fun and enjoy every day.

Person you'd most like to meet: JFK.

Biggest worry: I have never been a worrier. I let others do the worrying for me.

Best part of Cohasset: The harbor on an early summer morning — like 5:30am.

NEWS UPDATE

Tax classification hearing: selectmen vote

After the tax classification was held over from last week's Board of Selectmen meeting, Deputy Assessor Mary Quill came before the board again on Tuesday night to solicit their vote.

The board voted to adopt a uniform tax rate for another fiscal year. The tax rate, which was anticipated to be $11.92 per $1,000 of assessed valuation for fiscal year 2012, could change minimally, according to Quill. The rate is awaiting certification by the Department of Revenue, which should be completed this week.

The board also voted against adopting a small commercial exemption.

Department of corrections

Two items that appeared in last week's Mariner warrant correction.

• The Cohasset Triathlon has raised over $750,000 toward the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). It was reported as $75,000.

• Darilynn Evans is a board member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and helped organize the Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll. Last week's story identified Evans as the President of the Chamber; while she served as President from 2009-2010, Matthew Cunningham currently serves in the role.

The Mariner regrets these errors.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Fire team commended for saving a life

Members of the Cohasset Fire Department were commended during the Tuesday, Dec. 6 Board of Selectmen meeting for an act of heroism that took place on Tuesday, Nov. 1.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Town Manager Michael Coughlin presented certificates of commendation to Lieutenant/Paramedic John Dockray, Firefighter/Paramedic Laura Morrison, and Captain/EMT Paul Bilodeau. Firefighter/Paramedic Robert Martin was also honored, but was unable to attend the selectmen's meeting.

The fire department members were thanked for their role in saving a life, along with several members of the Cohasset Police Department. Police Lt. William Quigley first responded to a 911 call put through by dispatcher Harrison Schmidt from a civilian caller who found a cyclist collapsed at 32 Wheelwright Farm. Quigley arrived and relieved the civilian from administering chest compressions and rescue breath.

"The seamless work of the members of the public safety team played a crucial role in the survival of the victim during his sudden cardiac arrest."
Fire Chief Robert Silvia

Bilodeau, Dockray, Martin and Morrison arrived to find Quigley, along with Detective James MacLean and Officer James St. Ives performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation. The fire team took over from there, administering aggressive advanced life-support measures. The victim was taken into an ambulance, where Dockray, Martin and Morrison continued to treat him. Bilodeau drove the ambulance while Quigley assisted the fire team members with patient care.

Thanks to the efforts of the public safety team, the victim was resuscitated and recovered.

"The seamless work of the members of the public safety team played a crucial role in the survival of the victim during his sudden cardiac arrest," Silvia read from his letter of commendation. "Your actions speak well of you personally and professionally, and of the caliber of service our Fire Department provides to the citizens and residents of Cohasset."

ID thief opens charge accounts

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 53-year-old Cohasset woman is facing a nightmare of identity thefts. Identity thieves got a hold of her social security number and opened accounts in her name at Best Buy, Kohl's, Wal-Mart, Target and Men's Warehouse where they charged about $9,000 in merchandise, police said. When she started getting calls from these retailers she contacted a credit bureau and found out charges were made to accounts opened in her name. She reported the ID theft to police last week.

Cohasset detectives are working with her in the investigation and she will not be held responsible for the charges, police said. She had made online transactions but not to those retailers. It is not clear at this time how here social security number was compromised.

OUI (third offense)

Police responded to Wadleigh Park at the intersection of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road at 8 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 10) on a report of a car accident. Upon arrival, police found a 2008 Toyota Corolla on the island, up on the rocks. Cohasset paramedics checked out the 58-year-old Cohasset woman who had been driving.

Police said the woman was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication and failed a series of field sobriety tests. She was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (third offense); negligent operation of a motor vehicle and failure to drive in marked lanes. She was booked and held on $10,000 cash bail for the felony OUI arrest. The woman's mother arrived with the cash to bail her out, police said.

She woman had two prior OUI convictions: 1998 and 2002, both in Quincy District Court.

No trespass

Police have warned a 50-year-old man, who had a no-trespass order at the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street, that if he shows up again, he will be arrested.

Police said the man was spotted on the property on Monday (Dec. 5) and responding officers located him visiting his mother. They said he was aware that he was not supposed to be on the property. He will be arrested if he returns and his mother will be evicted, police said.

Deer hunting

At the request of the Environmental Police, Cohasset police checked the accesses to Wompatuck State Park off Doane Street, at Whitney Woods, the top of Crocker Lane and the end of the roadway to the Golden Living Center, for any trucks. Last week, the Environmental Police were investigating reports of deer hunting at night, which is illegal. They asked for Cohasset's help in finding anyone loading a dead deer, police said.

B&E, A&B

A 35-year-old Dorchester man is facing charges in both Cohasset and Norwell following a domestic incident on Dec. 5. Police said the man allegedly beat up his girlfriend, who is a Cohasset resident, and then went to Norwell where he allegedly broke into his girlfriend's mother's house. The girlfriend's mother was out of town and Norwell police found him staying there. In Norwell he is facing charges of breaking and entering and in Cohasset he is facing charges of domestic assault and battery, police said.

On a walk

A 43-year-old Hull man told police he was just out walking at 9 a.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 6) when they responded to a report of a suspicious man at the Greek Church on Jerusalem Road. Police said there have been break-ins in the area, hence the caller's concerns about potential suspicious activity.

No plates

Three people are facing charges following a traffic stop last Tuesday (Dec. 6) on King Street (Route 3A) by Sanctuary Pond Road. At around 10:45 p.m., an officer on patrol observed a 1973 dump truck go by with no plates. Right behind the dump truck was a 1998 Isuzu pickup truck that was tailgating as if to try and conceal the fact the dump truck did not have plates, police said.

Brunonia Barry's second novel is Map of True Places.

Fiction panel featured in January

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

The three writers will speak in a panel format about their novels, their muses, their own reading lists, and in general, the process of writing fiction.

To hold our interest, fiction must show us something new about humanity. If it's good it will hold a magnifying glass up to one of life's big themes, such as sex, love, commitment, etc., and probe just the tiniest particle of it. For example, consider the archetype of loss and how it shapes us as individuals.

We lose our first Eden when we exit the womb. A few years later, the realization of irrevocably broken toys and floating goldfish prepares us for big league stuff — loss of a breast, an ego, a home, a job, a loved one — when sleep doesn't come so easily any more. And so we crave the vicarious in our attempts to understand both the creative and destructive forces that shape our humanness.

"Sunday AuthorTalks" on January 8 features three novels in which loss has a particularly strong relevance — loss of loved ones, of innocence, of identity. Debut author Ilie Ruby's The Language of Trees is set in small town upper state New York where the central character returns after many years of absence to reconnect with a dying step father, a childhood romance, and her Senecan heritage.

Also a debut novelist, Randy Susan Meyers, in The Murderer's Daughters, tells the story of two sisters who strive to overcome the trauma of witnessing their father murder their mother.

Ilie Ruby author of The Language of Trees.

Brunonia Barry's second novel, Map of True Places, is about a psychotherapist who begins to find the strands of her own life in the suicide of a troubled patient. Barry's first novel, The Lace Reader, was a New York Times bestseller.

The three writers will speak in a panel format about their novels, their muses, their own reading lists, and in general, the process of writing fiction. Library Program Committee member Lynne DeGiacomo will moderate the discussion and invite audience questions.

The unique nature of January's "AuthorTalks" makes the content especially appealing to book groups. Each novel, through a singular viewpoint, explores the role of gender, setting, family, and in particular, how our understanding of past experience continues to influence who we are. The novels illuminate each other in their many contrasts and offer readers rich material to ponder and debate.

Following the panel talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for further discussion and book signing. All the novels are in paperback and will be available for purchase.

Admission is free, but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books, and the Cohasset Historical Society, or phone the Cohasset Library to reserve a seat (781-383-1348, ext. 1). Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about "Sunday AuthorTalks." Sunday, January 8, at 4 p.m..

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club. A Taste of Wine and Spirits, located in the Stop and Shop Plaza , has generously donated wines for the reception.

surgery's glossy, Hollywood reputation, Ford explained how he believes the work changes lives.

"It goes deeper than being shallow or superficial," said Ford. "It changes people's mindsets. And when they're happier, they can live life to the fullest. If I can help with that, it's worthwhile."

Ford put this belief into practice doing volunteer surgery in Guatemala. During his Stanford residency, Ford, along with several other physicians specializing in various areas, spent 10 days working at the Hospital de la Familia in Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala.

"I saw patients with a variety of problems — congenital abnormalities, cleft lips and palettes, horrible burns," said Ford. "It really made us realize what medicine is truly about: helping people. It put things into perspective."

Ford, who said he has always been passionate about volunteering, called his time in Guatemala "a life-changing experience."

The surgeon took that mentality and applied it to helping patients back in the states. Dedicated to helping people look better, feel better, and get healthier overall, Ford is committed to ensuring patient safety and comfort.

The doctor hopes folks will feel comfortable seeking him out, whether their need is major or minor. He advertises a full list of services on his website (see sidebar) and encourages potential patients to schedule a free consultation with him to discuss their options.

Helping people look and feel better, and ultimately changing lives, said Ford, "is what gives me the most enjoyment."

review, per their request that they would be allowed to interview two; Coughlin had originally wanted to present them with his top pick only. However, after hearing of this process, the second candidate dropped out. But the town manager reassured the board that Gallagher was, in fact, the top candidate, which they could see from the matrix used during the interview process — Gallagher outscored the other candidate.

Gallagher formerly worked in Cohasset's town accountant office before taking the job in Scituate. She told the selectmen that she is happy to have the opportunity to come back to Cohasset.

"I feel great about it; I'm excited," she said in a phone interview Wednesday. "I'm looking forward to going back where I started."

Gallagher did not seem intimidated to interview before the selectmen, and in fact said that she enjoyed meeting everyone. The new finance director also remarked that she would not be "scared away" from Cohasset's many financial issues.

"I look forward to the challenge," she told the board.

"I'm not afraid of it — it's just numbers," she added in her phone interview. "We'll straighten it out and get it running smoothly."

Most of the selectmen were satisfied with Coughlin's appointment.

"Excellent choice," said selectman Leland Jenkins.

Carr thanked Coughlin for "including us in the decision."

Pescatore, while calling Gallagher "a spectacular candidate" and commending her educational background and technical skills, had some questions for the new finance director regarding her personnel management style. Selectman Diane Kennedy had the same concern.

This is something Pescatore called "a weakness in most municipal departments."

Gallagher said that her management style involves treating employees as professionals; she admitted to never having had to fire an employee, although her department regularly set goals and objectives for the staff to follow, she said. The new finance director also said that the problem with Cohasset's finance department stemmed from the inconsistency in management.

"You haven't had a finance director consistently; you've been on and off with consultants," Gallagher said, adding that she plans to "set a procedure and a flow, and things will start to fall into place."

Coughlin discussed the matter of adding personnel to the finance department. Gallagher will need a full-time assistant town accountant. The town is also still in need of a full-time treasurer collector. In the meantime, a Special Town Meeting voted provided funds to keep consultants Kinsherf and Sullivan onboard past Dec. 31 to help ease the transition to a new, full-time finance director. Acting as department heads, both Kinsherf and Sullivan recommended Gallagher to Coughlin.

Kinsherf told the board that if Gallagher succeeds, "if the town improves, it makes all three of us look good."

Pescatore agreed that having at least one more full-time employee in the finance department is "one position that I think is a must." The finance director needs to be freed up from day-to-day accounting, both Pescatore and Coughlin said. "You can't do the detail and the vision at the same time," said Pescatore.

Coughlin made the official appointment later in the meeting. The selectmen then have 15 days to decide if they will accept or reject his recommendation. While selectman Fred Koed told Gallagher that she probably has nothing to worry about, selectman Kennedy said that she would like to sleep on the matter.

Gallagher must give 30 days' notice to her current employers before assuming her new post. In the meantime, she said that she would be available to come to Cohasset for meetings and briefings as needed.

SOLAR

vendor, who would be tasked with installing the solar arrays and maintaining them. The chosen vendor would then sell the energy produced by the solar panels back to the town at a reduced rate (depending on the meter, the town could purchase the electricity for somewhere in the area of $0.6 per kilowatt hour). The project is not only a green energy initiative, the committee has explained, but will also help the town realize significant savings on electricity.

The group debated whether or not the town should have two separate RFPs for the landfill and the roof. While some felt having two properties listed in a single RFP would be more attractive to a solar energy vendor, showcasing more property altogether, and therefore more wattage and potential money the vendor could make on electricity (which would, in turn, equal more savings for the town), others felt that it is important to keep the two entities separate, as a landfill and a roof require different engineering.

Gruber was in favor of having two separate RFPs.

"If you force somebody to respond to both" RFPs, said Gruber, "it will limit the amount of good people that could respond to one."

DeGennaro countered, "We could get a better price."

The committee also talked about putting language in an RFP that would allow the chosen vendor to bid on both the roof and the landfill.

John Herth, who joined the committee last month, suggested conducting a feasibility study on the landfill before sending out an RFP. Herth said that this is what the town of East Hampton did. Gruber countered that the energy vendor the committee selects would have to conduct a study prior to installing a solar array, anyway.

Gruber suggested that the committee put "everything they want" in the RFP, and then see what the energy vendor has to offer.

The committee also discussed hiring an outside consultant to write the RFP and communicate directly with solar power vendors on the town's behalf. DeGennaro said that he has spoken with a consultant from Beacon Power, who would provide a similar service for the school. DeGennaro said he believed this service would be helpful.

"I don't want to make a mistake or have us miss something," DeGennaro said.

The Alt. Energy Committee has been in talks with Al Bangert, superintendent of Scituate's Department of Public Works, to find out how Scituate went about installing solar panels on their capped landfill. Scituate's Alt. Energy Committee prepared their own RFP and had it vetted by town counsel before going out for bid for an energy vendor. Committee members Marie Caristi-MacDonald and Bodell, along with Gruber, met with Bangert last month. Gruber said he has been reading through Scituate's RFP and subbing Scituate references with Cohasset ones, but as the document is extensive, he has yet to finish reading the entire thing.

While the matter of hiring a third-party consultant remained undecided at the moment, the committee discussed inviting various solar power vendors to come to an Alt. Energy meeting and make presentations this winter; this will help the committee decide who to hire to install the panels, eventually.

The committee members agreed to consolidate a list of potential vendors and begin inviting them to future meetings.

New members

The Alternative Energy Committee also recently welcomed two new members, and hopes to welcome more: Tanya Bodell, and John Herth, who both joined the committee this past fall, are acting as co-chairs. Bodell is an economist with a specialization in transmission and a consultant in the energy industry, while Herth is a LEED-certified architect for Dunkin' Brands.

Those interested in joining the committee can write a letter to the Board of Selectmen or email Town Manager Mike Coughlin at mcoughlin @townofcohasset.org.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE BRIEF

Social media conduct, concussion policies

The school committee voted to approve two new school polices: one, involving employees' professional conduct when using the internet and social media, and the second creating a guideline for suspected head injuries/concussions.

The social media policy discourages employees from conducting personal communication with students using Facebook or similar social networking sites. This includes computers both on school property and off, ensuring that whenever staff members are acting on behalf of the district, they keep their online usage professional and appropriate.

The policy was adopted in addition to, and not as a substitute for, the district's Internet Acceptable Use Policy.

The concussion policy is in accordance with Mass. General Laws, which school committee chair Helene Lieb said the Cohasset school district is in compliance with.

"The law is in effect, and we are definitely following it," Lieb said during Wednesday's school committee meeting.

Vice chair Jeanne Astino and member Paul Schubert both suggested that the committee vote to approve the current policy, pending any amendments from a final comparison to the state law.

"Results Start When You Do"

By Elizabeth Johnson

If you could snap your fingers and have one instant wish entering 2012, would it be to lose 10 lbs going into the New Year?

Often times, women say that if they could just feel more confident about their appearance and their weight, other things would seem easier to manage. For example: it wouldn't seem like such a chore to find a dress for the neighbor's New Year's party, planning a family cruise in February and all the bathing suits that go with it wouldn't be as horrifying, and looking through photos of the last year wouldn't dredge up so many negative feelings about weight.

If losing 10 lbs is on your wish-list this year, the least you can do is treat yourself the way you take care of everyone else.

Around the holidays, if you carefully consider what would bring a smile to a family member's face and choose a gift accordingly, why wouldn't you do the same for yourself? If you want to stand in front of the mirror in a new outfit in early 2012, pleased with how you feel, how you look, and how others compliment you, then it's time to move from contemplation to action!

Get In Shape For Women is a comprehensive program that includes four major components: weight training, cardio, supportive nutrition and accountability.

"One of our sayings is 'Results Start When You Do,' " shares President and CEO Brian Cook. "We know that our program gets results. Take a look at the hundreds of testimonials on our website. All it takes is for a woman to decide that she really wants to make a change and call our studio."

"My experience at Get In Shape For Women has been wonderful! After having three children I was battling excess pounds and decreased core strength. I began working out three times a week and through the incredible physical training I received was able to drop 10 lbs. and increase my overall endurance and muscle tone. I feel terrific and now have tons more energy to live life to its fullest. I can't say enough wonderful things about this program. It has truly changed by life."

AROUND TOWN

Tyler J. Baker makes his debut

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone this week? I cannot believe it but we have a little more than a week to finish up all our shopping and prep for Christmas. I hope that everyone is remaining calm and remembering the true meaning of the holidays, with all the hype and excitement, I know that I often forget to remember what it is all about. It is exciting though, that is for sure.

Oh boy!

We have a new little man in town and oh my gosh, what a handsome little guy! Tom Baker and Melissa Hill received an early holiday gift with the arrival of their first child, Tyler John Baker, on November 26th. Proud grandparents are Ron and Geri Hill of Saint Louis, Mo., and Bob and Belle Ann Baker of San Diego, Calif. Congratulations to all as you enjoy your little bundle of joy.

An angel

Congratulations to Audrey Boyle, who is performing the Boston Ballet's 2011 production of The Nutcracker at Boston Opera House running through December 31st as the role of an Angel in Cast A. Audrey has been a student at Boston Ballet School for 6 years. This is her second year performing in the production. Such a fun and special time for you Audrey!

Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has some nice programs and events coming up. The first, a "Cover Letter and Letter Writing Workshop" is being held on Thursday, Jan. 5, from 6:30-8:30pm. Free. This is sponsored by a grant from the Social Service League of Cohasset and you may sign up by calling the library at 781-383-1348.

Also coming up is The South Shore Art Center watercolor art exhibit by Anne Belson from January 1 through February 29 and a meet the artist at a reception on Friday, January 6 from 5-6:30pm at the library.

See a free movie on Friday, January 6 at 11 am. This month's feature is "A Beautiful Mind" starring Russell Crowe. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Lastly, authors Brunonia Barry, Randy Susan Meyers, and Ilie Ruby will talk about their books at a Fiction Forum on Sunday, January 8, at 4 pm. Wine and cheese reception and book signing to follow.

Free. All are welcome and there is limited seating. Call the library to reserve your free ticket at 781-383-1348.

CEF appeal

There's still time to invest in excellence in education and donate to the Cohasset Education Foundation 2011 Annual Appeal. Currently the CEF has over $120,000 in grant requests from Cohasset teachers and Administrators and we need your support to turn these requests into opportunities for all children in the Cohasset Public Schools. Fill out your donation envelope or visit www.cohasseteducation.org to donate today. Thank you!

Food drive

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food Pantry on Sat, December 17th at the Stop & Shop from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The staff at the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products prior to the Christmas and New Year Holidays. Committee volunteers will be at the Stop & Shop to pass out lists of needed items and to collect food donations. The Food Pantry also welcomes and greatly appreciates donations of cash or store gift certificates. The need is still there despite improvements in some sectors of the economy, according to Food Pantry staff. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance.

Pizza bash

Calling all high school students, you are invited to CSCR's Student Staff Pizza Bash on Wednesday, Dec. 28th from 11 to 1 p.m. at the Center for Student Coastal Research, 40 Parker Ave. Stop by for a slice and to learn about the different opportunities available for high schoolers at this fun, student-run non-profit. You don't need to love science to enjoy CSCR. CSCR is also looking for students interested in photography, finance, website development or PR.

As always, students can contribute as much or as little time as they like ... but CSCR is hoping to get as many students involved as possible in 2012!! For more information please contact Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com. Happy Holidays!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send all your news to me next week no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Marine is always a hero

Catches thief after Cohasset visit

Before Marine Sgt. Matthew LaRoche, pictured here with Dr. Michael Conlon, DC, helped save a family's Christmas in Boston, he was helping out at Conlon Chiropractic to collect toys for Toys for Tots during the Cohasset Holiday Stroll on Saturday, Dec. 10th.

Conlon Chiropractic, 8 Brewster Road, is serving as a collection point for the annual Toys for Tots drive through Dec. 20. For more information, call 781-383-1616 or visit: www.conlonchiropractic.com.

Sgt. LaRoche left Cohasset and headed to Boston where he happened upon a Newton family whose SUV full of Christmas gifts had been rifled through by a burglar. They had been shopping at Faneuil Hall Marketplace.

The alleged thief was making a fast exit when LaRoche, who was loading Toys for Tots collected at the Vault restaurant, heard a call for help and saw the alleged thief running toward him. LaRoche, 22, ran toward the man, caught up with him and held him until police arrived.

According to published reports, LaRoche, who returned from Afghanistan in May and is with the 1st Battalion, 25th Marine Regiment, is the coordinator for the Greater Boston Toys for Tots campaign.

Cohasset residents help Pan-Mass Challenge

The check was presented to Dana-Farber President Edward J. Benz, Jr., MD, at a Fenway Park celebration, which was attended by more than 600 PMC cyclists and volunteers.

Eleven Cohasset residents raised just under $60,000 of the $35 million donated by the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC) to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. They were among 5,169 cyclists who rode up to 190 miles across Massachusetts to raise money for cancer research and treatment. The 2011 fundraising total is $2 million, or 5.7 percent, more than the PMC gave in 2010 and brings its 32-year Jimmy Fund contribution to $338 million.

The PMC is the most successful athletic fundraising event in the nation; it raises and contributes more money to charity than any other. In August, cyclists from eight countries and 37 states rode one of 11 routes that ranged from 25 to 190 miles. Riders included seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, Massachusetts Senators John Kerry and Scott Brown, 350 cancer survivors, and avid cyclists and weekend warriors alike. Many rode in support of loved ones being treated for cancer or in memory of those who have been lost to the disease.

The contribution represents 100 percent of every rider-raised dollar, a charity pass-through rate that is nearly unparalleled within the athletic fundraising event industry. Approximately 3,100 volunteers and 200 companies supplying almost $5 million in products and services provided riders with food, mechanical and medical assistance, luggage transport and support of all kinds.

The 2011 PMC exceeded its own fundraising goal of $34 million by $1 million. "PMC riders are committed to the cause and to this event," said Billy Starr, PMC founder and executive director. "Their dedication to raising money for cancer research is unparalleled in the fundraising industry."

The check was presented to Dana-Farber President Edward J. Benz, Jr., MD, at a Fenway Park celebration, which was attended by more than 600 PMC cyclists and volunteers. "PMC money is seed money that enables our scientists to conduct the earliest forms of research," Benz said. "The money they raise is critical to our work. It enables us to invest in major new patient care and research initiatives that could otherwise go unfunded."

Founded in 1980 when 36 cyclists rode across Massachusetts and raised $10,200 for the Jimmy Fund, the PMC is known today as the "gold standard" of athletic fundraising events due to the unprecedented sums it raises and its consistently efficient charity pass-through rate. One of the very first athletic fundraising events in the nation, the PMC was a pioneer in the way it focused on raising money for charity.

The 33rd annual PMC is set for Aug. 4 and 5, 2012. Registration opens online on Jan. 10 for PMC alumni and Jan. 17 for newcomers. For more information about the PMC, which is presented by the Boston Red Sox Foundation and New Balance, visit www.pmc.org.

GIMME SHELTER

Lexi is very people friendly

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find shelter for Lexi, a white, with black, short hair, four-year-old feline. She once had a loving home, but unfortunately, the family was forced to give her up. Lexi misses having her own home and is not pleased with having to share a room with several other cats. She would like to be adopted as on "only," or we're pretty sure she could get along with a non-aggressive cat. She's very people friendly, loves attention and rewards you with purring and head-rubs. Lexi would like to be part of a feline-friendly family, and would so happy to be able to cuddle up with you and yours. HSAR hopes to find Lexi a home for the holidays. If interested please call Polly at 781-925-0073 or Judy at 781-534-4902.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

CPA celebrates milestone

Cohasset committee embarks on new era

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

If land, housing and historic properties could talk then they might very well say "Happy Birthday, Community Preservation Act!"

The CPA was signed into law 10 years ago by then Governor Paul Cellucci and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing. The funds come from two sources: a local property tax surcharge and a yearly distribution from the statewide CPA Trust Fund whose monies come from a surcharge on real estate transactions at the Registry of Deeds.

For Cohasset, the CPA birthday was "celebrated" with a presentation Monday by Stuart Saginor, executive director of the Community Preservation Coalition, an alliance of seven other nonprofit open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation organizations working with municipalities to help them understand, adopt, and implement the Massachusetts Community Preservation Act (CPA).

Saginor, whose presentation at Town Hall included members of the Cohasset CPC, interested citizens, and a handful of Norwell and Marshfield officials, said the Massachusetts CPA has been a success story. Only two towns that adopted the CPA have tried to revoke it locally and those efforts failed. Two towns have reduced their surcharge and four have raised it. When adopting the CPA, Cohasset voters approved a real estate surcharge of 1.5 percent.

Cohasset CPC Chairman Russell Bonetti of Parker Avenue said he found Saginor's presentation very informative.

"It cleared up quite a few questions about the machinations of the Act," Bonetti said. "The coalition is an asset I plan on utilizing a lot as different projects come before us."

Much of Saginor's presentation was a tutorial on what projects or purchases can qualify for preservation funding. He spent some time on how historical projects qualify for funding and why recreational projects have been limited.

He said there is legislation in the works that, if approved, would allow more flexibility for improvements to recreation areas that were not acquired or created with Community Preservation Funds. Currently for a recreation improvement project to qualify — such as rehabilitating a soccer field — the land had to have been acquired or created with CPA funds.

Saginor explained that recreational projects have been the smallest in number and dollar volume when compared to other CPA allowed uses: open space acquisitions, appropriations to restore and preserve historic resources and creating affordable housing.

There is also legislation pending that would increase the surcharge on registry of deed filings that would boost the trust fund that provides a level of match to local Community Preservation Fund accounts.

During the first six years of the CPA, towns received a 100 percent match - that percentage has dropped to 27 percent — due to the fact that more towns are participating in the program and the economic times have resulted in fewer real estate transactions at the Registry.

However, Saginor stressed the CPA is still a good deal. "Where else can you get a 27 percent return on your investment in one year?"

Bonetti, who is the new CPC chairman and is relatively new to the CPC itself, said the Cohasset CPC would utilize the Coalition a lot as different projects come before them.

"I would like to see a more pro-active committee, and try to seek out projects we might get involved in." Bonetti said. "Susan Hoadley, who is the newest member, is an architect who understands what is historically correct, and will be a great help. Some of the previous projects that were 'historic' were, in my opinion a tad dubious. Also in some cases materials that were used were not correct for the period of the building.

"I would like also to require estimates on all projects," Bonetti said "Currently projects under $25,000 are not required to provide estimates. I think the overall impact of a project to the community at large needs to factor more into the process."

CPA funds

CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

DREDGING NEEDED

Harbor grant sought

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons, along with Christine Player of CLE Engineering, appeared before the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday, Dec. 6 to discuss applying for a grant for the Cohasset Harbor improvement project that includes dredging.

This is a $4.1 million project, according to Town Manager Mike Coughlin. The town is seeking a state grant to absorb 75 percent of the cost.

Coughlin presented a draft of a letter he wrote to the Seaport Advisory Council in Fairhaven, Mass., asking for $250,000 upfront to fund the engineering, permitting and dredge testing that would be required to expedite the project. The Seaport Advisory Council is a state government advisory group consisting of 15 members, including cabinet secretaries, agency heads, mayors from coastal communities and regional and waterway user representatives. They exist to develop commercial maritime resources and are funded through the Environment and Energy Bond Bill that was signed into law in 2008.

Coughlin told the selectmen that it is important to fix the issues in Cohasset Harbor, which was last dredged nine years ago.

The proposed project also involves repairing the seawall at Lawrence Wharf/Town Landing, and repairs at the Government Island Dock, and the Parker Avenue boat ramp.

Coughlin told the board that while the project is "an expensive endeavor," the Seaport grant should give the town "enough to start."

The town manager hopes to convince the Seaport Council that Cohasset "has a compelling case."

Since the town is "not obligated to spend anything," Selectman Paul Carlson pointed out, the board voted to approve Coughlin's letter to Seaport. The letter was then sent on Wednesday, Dec. 14.

The CEF presented $15,661.27 to fund the following grants:

- $3,000 for the Exploration of Rocketry, submitted by Jeffrey Knight
- $4,661.27 for AlcoholEdu, submitted by Ron Ford
- $8,000 for Engendering a Community of Readers and Writers through Visiting Authors, submitted by Mike Lewis

The PSO approved $7,030.00 for Osgood School teacher grants. The list of programs that these monies will help fund is extensive, but highlights include:

- $1,374 for document cameras
- $2,210 for a speech listening center
- $280 for playground sports equipment
- $88 for a science center butterfly pavilion

Osgood School Principal Sharon Bellao wrote in an email to school business manager Dave DeGennaro, "When I announced that all the grants were approved at our last faculty meeting, the Osgood staff broke out into cheers and expressed their gratefulness to our wonderful parent community who continuously show their support in so many ways."

Social Service League: Making the senior center dream a reality

When Special Town Meeting voters approved a warrant article allowing funds for a needs assessment for the proposed senior center, it was one of many steps toward the long-term project's completion. One group helping to make the vision a reality: the Social Service League.

The League began working with the Cohasset Elder Affairs this past summer, and pledged $1 million toward the project. They have also agreed to take over the fundraising efforts to get the center built.

But some have been wondering why, exactly, the League decided to get involved, when the organization seems to focus on charity work, not necessarily senior centers.

The Cohasset Mariner recently met with Social Service League's President and Vice-President, Marita Carpenter and Sandra Halverson, along with the group's spokesperson Rick Stockwood, at the Social Service League office to discuss the group's role in the new senior center, and why they decided to "get some skin in the game."

By way of background, the Social Service League was founded in 1912 and incorporated in Cohasset in 1946. The non-profit's objective is to help with "welfare of the townspeople in relieving poverty, promoting thrift, and helping those who are trying to help themselves." Since the League's founding, the group has evolved and become more involved in elder affairs. Currently, the League administers and delivers Meals on Wheels, provides holiday meals for shut-ins, and contributes "Christmas Angel" gift baskets to the elderly.

The senior center project is the League's latest endeavor to help Cohasset's aging population.

Cohasset Mariner (CM): So, why the Social Service League?

Rick Stockword (RS): It's a natural question.

Marita Carpenter (MC): And we're a natural fit.

RS: The Social Service League as a board has re-focused and re-energized around the senior center and the elderly. We're not coming out of left field; this is just an extension, a re-commitment to the seniors of Cohasset. This project is our priority, number one goal heading into the New Year.

MC: Next year we're celebrating our 100th year in business. We've had a history of service to the elderly.

CM: When did the League decide to get involved in the senior center project?

MC: The Social Service League offered to take over in the summertime.

RS: The League put in $1 million to get some skin in the game. They feel it's a logical partner. The town needs a partner to get this done; why look further when [the League] donated $1 million? The League is now spearheading the fundraising to make sure the project comes in under-budget and on-time.

Sandra Halverson (SH): The League first got involved four years ago. The Director of Elder Affairs at the time, Linda Elworthy, wanted to do more for the elderly. All she wanted at the time was a liaison [from the Social Service League] to work with the Elder Affairs.

MC: We've developed a stronger relationship with Elder Affairs; we saw the need.

CM: And when should we expect to see the project completed?

RS: The goal is to get key pieces in place. We hope to build a senior center in 2012. Cohasset has a real chance to get ahead of the curve on this one, to be prepared for the future rather than responsive to it. It's a fantastic place to be in.

CM: What else is the League doing to help oversee the project?

RS: We're creating a grassroots education effort to get the word out. We've sent out brochures...

MC: We're taking people to visit other centers, such as Duxbury and Franklin. We're visiting different boards in town, such as the Library Trust, the Cohasset Educational Foundation, the Baseball Association, Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce. We're also bringing in directors from other towns with new senior centers for panel discussions.

RS: It's a remarkable idea... Right now we're trying to figure out the right time of day and a forum [for the discussions].

CM: Why is the notion of a new senior center so important to Cohasset?

MC: Everybody seems to agree we need a new senior center; it's just a question of how big. You see the need when you walk into the [current] building at 3 North Main.

CM: I've noticed that the senior center and Elder Affairs often have to hold events at other locations, such as church halls.

MC: They have to outsource a lot.

RS: It's helpful understanding how big a need it is, and that need exists today. With seniors and baby boomers retiring, 25 percent of [Cohasset's] population is 60-plus. And 3 North Main only services a handful of the Elder Affairs programs. The café held at Lightkeepers, for example, could be part of the new senior center. All you have to do is look at the turnout for that — those are the real numbers that gives the community a sense of how many people are being served.

SH: Moving from building to building, they lose continuity and don't get to know each other as a result.

RS: Seniors today are as busy as other demographics; others are not as mobile. As opposed to being asked to be in five to six places a day, they could spend time in one building — it's a huge shift in thinking.

MC: This will be a multigenerational facility, serving all ages.

RS: The definition of a senior center is not what it has been; it's not a nursing home or adult daycare.

MC: They're full of life, learning and socialization, which is so important.

CM: What's the next step for the project?

MC: Getting the land conveyance done — that's a big step. We're hoping to wrap that up by the end of the year (see sidebar). It would be a nice Christmas present. Then we will take a leap and say, "If you build it, they will come."

SEALING THE DEAL:

Selectmen, Coughlin sign Memorandum of Understanding

During what Town Manager Mike Coughlin is calling "an historic night for Cohasset," the Board of Selectmen voted to approve and sign the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) and Land Transfer Authorization for the senior center project.

The MOU is not a binding contract, but explains the public-private partnership between the Town and Social Service League (SSL) and identifies the intent of the project: to build a senior center on land owned by the town and Cohasset Swim Trust, handing that land over to the SSL to get the center built. Once the project is completed, the SSL will give the building back to the town. The MOU solidifies that both groups — the town and the SSL — agree that the project is viable and that they are committed to seeing it through to completion, allowing the SSL to continue their fundraising efforts. The land transfer is a loose agreement, pending further legal documents that the selectmen will have to sign in the future.

"By executing the Memorandum of Understanding and by voting to authorize the transfer of land, the town is truly giving a Christmas present to the elderly of Cohasset," Coughlin wrote in a letter to the selectmen. "It also signals that we enter the New Year with a strong public partnership to make this center a reality."

"It lays a framework for the activity to go on," said selectman chair Ted Carr.

Members of both the SSL and the Cohasset Elder Affairs were present for the MOU's signing, including Director of Elder Affairs Coral Grande, Chairman of Cohasset Elder Affairs' Board of Directors John Campbell, and SSL President Marita Carpenter. Coughlin had the parties involved sign a large cardboard version of the document and pose for a photograph.

Grande thanked the selectmen for their support.

"You have no idea how much it means to have the support of the board of selectmen for everybody who's work so hard on this."

Grande said. "It is so heartening and so important that you recognize what the seniors in Cohasset deserve to have. What we envisioned three years ago may not be what we" end up building, "but it's going to be better with input from the town; it will be even better than what we envisioned in the first place."

OUR VIEW

Happy Birthday, CPA

The Community Preservation Act is 10 years old, as is Cohasset's involvement.

Smartly, in our view, Cohasset adopted the CPA after it became law and embarked on a partnership that included a local real estate tax surcharge of 1.5 percent and some level of state match that is derived from a surcharge on real estate filings at the Registry of Deeds.

For the first six years of the CPA, Cohasset and other participating municipalities got a 100 percent match! What a deal! But as Stuart Saginor of the Community Preservation Coalition pointed out at a meeting in Cohasset this week – even at the current 27 percent match, it is still worthwhile.

"Where can you get 27 percent return on your investment in one year?" he asked.

The presentation by Saginor was a great way to kick off a new era for the Community Preservation Committee, which is now under the chairmanship of Russell Bonetti of Parker Avenue. Those who know Bonetti are well aware that he is not afraid to speak up, ask questions and go forward.

For years the Cohasset CPC was led by another vocal preservation advocate, Stuart Ivimey, who now is chairman of the planning board.

Cohasset is fortunate to have had Ivimey, a lawyer, lead Cohasset through the early years of the CPA. We believe that Bonetti, who has taken over the reins, is the right person at the right time to head into this new CPA era.

The CPA era has changed for most participating towns because there have been so many CPA projects accomplished across the state and here at home.

The challenge going forward is to dig deeper and find some of those "sleepers" that might qualify and enhance our quality of life whether historical-, open space- or affordable housing-related.

It is always important to note that all CPC project proposals must go before Town Meeting voters for approval.

Checks and balances – that is what makes our democracy work – and in this case, that democratic process along with the revenue sharing piece, has helped the CPA become such a success story.

AdCom chair has issue with point in commentary

While the commentary from Mr. Coughlin, published in the Dec. 9, Mariner, is accurate as to what he said at the Dec. 6 BOS meeting; one point, however, was challenged later in that meeting that needs clarification.

His statement, regarding STM Article One, that a portion of the $75,000 transfer from the healthcare budget would, "fund a new study of water and sewer rates," is inaccurate. He was reminded, at the BOS meeting, that the $75,000 had been specifically supported and voted on to fund three defined projects: continue the work of the financial consultants, conduct an audit of the sewer capital construction project and fund consultants to continue the implementation of the Softwrite System. A rate review was never discussed or considered in any presentation leading to the positive board support for this portion of Article One and the presentations preceding the favorable vote at Town Meeting. It may even be the case that, if needed, the studies should be funded by the Enterprise Funds not General Funds.

We have discussed this at some length and since the article's title was to fund, "Director of Finance and Personnel Services", as noted in the minutes from Special Town Meeting, Mike's position, per our e-mail conversation is, "As you are well aware, whether an appropriation gives certain flexibility so long as the use conforms with the subject category. Approving money for personnel services and then categorizing the money for professional services is allowable".

Call me old fashioned, but I still prefer to uphold the integrity of the use of funds voted by the assembled citizens at Special Town meeting as presented, rather than have them diverted to an alternate use that was never contemplated in the article voted.

The letter of the law may be technically correct but watch out for that slippery slope. - Peter Pescatore

Support voiced for new Senior Center

Thanks to Marita Carpenter of the Social Service League, I enjoyed a visit to Duxbury's Senior Service Center a few days ago, along with a few others from Cohasset.

What a pleasant, sunlit and popular place with so many young-at-heart people enjoying numerous hobbies, entertainments and social activities. Like Cohasset, it is staffed by obviously dedicated people who enjoy what they are doing, but it has the huge advantage of copious space designed for its purpose. Best of all, according to a friend in Duxbury, people tend to look forward to using it as one of the great benefits earned with retirement.

Cohasset has many challenges to achieving a similar advantage for its citizens, and many other issues competing for attention. However, a large percentage of our citizens expect (or hope) to remain here on retirement, and would benefit from a facility that can significantly affect their enjoyment of life. Sure, there are many other organizations and activities in Cohasset, but even their totality leaves a void that calls for a well-designed facility to serve all of us who eventually will be seniors (and those of us who eventually will admit to being seniors). - R. Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

WILLCUTT CORNER

Space scrunch limits lunches

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

In spite of the difficulty of functioning with such inadequate space, healthy, delicious meals are provided three times a week.

Out of a diminutive kitchen, shared by Cohasset Elder Affairs and the South Shore Community Center at Three North Main Street, a rotating group of volunteer "chefs" prepare congregate meals for Cohasset seniors. Congregate meals are a balanced meal served in a specific location such as a senior center. By hosting these meals, Cohasset Elder Affairs provides the town's seniors with an opportunity to enjoy a delicious meal with others from around town. Many older people, especially those living alone, often skip meals or do not cook for themselves. Congregate meals ensure nutritious intake as well as socialization, two important criteria in keeping seniors healthy and engaged in their community.

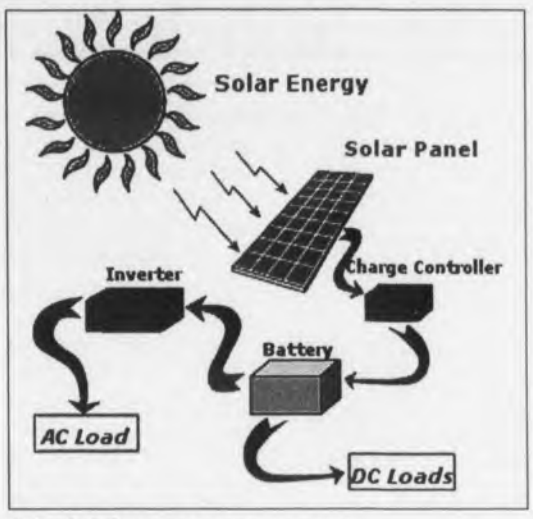
Bernadette Coughlin, the new Volunteer Chef Coordinator for Cohasset Elder Affairs, is thrilled to be a part of the meal program. "Everyone is so helpful and nice," she says. "Our volunteer chefs take pride in the food they create, and the seniors are so gracious. I only wish we could provide the service five days a week. That's something to strive toward."

Space and schedule constraints limit the Cohasset Elder Affairs program to Tuesday, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Since there is virtually no storage area for pantry or perishable items in the antique building currently housing the center, each chef designs a menu, then shops for grocery items, which he or she delivers to the center the day they are scheduled to cook. Early in the morning, the chef of the day can be found chopping vegetables or toasting breadcrumbs for seniors, who regularly compliment the results. These dedicated volunteers produce delicious lunches; demonstrating their desire to please their clientele via a diverse range of recipes. Recent meals, all of which include vegetables or salad, and dessert, included chicken sofrito, ham and potato casserole, shepherd's pie, bread pudding and pumpkin ice cream. Lunch attendees scrape their plates clean.

Since the kitchen at Three North Main Street is also used to organize meals for distribution to Cohasset's homebound seniors via the Meals on Wheels Program, kitchen space around lunch hour is at a strict premium. Chefs, volunteer wait staff, Meals on Wheels coordinators and drivers all jockey to ensure they serve the Cohasset senior community, out of a kitchen smaller than the size of a home office.

In spite of the difficulty of functioning with such inadequate space, healthy, delicious meals are provided three times a week, demonstrating one more way in which our vibrant senior center provides critical support to our town's elder citizens.

Cohasset Elder Affairs Congregate Meal Program: T, W, TH, 12:00 Noon. Three North Main Street. Suggested donation $2.50. For van transportation call 781-383-9112.



Willcutt Corner is a regular column in the Mariner. At the request of Mary Hooper, whose trust is the primary benefactor to Cohasset's proposed Senior Center, the new building will be called "Willcutt Commons," after Hooper's father, Levi Lincoln Willcutt.

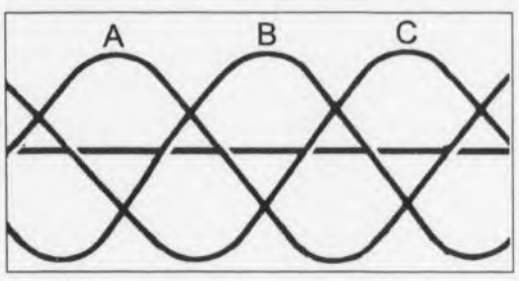
Shedding light on solar power

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN



Alternative Energy Committee — On this past Monday, we had the opportunity to attend the meeting of the Alternative Energy Committee. They are one of the main proponents of the two solar energy projects that were approved at the recent Special Town Meeting. In last week's Mariner we briefly discussed the technology involved in generating useful electrical power from solar energy. As we mentioned, the direct-current (D-C) battery and charge controller in this generic diagram may or may not be required. If there are D-C uses, such as electrical vehicle charging, the direct current output can be very useful. In addition, the battery has the distinct capability to store electrical energy, so that in some applications the battery can be charged when the sun shines and can provide power when the sun doesn't shine.

Solar to A.C. power. COURTESY PHOTOS

Single phase voltage.

Three phase voltage.

We'd like to talk about some of the finer details a little more. But, we also want to make sure that your eyes don't glaze over with arcane minutia. But, continuing our policy of trying to explain the complex in simple terms, here we go. Let's step back a bit and talk about the power that is consumed in our homes as well as the way that electric utilities distribute large amounts of power. Most homes and smaller users of electric power use what is known as "single phase power." Large commercial users and the high-powered distribution lines utilize "three phase power."

The voltage that we use in our homes is technically called "120 volts single phase." The word "phase" implies that its value changes cyclically. For example, with the phases of the moon, the moon goes from a tiny, tiny sliver to a full moon and back to that little sliver. The moon does this over and over again.

The term phase has an analogous meaning when it comes to voltage. In actuality, the voltage has a pattern of ups and downs that repeats over and over. If you look at the accompanying "single phase voltage" sketch you get the idea. The voltage going into your home varies just like the sketch. It constantly changes from a positive voltage to a negative voltage over and over again. The sketch shows what this voltage looks like, if you had the proper instrument to see it.

The variation, from plus to minus, takes place 60 times each second, which is why you may have heard it called 60 cycle voltage. With single phase power that you have in your home, all of the wires coming to your home have voltage that rises and falls in unison. That is, there is only one repeating pattern on each of the wires. That's why the term "single phase" is used.

Single phase power, for technical reasons, is not as advantageous for larger industrial power users, or for high power transmission lines. These use three phase voltage. Three phase power usually has at least three wires and sometimes four. If you could look at the voltage on each wire it would look just like the sine wave, above. But, if you could somehow superimpose each of the three voltages so you could see them at the same time. They do not rise and fall in unison, but one behind the other, and so on. In the diagram of three phase voltage, each of the phases is marked A, B, and C for reference.

Instead, one voltage rises, then the second and finally the third. So, how does this translate back into our solar project? Well, you can see that single phase and three phase power, although they are similar, are really quite different. The electronics that we talked about last week, must be able to convert the solar power generated D-C to the correct power type. If power is to be transmitted back to the utility it usually will need to be converted into three phase power. If it is to be consumed by a single phase building, then it must be converted to single phase. Sometimes we will need to create both single phase and three phase power so it can be used by a single phase building or sent to the utility over a three phase connection. As you can see, it's really not as simple as it may appear on the surface. The beautiful thing is that today there are "off the shelf" electronic devices that can generate either single phase or three phase voltage as required. These electronic packages of wizardry are called "inverters." They may be complicated on the inside, but not difficult to utilize.

The inverters are the backbone of a commercial solar system, in addition to the solar panels themselves. There are also controls that are necessary to route to where it is needed and control the power generation. So, that's sort of a look "under the hood" of a solar system with a bit more detail.

Holiday safety — Fire Chief Bob Silvia asked us to remind all that this is season for us to be very vigilant with the use of decorations. It is very important to keep safety in mind. In particular, watch candles and open flames. Keep them away from flammable materials. Outside, keep an eye on icy areas, both on the roads and sidewalks as well as around your property. But, above all, have a perfectly safe and happy holiday season.

As a reminder, like in past years Making Tracks will be less visible during the winter season. And, from Town Hall, have a delightful holiday season.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Seaweed benefits our fields

Placing seaweed on a school farm garden at this time of year will slowly decompose on the beds, as well as hold any soil that could be eroded come winter wind.

JON BELBER

This lovely warm, mild weather makes one think that late autumn crops will grow forever. Lettuce in a cold frame or hoop house thrives on these above freezing days. Kale, parsnips, celeriac, Jerusalem sun chokes and leeks are just a few other vegetables still rich in production.

But this time of year is really meant for tucking the garden to bed and letting the fields go to sleep. Mulching is a popular activity at this time of year to make the yard tidy, especially as the viewing hours are so short with little daylight. There are many local, renewable strategies for protecting your gardens, growing fields and helping the community as well.

At home, many gardeners are raking leaves (or having them noisily blown) into large piles and often carted away. Some crafty home gardeners may make their own leaf mulch or compost pile in a corner of the yard. Leaves raked on top of a growing bed may even help protect some perennials in the coming seasons. But here on the South Shore, we are quite fortunate to have some available resources that can really enrich the garden and growing space.

Sustainability is a bit of a buzzword that is often lumped together with organic. The organic farm fields and compost piles at Holly Hill Farm benefit from seaweed, as well as the slowly decomposing calcium from the accompanying shells. Sustainability to me is less expensive, more practical and just as healthy for the soil. I would rather spread seaweed than rely on shipped-in bags of mulch and out of town fertilizers. Low tides at Scituate's Peggotty Beach and many cove beaches from Hull to Duxbury often reveal rows of seaweed and kelp, which are full of nitrogen.

Placing seaweed on a school farm garden at this time of year will slowly decompose on the beds, as well as hold any soil that could be eroded come winter wind. Think of the soil as food for the tomatoes, pumpkins, perennials and herbs. These crops have just spent over eight months feeding on that soil. I would like to sustain that soil and prepare it for next spring and for the harsh winter weather that is (hopefully) due soon.

To that end, seaweed is a terrific enrichment that goes a long way to restoring the depleted soil. The seaweed, if mixed in to a growing bed will restore energy and fertility. Many Scituate natives and seasoned growers are keenly aware of this practice, as I have bumped into them on the beach. And though it is back breaking, it is good exercise and great to remember how fortunate we are to live by the coast.

I am not sure what would happen if each resident who tends a garden was to gather some buckets of wet, green kelp. Would all of this sustainable practice of gathering seaweed eventually deplete the supply of seaweed? In moderation, I hope, we can proceed. I do like to leave the environment and the land, of which we ask so much for food, fruit and flower, in better shape than when I found it. Because chances are this process will begin again come spring, after the hard work of late autumn and the deserved rest in winter.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming.

FOR THE RECORD

Snail mail may live up to its name

If my own postal preferences are any indication, it would seem to make sense that the United States Postal Service is taking drastic measures to cut billions of dollars from its budget in an attempt to survive in this growing electronic/digital world.

GREGORY MATHIS

If you tend to procrastinate like me, you're probably just getting around to sending out your Christmas cards — excuse me, holiday cards, or whatever the politically correct description is.

It's one of the few times this year I can remember needing stamps and planning a trip to the nearby post office.

If my own postal preferences are any indication, it would seem to make sense that the United States Postal Service is taking drastic measures to cut billions of dollars from its budget in an attempt to survive in this growing electronic/digital world.

A plan to close more than 250 mail processing centers around the country, including seven in Massachusetts, was unveiled last week by the USPS. Among the centers closing are Brockton and Wareham, both of which handle a lot of the local mail.

As someone who pays 95 percent of my bills online, I personally have little need for the post office. There are those relatively few occasions I still find myself at the post office. My parents live in South Carolina and are of the age where they would prefer receiving birthday cards and cards commemorating special occasions the old-fashioned way. So I pick out a nice card that usually requires extra postage and try to mail it three to four days in advance to get from the South Shore to South Carolina. Sometimes it makes it before the birthday or holiday, and sometimes it doesn't. Extra postage doesn't seem to guarantee much, and when the processing facilities close in the spring, there will be even less of a guarantee.

For those who still mail their credit card bills, home mortgages and other payments, that could create even more of an issue with late fees and such. At least I can explain to my mom the reason the birthday card is late.

From a professional standpoint, the idea of mail delivery of the newspaper being delayed is unsettling. The majority of our papers are still delivered through the post office, although we do have a few free newspapers available on newsstands and several that are distributed by a home delivery system.

The thought of the newspaper being delivered a day, two days or three days late can have huge consequences. Readers count on us to arrive at a certain time on a certain day each week, and advertisers are looking for their ads to be read at certain times of the week, as well. The impact may be even greater for those who subscribe to their hometown newspaper but live outside the area.

Granted, there is a very strong online component to our media company with Wicked Local to ensure timely delivery of information, but the future of our business relies heavily on our newspapers and websites both being successful.

The impending layoffs and mail center closings will no doubt slow postal delivery, and one has to wonder if those still using the system on a regular basis will be asked to pay even more for diminished service.

Only time will tell. In the meantime, I still have a stack of Christmas cards that need to be mailed.

Second in command

Police and fire departments have promotions

Cohasset now has two second-in-command chiefs in the police and fire department. Lieutenant William Quigley of the Cohasset Police was recently promoted to Deputy Chief by Chief of Police Mark DeLuca. Lieutenant/Paramedic John Dockray was promoted to Assistant Fire Chief by Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Both gentlemen were given a warm reception during their official appointments at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting. Town Manager Mike Coughlin called the event "an historic night for the town of Cohasset."

Coughlin, who served in the military as a JAG lawyer, presented both Quigley and Dockray with captain's bars from his military uniform. Quigley was pinned by his nephew Brendan Skerry, an MBTA Transit Police Officer.

Coughlin called Quigley's promotion "the essence of the American dream."

Quigley was emotional during his appointment as the crowd stood to applaud him. He addressed the room with tears in his eyes.

"I am taken aback," said Quigley. "I am humbled and thank you."

Dockray was pinned by his wife, Heather, and supported by his two sons, Tom and Andrew. The newly sworn-in assistant fire chief was promoted by Silvia, who in addition to being his boss is also Dockray's former football coach from Cohasset High.

Silvia, said Coughlin, "had this man as a lineman on the football team and molded him as a player; then, in the Cohasset fire department, molded him as a firefighter and a medic."

Coughlin added that he assumed Dockray's two boys would also be playing football.

Both Quigley and Dockray posed for photos with the chiefs, Coughlin and the selectmen. Both gentlemen were also recently commended for working together, along with other members of the public safety team, to save a life when a cyclist collapsed from cardiac arrest on Nov. 1.

"We all know it takes a team," said Coughlin. Appointing these two new positions, said the town manager, would "give both departments the cutting edge they need."

As both chiefs DeLuca and Silvia pointed out during previous selectmen meetings, adding these two salaried positions will save their respective departments money by cutting back on overtime.

The officer stopped both trucks. The driver of the dump truck, a 29-year-Hull man, said he had just purchased the truck in Rehoboth and was on his way home. However, he was charged with operating an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle that had to be towed by a heavy duty tow truck, police said. The driver of the Isuzu, a 28-year-old Plymouth man, was cited for defective equipment (broken windshield) and following too closely on a state highway. The person who owns the dump truck, a 46-year-old Swansea man, is facing charges of allowing a vehicle with suspended registration and no insurance on the road. Police said he technically still owned the dump truck, as there was no bill of sale.

Courtesy booking

Cohasset police booked at 47-year-old Cohasset man, who allegedly violated a restraining order in Pembroke, last week. Officers went to his house but he was not there. Later he turned himself in, police said, and was charged with violating the restraining orde.. He allegedly phoned the person who had the 209A order out against him.

Protective custody

Police responded to a call at 10:57 p.m. on Thursday (Dec. 8) about a couple arguing in the parking lot at the Post Office off Ripley Road. Police responded and fund a 27-year-old woman trying to get her intoxicated boyfriend into their car without success. Police placed the boyfriend, a 26-year-old Hull man, in protective custody due to his level of intoxication.

Dog nicked

Police received two calls about a dog that was hit by a train at around 6 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 9) at the Pond/Spring street railroad crossing. The dog was "nicked" by the train but was not seriously injured. The owner, who lives on Spring Street, took the animal to the veterinarian, police said.

Jewelry stolen

Police responded to a Jerusalem Road house at about 3:15 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 9) where the homeowner, a 58-year-old Cohasset woman, had returned home and found that someone had broken in and stolen $48,000 in jewelry including 500 pairs of earrings, police said. The house was unlocked and the woman's son was home asleep and did not hear the break-in.

Jewelry boxes were open and gone through, police said. The woman left at 5 a.m. and returned at about 3 p.m., police said. The larceny is under investigation.

Needle prick

The school department notified police last week that a nurse at Deer Hill had pricked herself with a needle during the course of her duties. A report was made and is on file, police said.

Accomplished much, still more to do in New Year

MIKE COUGHLIN

This blue print of progress which I termed "Eleven for Eleven" was aggressive and bold. Some thought it overly ambitious but I am proud to say as we celebrate the holidays and look forward to the New Year, "Team Cohasset" has achieved what some considered impossible.

Since my appointment as Town Manager, I am amazed by the beauty of Cohasset, the character of its citizens and the dedication of its public employees. We have accomplished a lot in five short months but much still lays before us. Nevertheless, it is only fitting that we review our progress.

Cohasset was tested in September by the winds of Hurricane Irene. Our employees met that test with a coordinated response that was emulated by other communities across the commonwealth. The round the clock commitment by our first responders was nothing short of remarkable. Forged in this crucible of crisis- came a team of professionals who banded together. Ever since, with that same dedication and commitment, "Team Cohasset" has proceeded to confront the myriad of challenges facing our town.

Little more than two weeks after "Hurricane Irene," at the Board of Selectmen's meeting of September 13th, "Team Cohasset" outlined a comprehensive set of goals and objectives for the rest of calendar year. This blue print of progress which I termed "Eleven for Eleven" was aggressive and bold. Some thought it overly ambitious but I am proud to say as we celebrate the holidays and look forward to the New Year, "Team Cohasset" has achieved what some considered impossible. We achieved "Eleven in Eleven."

Let me review our accomplishments

1. Improving The Financial Department. This was and remains our number one priority. Shortly after taking over, I discovered the accounting issues facing Cohasset were much deeper than anyone thought.

In mid October, the Finance Director announced that he was leaving. Immediately, we engaged two outstanding public accounting firms to help right our financial ship. To improve our standing with the Department of Revenue, we committed to submitting our balance sheet by Nov. 22 and tax recap by mid December.

We submitted a reorganization plan with additional staffing and requested a Financial Management Review from DOR, which will begin in March. We also recruited a respected Town Accountant for over 20 years of municipal experience for the position of Finance Director/Town Accountant.

Working with the financial staff, we have created an employee task force to implement our new software system. More needs to be but the work done from September 13 to December 13—in three short months is nothing less than outstanding.

2. Improving Public Safety. Reacting to the lessons learned from Hurricane Irene, we also introduced a reorganization plan to better manage both public safety departments. The appointments of a new Deputy Police Chief and Assistant Fire Chief assures as we enter the new year we can meet any challenge and better steward the taxpayers money.

We also initiated a K-9 unit, acquired a Humvee and secured authorization for a new thermo imaging camera for the fire department. We also recruited two members for the fire department, secured the appointment of one of our dispatchers as a supervisor at the regional emergency communications center and we are in the final stages of recruiting new members of the police department— including interviewing a leading candidate who is presently serving his country via teleconference from his base in Kubal Afghanstan.

3. Improving Public Services. Perhaps our most challenging initiative involved the creation of the Operations Department to better manage and coordinate the public services.

Starting a new department is never an easy task but due to the dedication of the "Greenbush Boys" we are well underway. Critical to the success of this effort is the acceptance of joint management of the Water and Sewer departments. Change is never easy but we are making progress every day.

We have committed to work closely with the Sewer Commission in a comprehensive audit of their capital project account.Despite growing pains, we are also working with the Water Commission towards making their plans for a "Concession Agreement" a reality.

This department is also spearheading our efforts to improve the harbor and is playing an important supporting role in our efforts to explore solar power and "green technology. The department is also working with the Board of Library Trustee on their roofing renovations.

We have also worked to improve the professionalism and safety of the department's employees by acquiring new high visibility jackets and gear. We have moved Buildings and Facilities back to Town Hall and as we approach winter we have worked with the schools to better coordinate our snow removal plans.

4. Improving Cohasset Harbor. Working under the leadership of Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, who forged a new relationship with the Seaport Advisory Council, we are working on plans to improve our harbor. Spearheaded by the Harbormaster, with professional assistance provided by the Operations Department and CLE engineering, a comprehensive project was approved by the Board of Selectmen.

It will be submitted to the Seaport Advisory Council for their consideration at their January meeting. We are also working with the Community Preservation Committee on avenues of joint concern.

It is our hope that positive feedback by the Seaport Advisory Council will elevate the importance of Cohasset Harbor with the Army Corps of Engineers. To that end, we are also working with our Congressional Delegation— including both Representatives Keating and Lynch.

5. Improving Building, Planning and Community Development. New construction projects like Avalon and the Cook Estate are providing substantial new tax dollars just as we need them the most. Critical to the task is the work of our "land use" departments, which in the past have been critically short staffed. With the approval of the Special Town Meeting, we will be creating the new position of Planning Coordinator and a part time position that will be assisting both the Planning and Building Departments. We also looking to improve support to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

6. Improving the Health Department. With the deadline of the Consent Decree looming closer, it is with a great deal of pride that over the past months that the Health Department has initiated the Septic Betterment Loan Program. The department also conducted an array of well-organized and impressive clinics. Finally, to better serve the public health needs of the community, we have created a second Health Agents position.

7. Improving Senior Services. Through an extraordinary effort by town officials, representatives of the Social Service League and the Swim Trust, I am please to state that a Memorandum of Understanding amongst the parties now creates a path towards constructing a new senior center. Further, the Special Town Meeting approved $15,000 to fund a needs assessment.

Working with the Council on Aging, we also have definite plans to increase funding in the next fiscal year for enhanced programming. These efforts represent a true Christmas present for the seniors of Cohasset and as we approach the New Year, Willcutt Commons will not be a mere resolution, it will become a reality in 2012.

8. Improving Veterans Services. With the retirement of our Veterans Agent, we have approached Hull on a concept of mutual support and regionalization in the provision of veterans services. As a former Army officer, I fully support the importance of recognizing those who served and assuring the honors and traditions of military service are preserved.

9. Improving Our Library. Working with Library Trustees, we are working to fund the library at levels which ensure its certification. The special town meeting approved the bulk of funds necessary to withdraw the waiver that was filed in October.

Working with the Trustees, I am committed to the additional steps that may needed and to ensure in the future that our library will never submit a budget that jeopardizes its certification. I am also working with the library trustees to secure the space they need for future expansion.

10. Improving Recreation. Shortly after assuming my responsibilities as Town Manager this past August, I saw first hand- the excellent programs run by our Recreation Department. I also saw the staffing issues caused by its success. To that end, I will be seeking in the spring to adjust the present year budget for the Recreation Department as well as recommend enhanced funding in the upcoming budget so that additional part time staff can be hired to support the cutting edge programs that Recreation affords our youth

11. Improving Public Safety Facilities and Capital. Working with the Capital Budget Committee, we have worked to increase their awareness in the critical need to address our public safety facilities and their operational capital.

To that end, substantial improvements to the present police and fire station have been endorsed. Funds necessary to fund a "needs assessment" — the first step in a long series of steps in the path towards a new public safety facility have been authorized. A new one ton dump truck for the highway department has also been approved.

While these projects await an accounting of the Capital Stabilization fund, they are on the runway for reality in the new year. Cohasset will be part of the new regional emergency communications center in mid January and the work to fully establish the Emergency Operations Center at the Deer Hill School with continue.

Towards the New Year

As the coach of "Team Cohasset" I am proud of our achievements during the "2011" season. Together, "Team Cohasset" has accomplished "Eleven in Eleven." The accomplishments as well as the frustrations have been many but in the end, no one can say that "Team Cohasset" has been lazy.

Towards the new year, more needs to be done. As we close the "2011" season, I want to thank each department, each employee, every board, commission and committee for their hard work, patience and perseverance.

Finally, I want to thank the Board of Selectmen for the honor of having appointed me Town Manager and the two outstanding employees in my office for their support and dedication. To the citizens, I want to express my best wishes this holiday season and my thanks for the warm welcome that you have extended to me and my wife.

Mike Coughlin is the Cohasset Town Manager.

HEALTH NOTES

Dealing with healthcare challenges

STEVE BOBO

Inappropriate use of the emergency department and consequent long waits for treatment have sometimes been serious problems for many seeking care locally.

Much depends on how one looks at the world and his or her own environment. It can color one's thinking, activities and how one manages to cope with his surroundings. Sometimes, a good practice is to take stock of our current situation and sort out things we should do to secure the best results from the usual expectation of how things are. In Cohasset, we can be comfortable with the tools available to cope with health matters, surrounded as we are by first class facilities. Here are a few issues and considerations to think about when looking at the Town's health care situation. We need to be ready for next year's challenges.

Regarding the availability of health care, Cohasset is universally regarded as good to excellent. Access to primary care for adults is seldom a serious problem by most residents and providers. Getting appointments at the few practices taking new patients can sometimes take very long, 3 months or more. Waiting times are long for providers unless transportation is available to travel to neighboring towns and Boston. Otherwise few complaints have been reported.

Inappropriate use of the emergency department and consequent long waits for treatment have sometimes been serious problems for many seeking care locally. Routine ear infections are a common diagnosis for Emergency Department non-admission visits. Recognizing their safety net role in accepting anyone who comes through the door, minor problems should be dealt with within an hour. Seniors and providers have reported a reduction in access due to the withdrawal of Medicare HMOs from the region. The difficulty and cost of obtaining supplemental insurance. High prescription drug costs are sometimes noted as a barrier to care for seniors.

However, the need exists for a central resource for information on health care, patients' rights and assistance in applying for programs or accessing care is a common theme. Systems are complex and many give up before they find a source that meets their need. Many have a difficult time identifying where most residents should get health information. The most common answers were doctor's offices and town hall.

A Chronic Disease Management Program is also necessary and is maintained and operated by the Health Department. The town sometimes attempts to seek National Institute of Health provided financial support in the form of grants, cooperative agreements, and contracts. This assistance supports the advancement of the NIH mission of enhancing health, extending healthy life, and reducing the burdens of illness and disability. While NIH awards many grants specifically for research, they also provide grant opportunities that support research-related activities, including: fellowship and training, career development, scientific conferences, resource and construction.

Hospital Management — Not all providers jobs are skill related, or even related to the medical profession, but the work to be done is necessary. Further, there's a need for case management, particularly for young families and for seniors. While private providers have increased capacity to cover Medicaid births, little is known of services that should be available at a clinic. A case management program for low income, uninsured or underinsured, elderly patients suffering from chronic diseases is necessary.

Workforce shortages in the medical area are a common problem. The most severe problem was reported for home health and home care workers, which threaten the ability of home care programs to continue to meet growing demand.

Thoughts on the need for new Senior Center

ROBERT ERNST, SR.

So it is a fair question that might be the objective of the study — to wit, do seniors have any special needs and if so is the town responsible for providing it?

I have sort of forgotten how that Rip Van Winkle story goes but I have gotten a bit long in the tooth myself. I seem to recall leaving a nice little town, not quite in the Midwest, that had its own municipal 18 hole golf course, that I helped it acquire and formed a senior league there, we also had a brand new fitness center with an indoor 75 foot pool and a new $2,500,000 senior center but I like it a lot better here in Cohasset.

In my Van Winkle-like dream I recall talks about a new Cohasset senior center – wasn't there some talk about using that concrete block building in the municipal parking lot and yes! now I remember, there was talk about a fairyland castle, an 18,000 square foot building over near the swimming pool at a cost of about $6,000,000 – that's when I really woke up.

But I love it here and that little cubby hole with its odd name — Council of Elder Affairs — on Main Street has provided a life filled with a plethora of wonderful people to go along with the most beautiful scenery on earth and a superb 9 hole golf course down in Scituate which includes the nicest golf people I have ever met. Even the reality about needing $15,000 to make a definitive study (see the Mariner of Dec. 9, 2011 - page 10) to see if Cohasset really needs a senior center can't squash my enthusiasm for this little town.

It's hard to believe, after all the meetings and articles in the paper, etc., that this hasn't been done already but it certainly is about time! And if the study needs a little help these few demographics seem material in reaching a conclusion.

The study would not be far off if it concluded that Cohasset was made up of thirds: adolescents - plus or minus five years; adults (working parents) and seniors. I don't know what the town's budget is but I think that most of it comes from the adults, seniors and businesses with much of it spent on services, debt service and the adolescents' education but very little of it on the seniors as a demographic group.

So it is a fair question that might be the objective of the study — to wit, do seniors have any special needs and if so is the town responsible for providing it? It certainly does for the community as a whole and especially for the adolescents. And we might as well admit that just about every other community would answer the question affirmatively. So?

There really isn't any question about the need; more to the point is if the town provided a senior center would the seniors use it? I have been associated with such facilities for 20 to 30 years and my answer is that the use of such a center is how well it is designed in terms of the services it provides and not in terms of the its size and the brick and mortar that goes into it. Personally I don't think we need 18,000 square feet nor a $6,000,000 building but we need more space and staff than we have now and a lot more service than is provided. Although I will say, in closing, that no organization will ever provide as much with so little as has been done by the present staff and the wonderful volunteers of whom this community should be very proud.

Ditto to Murray Campbell's letter

I was on the same trip as Murray (see letter, page 12). I heartily join with his thanks to Marita and his strong, positive reaction to the Center. Frankly, its warm, welcoming, enjoyable ambience was a surprise and a "first" for me. As was apparent on our visit, the Center is used not only by seniors but by "children of all ages. It is a great resource for the people of the Town and I would urge anyone who can, when convenient, to stop by the Center for a brief viewing. Don Evans, 72 North Main St.

Play is scheduled to start the first week in January and run thru early March. Fees will be approximately $ 150 per player depending on the number of players/towns accepted.

Teams/players expected to participate: Marshfield, Cohasset, Scituate, and Hingham.

Defense keys opening game victory

Skippers clamp down on Abington

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Less than a year ago, the Cohasset boys basketball team was battling for a Div. 4 State Championship on the famed Parquet at Boston Garden.

The Skippers lost a 58-55 game in a barnburner against Winthrop, but left some great memories for players and fans, including a spectacular 65-64 comeback win over Cathedral in the Div. 4 state semifinal game.

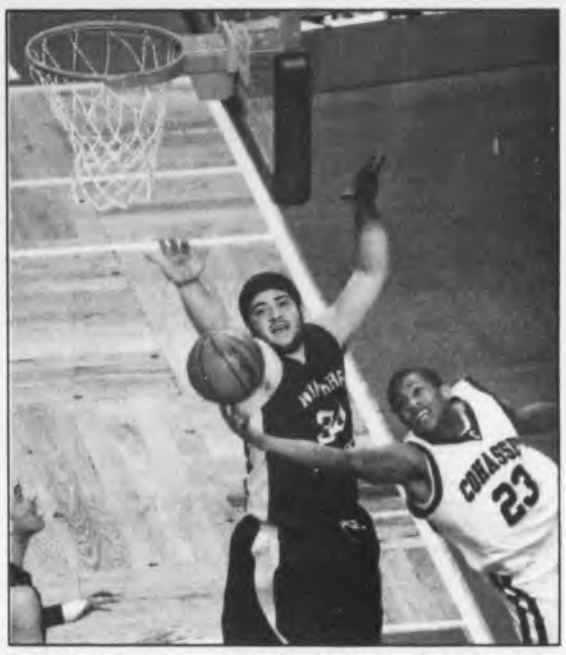
Those memories are just that now – memories, as the new season began Tuesday night at Abington.

For an opener, Cohasset began to make some new memories with a 36-30 win in a defensive battle.

Cohasset got 14 points from Shane Haggerty and 12 rebounds by Robbie Mahoney to lead the Skippers.

"Robbie Mahoney really controlled the defensive boards against a bigger Abington team," said Cohasset's Hall of Fame coach Bo Ruggiero, who was recently honored as the Div. 4 Coach of the Year. "He had 12 rebounds."

Ruggiero said his squad came out playing aggressively to start the defense of their title, but struggled offensively against a tough Abington defense.



Still, the Skippers were able to get the job done.

Kyrel Jaundoo and Christian Davis both added 8 points, and Haggerty had a big three-pointer late in the game to ice the win.

Cohasset trailed 11-8 after the first quarter, but outscored Abington 18-6 to take a 29-17 lead into the half.

The Skippers host Carver Friday night at 6:30 p.m. in another South Shore League contest.

Great start

Skippers win Krzysztzton Memorial Tournament

By William Wassersug

So far so good.

That was the sentiment from Cohasset's veteran wrestling coach Torin Sweeney after his team's 57-22 win over B.C. High on Wednesday night.

The win marked a milestone for Sweeney – his 300th career victory.

"We won ten of 14 matches," Sweeney said.

YOUTH TRAVEL BASKETBALL

Cohasset girls leading league

Teams combine for 10-2 overall record

The Cohasset girls travel basketball teams in grades 5-8 in the Old Colony League (OCL) are off to a fine start through the first two weeks of the season. The four squads have a combined record of 10-2 and all have winning records. Moreover, the sixth and eighth grade teams are undefeated with 3-0 marks and sit in first place in their respective divisions of the 12-team OCL.

The Fledgling Fifth graders, after dropping their initial encounter last week by a close 15-12 score to Kingston, captured both of their contests over the weekend to improve to 2-1 on the season. The Blue & White pulled out an exciting 9-8 triumph at Pembroke Saturday and then recorded a 12-5 victory over Norwell at the CHS gym on Sunday.

The sixth grade team, fresh off its scintillating, 17-16 overtime conquest of defending OCL champ Kingston last week, had an easier time in both of its matches this weekend, rolling past Pembroke, 40-20 and Norwell, 30-6.

The Super Sixers jumped out to a 24-5 advantage over Pembroke in the first half and then tried some different things on offense after the intermission en route to the easy victory. Sunday's contest with Norwell likewise never was in doubt. Both triumphs were total team efforts, with all of the girls scoring, rebounding, passing, and playing strong defense against their opponents.

The Sixers have outscored their opponents by a better than 2-1 margin through their first three games.

The seventh grade girls split their contests over the weekend, easily handing Pembroke 24-11 on Saturday, but coming out on the short end of a 26-16 decision to Norwell on Sunday. Combined with their 26-21 opening week triumph over Kingston, the Sensational Sevens stand at 2-1 on the season.

The Blue and White eighth graders remained perfect with a pair of relatively easy victories, 37-11 over Pembroke and 23-15 over Norwell, over the weekend. The triumphs were a welcome relief after their clutch, down-to-the-wire, 32-30 win in their season opener last week against Kingston. The Exemplary Eights now stand at 3-0 on the year.

All of the OCL teams will be back in action Sunday when they host Weymouth at the CHS gym.

The Cohasset sixth grade entry in the Kingston Sports Center League saw Ciera Carlisle score 10 points. The Blue & White came out on the short end of a 26-18 final tally and stand at 1-1 on the season.

After making a friendly wager with Hull's Town Manager Phil Lemnios, Cohasset Town Manager Mike Coughlin was thankful that Cohasset's football team won the annual Thanksgiving Day game against Hull, in an upset of 34-6.

Coughlin honored team captains Chris Murphy and Chris Brash during the Tuesday, Dec. 6 Board of Selectmen meeting.

"It is often said that tomorrow's leaders are born on the field of athletic competition," said Coughlin. "The lessons learned on the football field will follow [the players] for the rest of their lives."

The captains were presented with a special football to commemorate leading their team to victory. A small replica will also be presented to Lemnios, said Coughlin; Cohasset's team possesses the actual football "used in battle."

Carver beat East Bridgewater 72-51 on Tuesday.

Tony Pires led Carver with 18 points. Myles Dias added 17 points and Tevin Silva had 15 points for Carver.

For the current season, Cohasset has a solid group of players back from last year's championship team.

There will be holes to fill however.

Robert Jones and Sam Richardson are both at Framingham State University now.

Jones is averaging about 19 minutes per game and is near the top of the team is assists while averaging 4.1 points-per game.

Richardson is still working his way into the rotation.

While Jones and Richardson garnered much of the attention last season, deservedly so, the Skippers were much more than a two-man show.

That was evident in the final when Haggerty led Cohasset's scoring with 17 points.

Jaundoo was one of the feistiest and toughest battles for opponents underneath. He scored 12 in that game and played excellent defense.

Mahoney knocked down nine in that game.

All three were already looking ahead after the loss at the Garden.

""A State Championship is all I want next year," Haggerty said right after the loss. "We never stopped fighting. We knew what we could do. Playing on this stage we knew we had to go out all and all, all the time. We were never giving up. We didn't give up all year. We just couldn't come up with it tonight."

Cohasset's Shane Haggerty takes it strong to the basket for two points in the state championship game at the Boston Garden in March. Haggerty led Cohasset with 14 points in their season-opening win over Abington. STAFF FILE PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Jaundoo said he expected to win.

"It was devastating," he said right after the loss. "I'm still a little confused. It didn't feel right when it was over. We had a lot of determination. We went in feeling that we'd win. This wasn't the outcome we wanted. We are happy we made it this far."

If the Skippers can continue to play tight defense and find that extra scoring touch, this could be another big season for Cohasset.

On the girls side, Cohasset lost their home opener 46-31 to Abington

Over the weekend, Cohasset was at Bristol-Aggie for an eight-team tournament.

The Skippers beat Dean Tech in the first match, 42-27, then Wakefield 49-25, before coming out on top against Canton in the final round, 42-21.

The Skippers benefited from their upperclassmen leadership as seniors Gus Helbock, Graden Foley, Derek Froio, and Chris Brash each won all three of their matches. The team also received help from their younger members, as freshman Mike Yerardi also won all three of his matches.

"I decided that this might be a fun tournament," Sweeney said. "There were teams from the west, north, and central there. It's fun to see teams you usually don't see."

Sweeney likes what he's seen of his team in the early going, but knows things might get tougher soon.

Cohasset hosts Chelmsford and Milton on Saturday morning.

For the Skippers, Gus Helbock is expected to have a big season coming off a fifth-place finish at States last season.

Foley, meanwhile, won three matches at Bristol Aggie.

Derek Froio was also a triple-winner there, wrestling at 160. Last year he was fourth at States at 152.

Senior captain Chris Brash, who was also a football captain, had some big pins for the Skippers at 170.

Yarardi, a freshman heavyweight tallied three pins while wrestling at 265.

"Everybody on the team had a win in varsity matches," Sweeney said.

In the win over B.C. High, Harry Helbock wrestled well at the new 106 weight class.

Steve Maher improved to 3-1 this season and has looked solid.

Mike Livingstone has made the transition from football tackle to the mat and has looked good.

In the tournament, Cohasset downed Wakefield 49-25.

Winners included Brett Dooley at 121, picking up his first varsity win.

Gus Helbock, Foley, Froio, Brash, Maher Yarardi and Harry Helbock were also victorious.

Against Canton, winners were Alex Seppola, Gus Helbock, Foley, Froio, Brash, Yarardi and Maher.

"So far so good," Sweeney said after the B.C. High meet. "We'll have some big tests coming up."

That includes Scituate and top teams at the Marshfield Holiday Tournament.

LIFE AT CHS

Volunteer Club helps at Cradles to Crayons

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Wednesday was a much needed half-day for Cohasset students. While some spent it relaxing or hanging out with friends, members of the Volunteer Club went to the Cradles to Crayons warehouse in Boston. They spent hours sorting clothes at the "Giving Factory," thanks to all of the generous donations they received throughout the Coat Drive.

Thursday was an Advisory Day for CHS. Classes were shortened, and an extra hour-long block dedicated to homeroom, where each class continued planning their project to "give back" to the school, or something like that...

The Spinnaker comes out next Friday, December 23rd! Do not forget to bring your dollar. You will not want to miss out on an issue packed with current events, music reviews, a teacher interview, and funny features, to name a few.

Thursday was the Winter Concert at CHS. The band, jazz band, and the chorus preformed and did exceptionally well. Both the band and chorus will be competing at a festival in New York City in mid-May.

The winter sports season is finally underway! Last Saturday, the girls' Varsity Ice Hockey team lost to a powerful Marshfield squad 2-1 in their season opener. However, despite the lost, Saturday's game is a testament to the girls' improvement from last year, when the girls suffered a brutal lost to Marshfield's JV team. The Skipping Indians are sure to continue improving throughout their first season as a Varsity squad. The only goal was scored by junior Nicole Farren. The girls had another game Wednesday at Norwell, and the boys Varsity team's first game was Wednesday at Abington.

The girls' Varisty Basketball team lost 41-36 to Abington on Tuesday. The team is doing exceptionally well despite having a very young squad and three or four injured players. On the other hand, the boys' Varsity Basketball team started off their season with a bang, defeating Abington 36-30.

The Wrestling and Gymnastics teams are off to a great start, as well. Come to see the boys' basketball teams play tonight at home against Carver! JV tips off at 5 pm, with Varsity following at 6:30.

Progress reports were sent out on Friday – can you believe it? How is it possible that it is already halfway through the second term, and almost second semester? Where is the time going?

Speaking of time flying, there is only one more week left until Christmas Break. I hope all of you are getting into the holiday spirit and are up to speed on your Christmas shopping. See you next week!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High; her column appears weekly during the school year.

Turpie's talk begins with a short documentary piece he produced on Paula Deen for the Hallmark Channel a few years ago.

Today's job searchers need to be able to sell themselves by convincing potential employers of their core values and their dependable strengths. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North Church says Paula Deen did just that to break into the business as one of today's most popular cooks and TV personalities, "She has an amazing back story of battling a disabling condition that kept her from leaving her house, but she had skills she learned from her grandparents — cooking, and managing and those probably saved her life!"

Bill Turpie will be the featured speaker at New North Church's final meeting of the year for the "On the Job" group Monday, Dec. 19. His remarks will focus on how to discover our core or essential values and how to identify our basic or dependable strengths. His talk begins with a short documentary piece he produced on Paula Deen for the Hallmark Channel a few years ago.

"When I first met her — I thought she was just a southern cook with a great personality and distinctive accent — and then she told us about her ordeal and how she was able to turn her strengths into a business—one that has boomed!" says Turpie. "She has a lot to teach all of us and it isn't just how to make better fried chicken," he adds.

Before becoming pastor of New North Church, Turpie was senior correspondent for "Today's Business," which aired on a 140 channels every weekday morning throughout the United States. He also served as a contributing correspondent for "Wall Street Journal Reports," and was the business correspondent for WCVB-TV. He reported from around the world as a correspondent and producer for the Odyssey and Hallmark Channels, covering religion and politics in Russia, and Latin America and produced television coverage of the Pope's trips to the Americas.

Reflecting on his broadcasting career, Turpie says, "When I first began my career I had trouble selling myself because I wasn't clear just what I wanted to do. I didn't know how to promote myself—which every job seeker needs to learn how to do in today's competitive marketplace. I think I have some lesson to pass on about doing that."

"On the Job" is held every Monday morning from 8:30 to 10 a.m. in the Ruth Curry Parlor at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., in Hingham. The group is led by Marie Harris, Bill Turpie, Linda Powers, and Shirley Rydell. The program is free and open to anyone looking to network and improve their job search skills as they seek their next position.

Monday's meeting will be followed by a late brunch and is the last meeting until Jan. 9, next year.

Anne M. Belson watercolors exhibit planned

Watercolors by Anne M. Belson will be on view at Paul Pratt Memorial Library from Jan. 3 – Feb. 29, 2012 courtesy of South Shore Art Center. The exhibition "New Directions in Watercolor" includes recent work in which the artist explores new possibilities for her style. A longtime plein air painter inspired by elements in the landscape, working onsite in a small format and completing the painting in a single sitting, she has been experimenting with new subjects, a variety of surfaces, larger formats and longer "finish time" in the studio. "I want to continue to grow as an artist, to see where new sources of inspiration lead, to exercise my imagination, to keep it all fresh."

LIBRARY KIDS

RA Levels and Library Books

Developmental Reading Levels are based on the Developmental Reading Assessments given to your students by their classroom teacher. Because the library system does not catalog books by the DRA we must rely on web sites such as Scholastic.com. Scholastic Books offers a Teacher Resource page that allows us to search for books by grade level, Lexile, and DRA.

To use this valuable tool log on to http://www.scholastic.com/bookwizard/.

Look for "book wizard Find Just the Right Books." Underneath "book wizard" you will see "Find Books," "Book Alike" and "Grade Level Equivalent."

Click on the drop down arrow in this box and click on DRA and then click on "Advanced Search" (just under the red Search button). First, you can choose an interest level (grade level). Next, at "Reading Level" use the drop down arrows to select a range of DRA levels, then you may select a "Genre" or leave it at "Any" Finally, click "Search." This will generate a list of books at the DRA levels that you have requested. Using this list log on to www.cohassetlibrary.org, select the catalog, and type in the title to see if the book is available through the OCLN library network or to place a hold on the specific title. For further information or a one on one tutorial on DRA reading levels see Mrs. Moody in the Children's Room.

SMART IS THE NEW SEXY.

It's hard to keep up with everything going on in the world today, including the part that's right around you. That's why people look to the newspaper, print or digital, to give them the community news and insights they can't find anywhere else. And besides, that gallery opening could be the icebreaker you've been looking for.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF DEC. 26, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With the new year's opportunities almost within reach, the Arian's courageous aspects are raring to go. And don't be surprised if a lot of people follow the zodiac's most trusted leader.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Change lies ahead for the brave Bovine who is ready to shuck off the tried and true to try something new. But appearances can be deceptive. Check it all out before you charge into anything.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This week promises a peek into what the new year holds for the Gemini Twins, both in love and careers. Family matters continue to be a factor in decisions you're going to be facing.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) As you move into the new year, your travel aspects grow stronger, and you might find yourself making decisions about a destination and a traveling companion sooner than you'd expected.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The new year holds both glitter and gold. This means Leos and Leonas should begin getting the facts they'll need to separate the real thing from the sham in order to make important decisions next year.

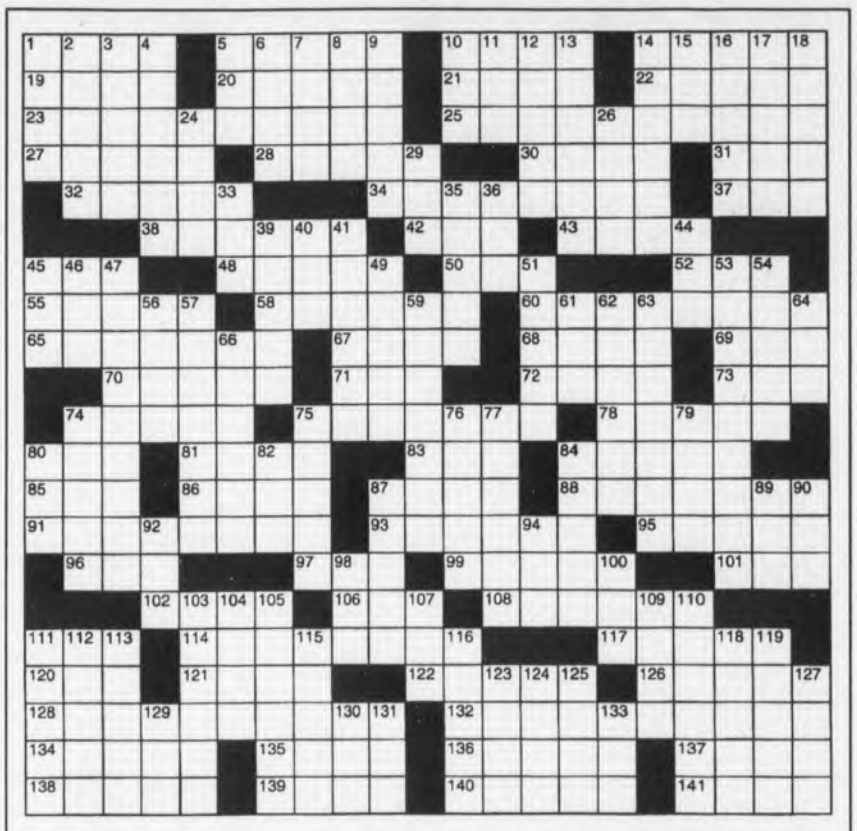
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A good way to start the new year might be to arrange for a visit to someone you haven't seen in a long time. You also might want to pick up that project you put off a while back.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) As you contemplate the new year's potential, you might want to talk things over with people who are or have been where you want to go. Their experience and advice can be helpful.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Someone close to you might feel you have no more room for him or her in your life. This calls for immediate reassurance of your love so you can start the new year on a high note.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The coming year will bring more people into your life. Some situations might not work out as well as others. But overall, everyone earns something, and that's always a good thing.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The new year could find you indulging in one or more of the hobbies you've always wanted to take up. And don't be surprised if they ultimately direct you toward a new career.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The artistic Aquarian should find more opportunities in the new year. You might even make some potentially helpful contacts as you gather to ring in the year 2012.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The new year offers challenges for Pisceans who want to make better use of the skills they now have and learn new ones. Personal relationships show stronger positive aspects.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you sometimes tend to be a bit judgmental, nevertheless, you are generous and caring and very much beloved.

Special Service of Christmas Light and Loss

While many are whistling Christmas carols, swilling eggnog, and gearing up for holiday parties, many of us find the holidays especially difficult. Some may be grieving loved ones, memories, or personal losses. Others may be dreading the annual family gathering and the stressful emotions they sometimes generate. Still others may be anticipating the disappointment of unrealized hopes and expectations.

On Wednesday, December 21st, at 7:30 PM, St. Stephen's Church will offer a special service for those in the community who are struggling with the holidays because of personal loss, grief, or a general sense of the "Christmas blues."

"Christmas Losses, Christmas Light" is a "quiet and contemplative way of recognizing how difficult this time of year can be, particularly with the added stress of economic loss that so many are experiencing," said the Rev. Margot Critchfield, rector of St. Stephen's. "It's a service that creates a very sacred and safe space in which to acknowledge our feelings of sadness, loss and grief—while anticipating the coming Light of Christmas.

This will be the third year that St. Stephen's has offered this service to members of the community. "It's an amazingly warm and comforting service," says Rev. Margot, "with quiet music, scripture readings, and an opportunity for folks to light a candle in memory of a loved one. And of course we invite everyone to share together in Holy Communion," she said, "regardless of where they are on their faith journey."

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church sits on the hill in the Village at 16 Highland Avenue. Parking is available in the Town Hall lot.

NEWS UPDATE

Property taxes, new growth up

New construction bodes well for Cohasset economy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

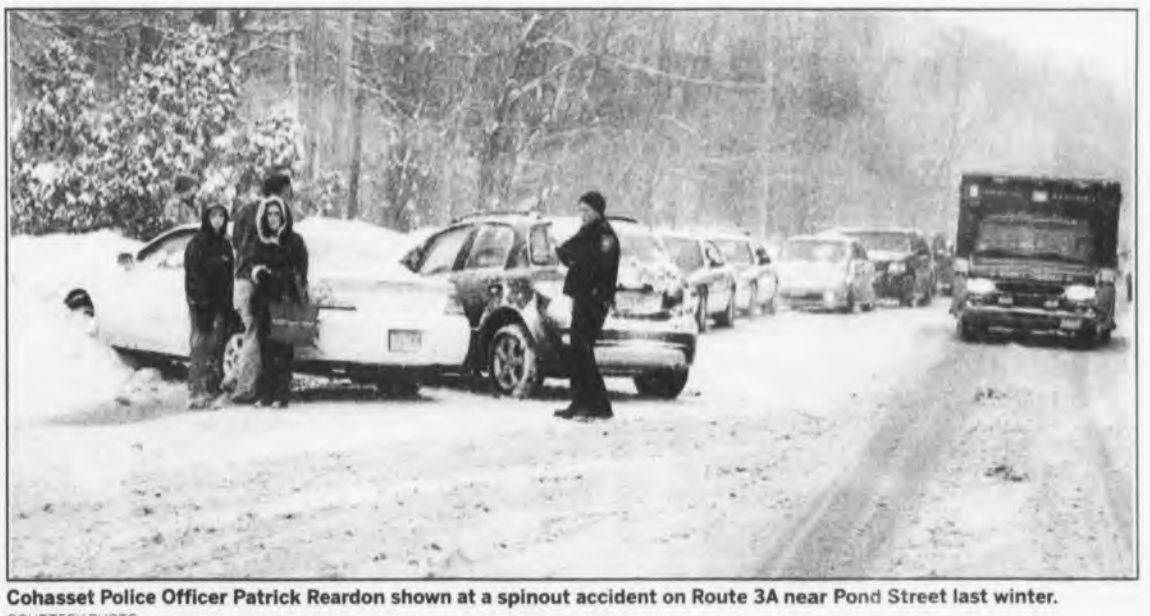
Good news has arrived for Cohasset taxpayers, just in time for Christmas

On Tuesday, the Department of Revenue (DOR) certified new growth for Cohasset in fiscal year 2012 at $693,000, exceeding the amount projected by Cohasset's Board of Assessors by $43,000.

The "robust" number, as Town Manager Mike Coughlin called it, is partially due to the Cook Estates development and new Avalon Bay apartment complex (new growth for fiscal year 2011, not including Avalon and Cook Estates, was $360,149).

Deputy Assessor Mary Quill said, however, that the growth value was $59.8 million, with just $14.4 million coming from Avalon, which is still under construction. Most of the new growth can be attributed to new houses.

Coughlin called this news "an early Christmas present for the taxpayers of Cohasset, and further indication that we've turned a financial corner."



The town manager commended Quill and her staff for a job well done, and said that their

Some tips for winter driving

What
The Cohasset Police Department encourages motorists to take note of local forecasts and plan accordingly for adverse weather conditions. Motorists are reminded that they can dial 511 on their cell phones for current traffic and road conditions on Massachusetts Highways.

Vehicle preparation
Motorists should ensure that their vehicles are well maintained and properly equipped for winter driving. Motorists should check the fluid levels of their vehicles, particularly washer fluid and anti-freeze. Tires should be inspected to ensure that they are properly inflated and have sufficient tread depth. Motorists should equip their vehicles with a snow shovel, ice scraper, jumper cables, a flashlight and some warm clothing and blankets. Additionally, motorists are reminded to completely clear their vehicles of snow and ice prior to driving, including all lights, for visibility. Clearing vehicles of snow and ice enhances the safety of all motorists by providing an unobstructed view to the operator and prevents snow and ice from flying off vehicles at high speeds and posing a hazard to others on the road.

Reduce speed
Anticipate delays. Most snow- and ice-related crashes are caused by spinouts and vehicles sliding off the road because they are traveling at speeds too great for the road and weather conditions. Posted speed limits are set for driving under optimal, dry conditions. If road and weather conditions are adverse, motorists should operate at a speed well below the posted limit. Four-wheel drive does not mean four-wheel stop.

Leave extra space
Under optimal driving conditions, motorists should leave at least one car length for every 10 miles per hour between them and the vehicle in front of them. If the road and weather conditions are adverse, that distance should be significantly increased in order to afford for increased stopping distances.

Black ice
Transparent ice may form on the roadway. If you notice ice forming on any objects, assume that it is forming on the road surface as well. Bridges are usually the first surfaces to freeze. Drive slowly and, if possible, avoid driving on iced-over surfaces.

Buckle up
Ensuring everyone in your vehicle is properly restrained is the single most effective thing that motorists can do to keep themselves and their loved ones safe on the roads.

POLICE BEAT

Hanson man faces OUI charge

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 22-year-old Hanson man was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol on Monday (Dec. 19) at about 1:23 a.m. on Hull Street.

A Hingham police officer spotted a 1999 Plymouth Breeze parked on the side of the Cohasset part of Hull Street that was still partially in the road. Further investigation revealed that both the operator and the female passenger were passed out inside the car. The woman had a bottle of liquor on her lap police said. The car was in park but the engine was running.

Cohasset police arrived and said the Hanson man failed field sobriety tests; he was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol and negligent operation. His passenger, a 22-year-old Marshfield woman, was taken into protective custody.

The couple said they had been returning from a Christmas party in Hull. Inside the car were multiple bottles of alcohol, police said.

MV accidents

• Police responded to a minor motor vehicle crash that was reported at 8:12 a.m. on Monday (Dec. 12) on Avalon Drive. Police said a 26-year-old construction worker from Millis, operating a 2001 van, backed into a forklift, operated by a 46-year-old East Bridgewater man, in the construction zone at the complex. There were no injuries and no tows, police said.

• At 7:43 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 12), police responded to a one-vehicle accident on South Main Street near Beechwood Street. Police said a 68-year-old Weymouth man on a 2007 Suzuki motorcycle struck a deer that had darted out into the roadway. The Weymouth man fell off his motorcycle but was not injured. The motorcycle was drive-able and the deer continued on its way, police said.

• At 4:03 p.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 14), there was a one-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by Starbucks. Police said a 2003 Jeep Liberty, operated by a 26-year-old N. Easton woman, hit a piece of debris (lumber) on the road that snapped the front axel of the Jeep that caused her to veer off the road sideswiping a utility pole. The Jeep was towed by the operator was not injured, police said.

• At 2:40 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 17) there was a two car accident near Leo's Gulf Station on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 50-year-old Scituate woman in a 2005 Nissan Altima was exiting Leo's to turn left onto 3A toward Scituate. She crossed the first lane as a motorist stopped to let her out but when she tried to cross the second lane her Altima as struck by a northbound 1998 Toyota Corolla operated by a 36-year-old Plymouth man. Both cars were towed and there were no reported injuries. The Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield to the right of way.

• At 2:21 p.m. on Sunday (Dec. 17) policed responded to a two-car crash at the intersection of Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 2006 Jeep Commander, operated by a 42-year-old Cohasset woman, was headed east on Beechwood Street and ran the red light hitting a 2004 Audi A4 that was on 3A. Police said an 86-year-old Scituate woman operated the Audi. There were no reported injuries and neither vehicle had to be towed, police said.

ID thefts

• A 59-year-old Sohier Street man reported to police on Monday (Dec. 12) that he had received a FedEx package at his house that contained two AT&T cell phones and an invoice for $287 paid with his Master Card. He contacted AT&T about the fraud since he had not made the purchase. He also filled out an identity theft packet and notified the credit agencies to keep a watch on his name and Social Security number.

Police think that the ID thieves may have intended to pick up the FedEx package that had been left on the resident's door.

• A 70-year-old Atlantic Avenue man reported last Thursday (Dec. 15) that in checking his Master Card bill he found about $1,000 in charges for purchases that he had not made. Master Card is crediting his account. He filled out an identity theft packet and is notifying the credit agencies to keep an eye on his identify.

Dog struck

A 74-year-old Cohasset man in a 2009 Volvo knocked on a resident's door on Pleasant Street last Thursday (Dec. 15) just after 6 p.m. to report that he just hit and killed a dog that had been running loose. The dog owner was notified, police said.

Cigarettes

The clerk at Tedeschi's in the village notified police at 10:10 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 16) that several youths were trying to get customers to buy cigarettes for them. A customer told the clerk about being approached by the teens outside the store and the clerk called police. Police said it is a criminal offense to purchase tobacco for someone underage.

Lighting

A caller complained about the lack of sufficient lighting in the area of Aubuchon Hardware last week. Police said it is the first complaint of that nature they have received.

Car seats

Police stopped a 2010 Chevrolet van last Saturday (Dec. 17) at 6:40 p.m. that was operated by a 29-year-old Hull man who had two children under five in seatbelts in the front seat. The officer stood by until the man's wife arrived with car seats for the two children. Once the kids were properly restrained in the back seat the van was allowed to go on its way, police said.

Not located

Police tried to find a 32-year-old Scituate man believed to be living in Wompatuck State Park who was wanted by Scituate police for violating a restraining order. Cohasset checked the area and could not locate him, police said.

Cohasset's Conservation Commission is holding a big commercial real estate developer accountable for committing "repeated, egregious" environmental violations.

Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. has erected a luxury apartment complex along Route 3A that has led to new revenue growth in Cohasset. The apartments may be bringing in money to the town, but at great cost to the local environment, officials said.

Tripping the wetlands bylaw

The trouble began during construction of Avalon Bay in Cohasset, when Conservation Commissioner Jack Creighton noticed a "river of mud" running down 3A. Creighton reported the company's "erosion control problems" to the commission's agent, Paul Shea, and notified Avalon as well. Avalon filed an after-the-fact Notice of Intent (NOI) with the commission to remove the sediment and silt from the affected wetlands and to clean out the Mass. Dept. of Transportation's catch basins and drainage system.

Avalon was "amenable after the fact," according to ConCom members. Avalon Bay's Development Manager Lars Unhjem attended an Oct. 20 ConCom meeting to present their side of the story, explaining that brutal weather conditions in the winter created pressures around the project in terms of fighting off the snow and trying to continue their construction schedule.

According to ConCom meeting minutes, Unhjem admitted to "screwing up" the construction project.

When ConCom chairman and attorney David Farrag brought up the safety and liability issues that could have been caused by the flow of sediment, Unhjem said that he never saw a dangerous issue on the site when he was monitoring it.

The Development Manager added that Avalon mitigated this mistake by cleaning up the onsite mess, as well as the Mass. DOT properties and drainage system, which was expensive and "no small feat."

For the ConCom, the apology was too little, too late.

Shea said during the meeting that he found it hard to believe that Avalon was not in violation of the Non-Point Pollution Discharge Elimination System Permit issued by the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Creighton insists that Avalon should have known better.

"There's no excuse for it," Creighton said in a phone interview. "It's not an innocent mistake. This is a billion dollar company; they're very sophisticated. There's no excuse for not immediately looking at the site and knowing what the issues are."

The ConCom has discussed fining Avalon Bay $25,000, the maximum amount allowed by state law, for violating the town's wetlands bylaw. A consensus was reached during the Oct. 20 meeting that Avalon, in lieu of a fine, could agree to maintain the town's rain gardens, for an estimated cost of $20,000 (see sidebar).

The commission suggested that Avalon meet with town engineers Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber of Cohasset's Operations Department to discuss the maintenance and best management practices of the rain gardens. A representative from Avalon was supposed to appear before the ConCom the following month with an update.

But when Avalon was scheduled for the commission's Nov. 17 meeting, they asked for more time; the ConCom moved the discussion to the following month. However, just before the meeting on Dec. 17, Avalon cancelled once again.

"We were taken by surprise," said Mike Milanoski, an associate member of the ConCom.

"Tom Gruber was there to hear their story, and they didn't show," said Brennan, adding that no one from Avalon has contacted the Operations Department to discuss the rain gardens yet.

ConCom chair David Farrag said that Avalon sent a letter dated for Dec. 15, which the commission received at 5 p.m. on the day of the meeting. The letter stated that, once again, they need more time to come up with a response.

Unhjem thanked the commission for allowing additional time to evaluate the rain garden request.

"As we have been preparing our response, we have determined that it would be best to provide our response in writing," Unhjem wrote in his letter. He further apologized for the late notice.

Creighton was perplexed as to why Avalon offered no further explanation.

"I suspect this isn't high on their list of priorities," Creighton said. "For a real estate developer of this national stature, this lack of foresight is difficult to understand. We are asking them to adhere to the same basic principals of environmental responsibility that the townspeople in Cohasset are required to adhere to. One is forced to ask whether Avalon believes they are above the standards that are applied to others."

"We've put them on the agenda for January," Farrag said. "We'll see what they've got at that point."

Unhjem, who works out of Avalon's Boston office, could not be reached for comment.

Rain gardens explained

Rain gardens are planted depressions that collect rainwater runoff from impervious urban structures, preventing erosion, flooding, and pollution, as well as improving the water quality of nearby bodies of water. Cohasset has 15 rain gardens around town, but the Conservation Commission does not have the funding to maintain them. Carl Sestito of the Department of Public Works told the ConCom that the DPW has a $2,500 budget for the rain gardens, which cost $300 to $400 a piece per year to maintain water quality.

EATING HEALTHY

Local health coach hosts 'Power Seminars'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Lara Amaral wants to help people combat the dangers of sugar, not only during the tempting holiday season, but every day.

When the Cohasset Mariner last caught up with Amaral, she was starting to sell her homemade Power Snacks at local farmer's markets. Since then, the certified holistic health coach and founder of Authentically You! Wellness, of Scituate, has made spreading the message of healthy, mindful eating her mission.

Over the past few months, Amaral's homegrown Power Snacks business has exploded. She has showcased her goods at farmer's markets all over the South Shore, at expeditions like the Boston Vegetarian Festival (the longest-running vegetarian expo in the country) and has received coverage in Edible South Shore. Now, Amaral reports that her snacks are being carried in over 10 stores in the Boston area, from All the Best in Cohasset to Debra's in Concord.

For Amaral, who has eight years' experience as a weight-loss counselor and attended the Institute for Integrative Nutrition, her business is a labor of love.

"I've taken my passion and invested it into creating Power Snacks," she said.

Power Snacks are best described as healthier versions of nutrition bars and macaroons, made with whole ingredients such as nuts, fruits, coconut, flax and a variety of spices. Each bar is raw, vegan (dairy- and egg-free), gluten-free, soy-free, trans fat-free and sugar-free. What the bars lack in ingredients, however, they make up for in taste. Amaral is constantly in the kitchen, perfecting her craft, and dreaming up flavors like "triple berry," "ginger blueberry macaroon" and "cranberry walnut," the latter of which "sells out every time," according to Amaral.

"So many people have told me that Power Snacks have helped them get off sugar; they have so much more energy and feel replenished," Amaral said.

While Amaral is ready to rally against chemically enhanced "frankenfoods" any time, sugar is the ingredient she will tackle in her upcoming Power Seminars. Sugar, in particular, is the culprit for many serious health conditions, the health coach explained.

"When we ingest sugar, it enters our bloodstream and we become inflamed at the arterial level," Amaral said, citing a 2009 New York Times article titled "Is Sugar Toxic?" that the health coach said started her on her Power Snacks trajectory. "This leads to a series of chronic ailments."

Amaral listed the following:

- Cancer
- Diabetes
- Food allergies
- Gallstones
- Learning disabilities
- Headaches/migraines
- Heart disease
- Hypertension
- Obesity

Amaral refers to these health problems as the body being in a state of "dis-ease."

Amaral reports that her snacks are being carried in over 10 stores in the Boston area, from All the Best in Cohasset to Debra's in Concord.

Another dangerous effect of sugar consumption, Amaral explained, is how it leads to metabolic resistance, suppressing the hormone that lets our brains know when our stomachs are full.

"This is why we're so obese as a nation," said Amaral, "and why I'm trying to help get people off sugar."

For those who have already indulged in a little too much of the sweet stuff, Amaral said not to worry.

"The body is amazing at forgiving what you've consumed," the health coach said, adding that a detoxifying cleanse can help reverse the effects of many chronic conditions. However, Amaral is careful not to endorse trendy diet cleanses as a way to lose weight.

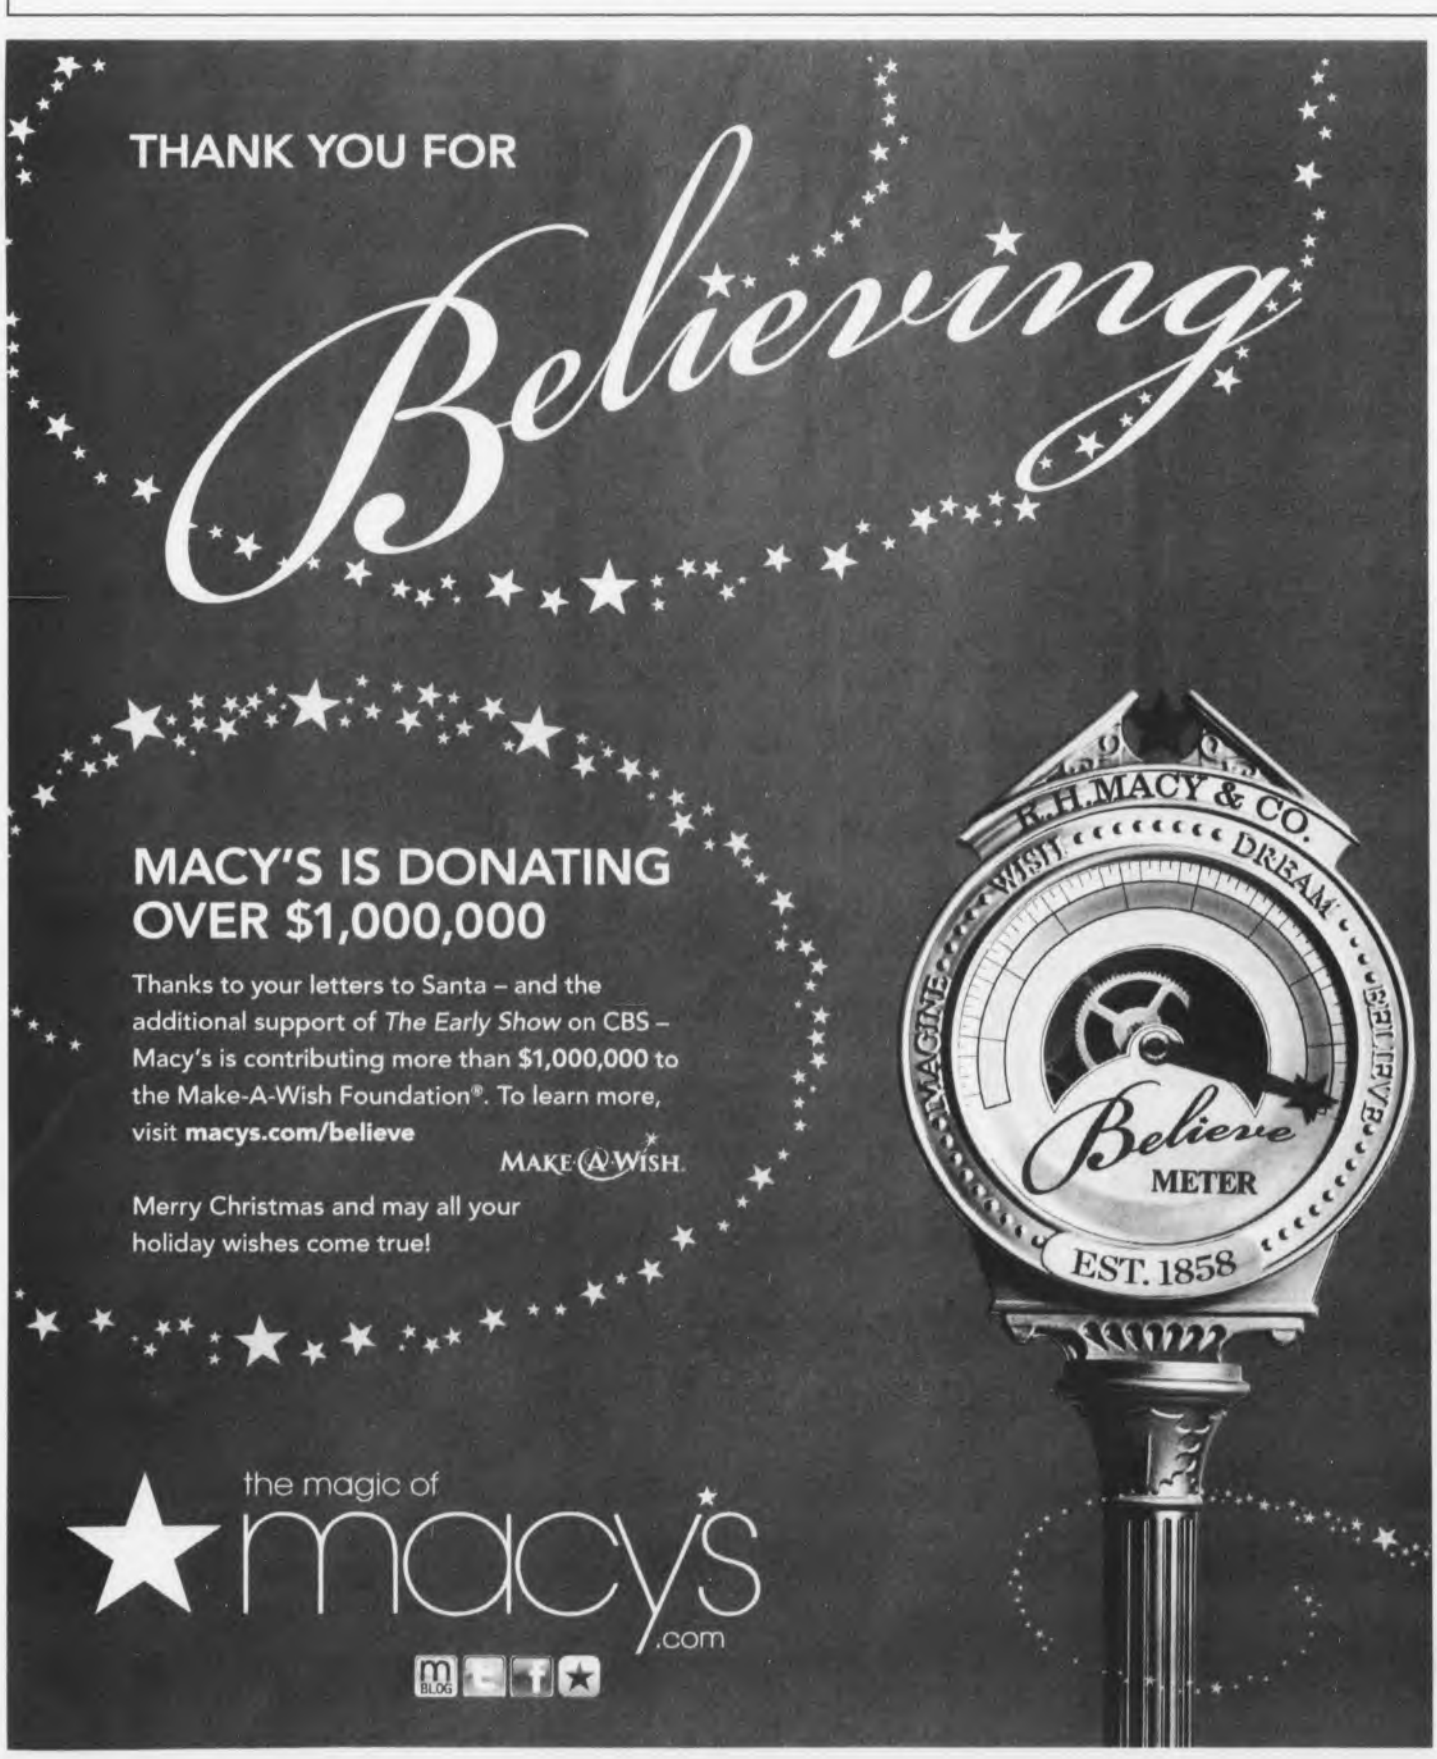
"It's to give your organs a rest," Amaral said.

As for arming ourselves against holiday treat temptations, Amaral's message is this:

"As you navigate through this hectic time of the year, remember to be gentle and loving with yourself; do take care of yourself. Practice self-care when you can. Even the smallest of things really do help! And eat healthy. Even if you find yourself indulging at holiday parties, try to add in some green veggies into every meal. This will make an enormous difference for you as well!"

Amaral said that her planned talks are not a platform to promote Power Snacks; rather, her intention is to inform people about how to take control of their diets and offer strategies for doing so.

In addition to equipping folks with the tools they need to do battle against their food addictions, Amaral is also holding her Power Seminars as a way of "giving back to my supporters in the community."



The first Power Seminar is scheduled for January 8 at the Scituate Library. Amaral encourages those who are interested in attending to email her at lara@authenticallyyouwellness.com.

Seats are filling up quickly, Amaral said. "Response has been phenomenal."

If you go:

- What: Authentically You! Power Seminar: Eliminate Sugar Cravings.
Certified holistic health coach Lara Amaral will share her secrets on how to fight sugar cravings, discussing what the cravings are, why we crave the things we do, why the cravings can be relentless, and how to stop cravings in their tracks.
- When: Sunday, Jan. 8, 2:30-3:30
- Where: Scituate Town Library

Tobacco restrictions

During their Tuesday, Dec. 20 meeting, the Board of Health discussed proposing changes to the town's existing smoking bylaws in order to further restrict tobacco use in town. The changes would affect where users can buy tobacco and nicotine — namely, cigarettes would no longer be available for purchase at stores with pharmacies, like Stop & Shop, Walgreen's and CVS.

The amended bylaws would need to be submitted as warrant articles for Spring Town Meeting. If the changes are not voted through, the original bylaws will remain the same.

The board discussed consolidating the bylaws into one for Town Meeting.

New car wash septic system

Paul Miribito of Paul Ross Engineering came before the Board of Health to seek approval for a septic system for the proposed car wash to be located at 828 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (near the Scituate line). It was Miribito's second appearance before the board seeking their approval; the board previously approved initial plans, but a zoning bylaw that was changed at last year's Town Meeting indicates that there must be a 30-foot buffer between septic systems and abutting wetlands.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said that while historically, the board does not approve variances in plans with new construction, she was willing to make an exception since the plans had already been approved. Following a brief discussion, the board voted to approve the septic system.

Director of Veterans' Services retires

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Veterans Services Officer Joe McElroy, left, gets recognized for the work he does for the veterans in town during the healing field ceremony in May 2010.

After two years, Joe McElroy is retiring as director of Cohasset's veteran services. McElroy was appointed in February 2009, gave his resignation in June, and will leave his post after Dec. 31.

McElroy was kind and welcoming as he spoke from his kitchen table this past Tuesday, but it was clear that he is disappointed in how veterans' needs have been handled, and anxious over all the work that still needs to be done.

The longtime Cohasset resident may not have been the town's veterans' services officer (VSO) for very long, but McElroy has spent many years dedicating his time to help his fellow veterans (McElroy is a Vietnam vet with a 20-year military career). Prior to taking the position in Cohasset, McElroy spent around six years working with the Disabled American Veterans group in Weymouth, where he helped get federal grants for disabled local veterans.

McElroy served in the Army as a combat engineer and supply officer, retiring after 20 years with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in 1984. Born in Boston and raised in Braintree, McElroy was eager to stay in the area. After retiring from the service, he settled in Cohasset with his family, where he became an active, integral member of the community: over the years, McElroy has served on a number of boards, including the School Committee, Capital Budget Committee and the Board of Directors for the Cohasset Historical Society. He was also a co-founder and first president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation.

Seeing a need in Cohasset, McElroy decided to try his turn as director of veteran services.

"Even though it's an affluent community, there are veterans and surviving spouses in dire financial distress," said McElroy. "I knew people who needed help."

His first mission as the veterans' agent, said McElroy, was outreach, letting local vets know that he was available.

"There was no public contact info on how to get a hold of the veterans' agent readily available," said McElroy. "Even in the Rotary Club phonebook – the Bible in this town – no veterans' service agent was listed."

McElroy took to mailing out letters, writing articles for the Cohasset Mariner, and setting up monthly library visiting hours to let folks know that he was there to help.

McElroy explained how difficult it is to navigate the paperwork for the many state and federal benefits that are available to veterans. This process was "stressful at times," McElroy said. "I was quite well-qualified to assist Cohasset veterans with federal benefits, but had a significant learning curve on state benefits."

Doing the job "the way the veterans' agent is supposed to do it" involved sitting down and going over the extensive paperwork with veterans and/or their surviving spouses, said McElroy. "You don't just hand them the forms and say, 'go to it.' If that happens, the vet or spouse gets intimidated and doesn't follow through."

While the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services switched over to an automated process for benefit applications, McElroy said that it was a complicated system to learn. Luckily, McElroy's wife, Mary, is a computer consultant, and was able to help her husband "through the tough spots."

Some of McElroy's proudest accomplishments during his tenure as director of veterans' services involve working with Tom Wigmore, Commander of the Sons of the American Legion. Wigmore, who organizes the Memorial Day Parade and many other veterans' events in town, approached McElroy about helping to energize the Veterans' Day Services at the Deer Hill School, which McElroy said were "poorly attended" at first.

"We sent out invitations and quintupled attendance," McElroy said, "and added panache by issuing the fifth graders small flags when they come in." The event has grown bigger each year, said McElroy. "The veterans enjoy it, the children enjoy it, and it's a learning experience for the young people."

Another accomplishment was creating what McElroy called a "mini veterans volunteer transportation system" for vets who have trouble getting around town. He also worked regularly with the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Hingham and Cohasset Lions Clubs to donate gifts and grocery store gift cards for veterans and surviving spouses in need. McElroy also worked with a Scituate business to set up a spring and fall yard cleanup program for veterans' homes.

McElroy also wrote many articles for the Mariner alerting veterans and surviving spouses of entitlements and other information he thought they should know about.

Despite all of the projects he has overseen as the veterans' services director, McElroy is still anxious over those he has been unable to complete.

"This year has been somewhat frustrating because town management has seemingly been in constant crisis... not supporting projects I would like to see done, or projects I have started but have not seen to finalization."

The most critical of these projects is computerizing the veterans' cemetery record, McElroy said. "If you don't have computerized veteran cemetery records, you don't know who is buried where. The town is not in compliance with Massachusetts law." Cohasset should also have a veterans' grave officer but doesn't, he explained; instead, McElroy has been acting unofficially in that position. "I'm also retiring from that."

Other projects McElroy tried to get off the ground include:

- Monitoring the proper display of flags on town property (flags up at night are supposed to be illuminated, and McElroy has noted several that are displayed improperly or torn)
- Obtaining a marker for a Medal of Honor recipient who is buried in Central Cemetery, to be displayed in the Healing Field at Cohasset Harbor
- Getting a more substantial memorial for the Daughters of the American Revolution's patriots
- Establishing a new group email distribution system with information on job postings, handicap equipment and other news for veterans
- Getting an office for the veterans' service agent in town, complete with technological equipment, filing cabinets and furniture; taking visitors at home, McElroy said, can be dangerous

Increasing the veterans' services budget in the general relief fund from $32,000 to $45,000; McElroy said that he has regularly used his allotted stipend of $1,600 to pay for mailings and office supplies

What does McElroy's retiring mean for the veterans' services officer position? This is something McElroy has tried to talk to Town Manager Mike Coughlin about. Coughlin has said in board meetings and written in memos that he believes the position could be regionalized. While McElroy thinks that Hull's VSO, Bill Leamy (whom McElroy called "the most knowledgeable person in the state on state veterans' benefits, in my opinion"), could help Cohasset in the interim, he is doubtful Leamy will be able to serve Cohasset long-term. Norwell has been mentioned as a possibility, but McElroy noted that their agent is also retiring on Dec. 31.

The notion of regionalization, McElroy said, should be weighed against the benefit of "having someone local who knows the lay of the land, the people in town, and is closer geographically to the action."

The departing VSO believes the most critical consideration for the next veterans' agent, however, "is the quality of the candidate, someone who is committed to the position and has a varied skill set."

In the meantime, McElroy is doing what he can to ease the transition to a new veterans' services officer. "I'm trying to organize things," he said, pointing out the file cabinets full of paperwork in his home office.

It seems that the retired Army vet will always be involved in veterans' causes in some way.

"I like to be in the background," McElroy said. "The only reason I put myself in the foreground was because it's the only way to do outreach."

If Not Now, When?

By Elizabeth Johnson

Schedules. Stress. Commitments. Deadlines. Expectations. To-do's... The excuses are endless. They aren't going away. Stop tricking yourself and face the fact that you need to get healthy. There is no time like the present.

You could buy a book or exercise equipment to motivate your activity level. You could put together shopping lists and recipes of healthy meals. You could even join (yet another) gym in the hopes that you actually go this time.

But let's face reality. You need something other than yourself to hold you accountable to making change. If not now, then when?

If you would describe yourself as "lacking will power or motivation" when it comes to exercise, then you really need someone to ensure you get to your workouts and eat in a way that fuels and nourishes your body.

"A postcard in the mail from Get In Shape For Women got my attention. Having failed in the big box gyms, the idea of working out with women with the help of a trainer was appealing. From the moment I walked into the gyms, I knew this was the place for me. My trainer believed in me and helped me get started. Having a personal trainer continues to help me be accountable for making my gym appointments," says Tara Koeschel, a GISFW client and a 12 Week Body Transformation Challenge Winner.

"The appointments make all the difference for me. Knowing I have my trainer there waiting for me to show up really helps me to stay focused! I am also so motivated by all the women that I train with; I am inspired by each one of them," shared Kimberly Tejada, a committed GISFW client and 12 Week Body Transformation Winner.

"I saw an ad in the newspaper for Get In Shape For Women at a time when my face felt full and my pants were tight, so on an impulse I signed up. My goal was to lose 10 lbs. but then went on to lose 20! I hated exercise and having an appointment made my workout happen. I love the people at Get In Shape For Women. Now I have more energy, sleep better and my husband notices I'm happier! I just joined for another year to keep it off and get more toned. Thank you! I feel great."

Party at the pub

Town employees come together for Christmas

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nothing says Christmas in Cohasset quite like a town employee holiday party at the Irish pub.

On the evening of Monday, Dec. 19, Town Manager Mike Coughlin hosted an all town employee Christmas party at Mr. Dooley's, Cohasset's newest watering hole.

Festivities kicked off at 4:30 p.m. and by 5, the small venue was already brimming. The pub was closed to the public for the evening to accommodate the group of employees from Town Hall, Cohasset schools, the Department of Public Works, the Police and Fire departments, and many more.

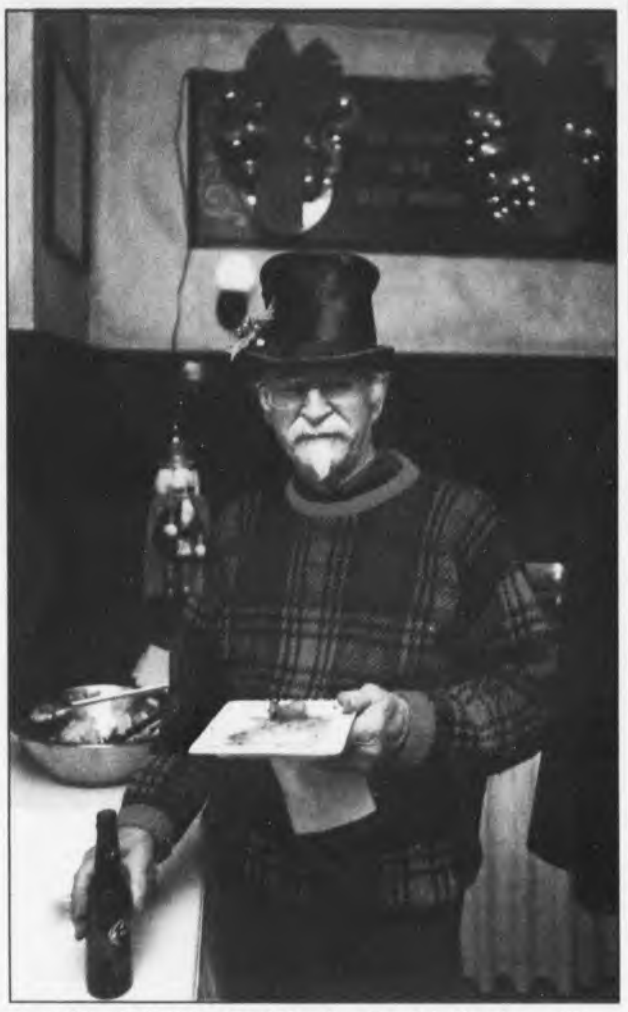
Live Irish music ushered folks into the warm, crowded tavern. All political issues and personal agendas were seemingly left at the door as staffers from various aspects of town government gathered together to toast the holiday season and the end of a hectic year. Tensions from late-night board meetings were set aside in favor of good old-fashioned yuletide cheer.

Coughlin made the rounds, greeting employees and wishing them well, along with his wife Bernadette. He encouraged this reporter to put down her notebook and join in the fun.

Police Officer William Quigley, who was recently promoted to Deputy Chief, was seen chatting with Chief Mark DeLuca. Fire Chief Robert Silvia was close by, declaring the party a success.

Coral Grande, Director of Cohasset Elder Affairs, was celebrating a successful year, notably the progress of the proposed senior center. Last week, an important Memorandum of Understanding was signed by the town manager and selectmen that will help the new senior center project along.

Selectman Leland Jenkins was spotted with his wife, Leonora, a Water Commissioner, hobnobbing with other town employees near the buffet, which included sandwiches and kebabs. Many folks were dressed in festive shades of red and green, and they were no exception. But Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy stole the show with his Christmas-y ensemble, complete with a top hat.



The party was one way the town manager was hoping to give back to what he calls "Team Cohasset."

"It's a nice time for all the employees and department heads to get together and celebrate their many achievements," said Coughlin. "They've worked so hard and done phenomenal work. Getting together in an environment to celebrate together is what Christmas is all about."

Coughlin added that town employees could expect to attend more events like this in the near future.

"The next big holiday on the Irish calendar is coming up — St. Patrick's Day," Coughlin said. "We'll definitely do something for that."

"It's a nice time for all the employees and department heads to get together and celebrate their many achievements."

COMPANY THEATRE

Paragon Park to come alive

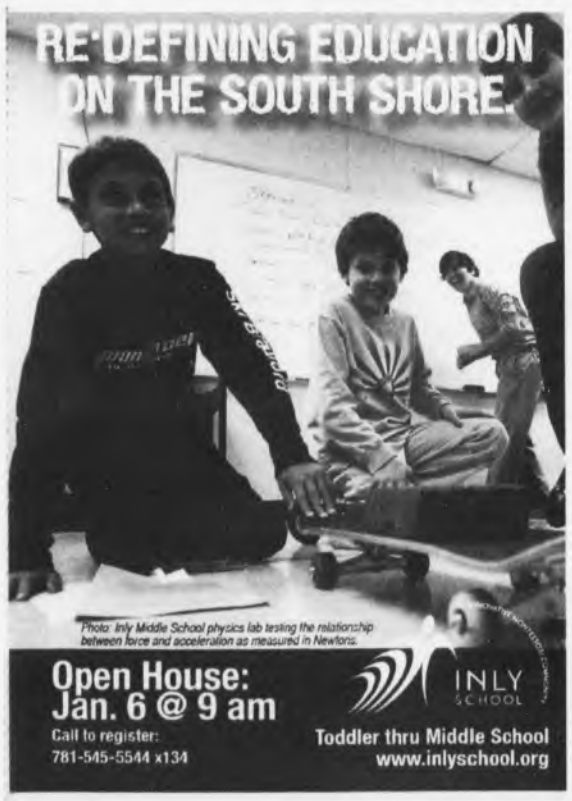
The Company Theatre will present the premiere of "Paragon Park The Musical" on July 27. Playwright Zoe Bradford, Company Theatre co-founder and director, and Boston-area actor/director Michael Hammond, together with Boston composer Adam Brooks, have created a fictional storyline that highlights historical figures and events based on the history of Paragon Park.



Brooks is composing a score of more than 20 original songs in the tradition of musical drama. The story and music will transport audiences to the early 20th century when Bostonians headed to Nantasket Beach as a place of leisure and entertainment.

"Paragon Park The Musical" is an emotional roller coaster, a spectacle that opens with the 1985 auction of the last remaining icon of Paragon Park – the carousel. The story then travels back in time to 1905 to the creation of this place, created by whaling mogul George A. Dodge. A little known fact is that Paragon Park served as the inspiration for Walt Disney's concept of Epcot in Walt Disney World. Though the story is local in its setting, the appeal is universal; especially to anyone who has experienced the excitement of an oceanfront theme park.

Tickets for "Paragon Park The Musical" are priced at $34 and $36. They are now sale at the box-office at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell, by calling 781.871.2787, and online at www.companytheatre.com.

One dollar of every ticket sold will be donated to Friends of the Carousel, a nonprofit organization.

OUR VIEW

Keep believing

Editor's note: Editor Mary Ford first wrote this editorial in December 1992 when her sons were still at home. She has adapted the editorial to reflect the fact that she is a grandmother. She continues to believe in Santa Claus.

I believe in Santa Claus. I have to.

You see Santa has visited me for as long as I can remember.

Even when I became "too old" to believe, I was lucky.

At the older end of a large family, we believed for the younger ones. I was 25 before I had to pretend not to. Then, almost before I could think, I had children of my own and I started believing all over again.

Now, my granddaughter is getting to that age when she is too grown up to really believe. However, she seems to know the subject is not open for discussion.

She has never actually said she does not believe. I don't give her the chance. Because once you stop believing altogether, Santa does not come any more.

And what would Christmas morning be without him, I ask?

I don't want to find out.

I've been suspicious of my granddaughter for a couple of years because she does not get up at 4:30 a.m. any longer on Christmas Day. In fact, she is not up at 5 or 6 a.m. either. Last year, it was 7:30 a.m. before she rolled out of bed. I can accept that as long as I can believe.

Santa comes to my house around midnight. Then he and I climb up the attic stairs and we wrap presents until our fingers ache and our eyes blur. And then we wrap some more. Then we sneak down and load the stockings. A lot of the stuff does not fit inside the stockings but we find spaces for the items around the hearth. Then we share a few Christmas cookies and a glass of milk.

Then I sit back in the big recliner and let the memories flow: Memories of being young and believing in this special person who never forgets about you even when you are all grown up.

But my granddaughter has that look in her eyes this Christmas – like she wants to have a talk, like she wants to tell me that there is not really a Santa Claus.

And if she does, I will say "no, don't tell." Let me believe — let me stay up and feel the magic, just one more year.

Santa's Helper here in Cohasset

Since around Thanksgiving Tom Wigmore has been Cohasset's liaison for the Toys for Tots program sponsored by the United States Marine Corps. The Cohasset Police Department has been the drop off location here in Cohasset and our residents have truly shown their generosity. Boxes located in the Police Department's lobby have been filled continuously. Tom has loaded his pick-up truck about six times driving into the Marine Corps drop off point on Dry Dock in Boston. Several families here in Cohasset as well as the Food Pantry have benefited from this effort.

Tom Wigmore and the residents of Cohasset should be commended for their commitment to helping others.

Merry Christmas!
Police Chief Mark DeLuca

VSO reflects on what post involves

I am concluding a three-year tenure as the Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services (VSO). During that period, I have been privileged to work with many wonderful veterans and a support infrastructure that grateful Americans have established to assist them in time of need. First, I want to state that you, as American citizens, should take pride in the quality of support that you provide our veterans and their families. Second, since I went on active duty during 1963, I have witnessed a tremendous improvement in the quality of services provided by the Veterans' Administration (VA), the State of Massachusetts and local municipalities. As a young soldier, "old timers" recommended that we change residency from Massachusetts to states more friendly to veterans such as Florida and Texas. What a change during the past 50 years! The VA has improved immeasurably. A major factor in the VA's outstanding performance has been a succession of dedicated, talented leaders. Likewise, the Massachusetts and Department of Veterans' Services (MDVS) is the best in the country. Most of our 350+ municipalities adopt compassionate bylaws that "close the loop" in assuring veterans and their families are recognized for their sacrifices.

During early 2011, Coleman Nee (a Gulf War veteran) replaced Medal of Honor recipient Tom Kelley (a Vietnam veteran) as the Secretary of MDVS. The transition process was handled poorly and innuendos flew fast and furious. As a part-time volunteer VSO, I do not claim to see the total picture. However, I see a lot and it is where the "rubber meets the road." Tom Kelley did an incredible job during his 12-year tenure while serving veterans as a forceful advocate. Coleman Nee approaches the same demanding job differently. However, he is doing an equally praiseworthy job. The citizens of the Commonwealth and its veterans have been blessed to have two leaders who "serve those who served" with distinction.

On being a 'Civic Grinch'

I didn't plan to be a civic Grinch this Christmas. Until this afternoon (Dec. 20) my heart did not feel two sizes too small. It all happened quite spontaneously. I received a call in the office from the Hingham police for their Annual Fund drive and suddenly I was putting antlers on Max the Redbone Coonhound. My natural inclination to give (I think I've been pretty good) was replaced by the compulsion to explain to the officer why I was holed up in a cave on Mt. Crumpit. Fortunately, the officer was a really good guy and by the time I finished singing "Stink, Stank, Stunk" he'd put away the cuffs.

The seeds to my inner Grinch were planted three weeks ago by the Town of Cohasset. In order to blast in Cohasset you must obtain a blasting permit and hire a fire detail for the period when dynamite is on site. Both are perfectly reasonable requirements that are mimicked in most towns with blasting policies.

What is different in Cohasset than most towns is how the fire detail is paid. In Cohasset the fire detail is paid in four-hour increments (If they work for five hours they get paid for eight) instead of a four-hour minimum and then by the hour (if they work for five hours they get paid for five).

My blasting crew started at 7 am and worked like champions to finish the job by 3 pm so the fire detail wouldn't charge me for an additional 4 hours. Here's the rub; If the blasters had finished at 4 pm instead of 3 pm the fire detail would have charged for 12 hours labor and probably made more for the day than the workers on the job.

I'm not here to point fingers or disparage fire details but that's bad policy, Cohasset, and it's all ours. The Cohasset Fire Chief confirmed the policy. We should change the policy to a four-hour minimum and then by the hour. Even the Grinch can see that.

For the record: Hingham charges a four-hour minimum and then by the hour.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

New twist on old favorite

MARY KENNEDY

With Spanish as the unofficial second language of these United States, it seems only fitting that Christmastime reading should also include:

'Twas the night before Christmas and all por la casa,
Not a creature was stirring - Caramba! Que pasa?

Los ninos were tucked away in their camas,
Some in long underwear, some in pajamas.

We hung all the stockings con mucho cuidado,
In hope that old Santa would feel obligado

To bring all the children, los buenos y malos,
A nice batch of dulces and other regalos.

Out in the yard there arose such un gran grito,
That I jumped from my bed like a frightened cabrito.

I ran to the window and looked out pa'fuera,
And who in the world do you think quien era?

Saint Nick in a sleigh and a big red sombrero,
Came dashing along como un loco bombero.

And pulling his sleigh — instead of venados —
Were eight little burros, approaching volados.

I watched as they came, and this quaint little hombre,
Was shouting and whistling and calling by nombre:

"Ay, Pancho, ay Pepe, ay Cuco, ay Beto, Ay Chato, ay Chopo, Maruco, y Nieto!"

Then standing up tall with his hands to his pecho,
He flew to the top of our very own techo.

With his round little belly like a bowl of jalea,
He struggled to squeeze down our old chiminea,

'Til huffing and puffling he stood in our sala,
With soot smeared all over his red suit de gala.

He filled all the stockings with lovely regalos,
(But none for the ninos that had been muy malos).

Then chuckling aloud, seeming very contento,
He turned like a flash and was gone como el viento.

And I heard him exclaim — y esto es verdad!
"Merry Christmas to all, y Feliz Navidad!"

HEALTH NOTES

Taking stock of our bodies

STEVE BOBO

Holiday Diagnosis - Just before the New Year, it might be interesting to analyze the present season in comparison to those that have gone before and perhaps, make some observations. We are in a period of radical change. During the holiday season, in the midst of so many traditional reminders, holly, Santas, etc., we hear news of robberies, disturbances, contrary to the traditional sense of the season. For many, the differences must be massive if the strident headlines are any measure. One of the most pressing needs during the holidays for each of us is to take stock of our current physical body condition; generally derived through years of following a habitual lifestyle, and make some decisions related to the means we choose in which we wish to celebrate and to extend, possibly, our life.

Perhaps, one change is the process of medical diagnosis. Medical health diagnosis should be implemented in a relatively standard form and should be capable of answering questions about every body system. No symptom should go undetected. Allergies, medications and immunizations should be recorded as well as family history and past medical problems.

Your personal diagnosis should be a complex analysis of all information gathered about your symptoms and will produce a list of all possible and probable medical ailments and conditions. Most diagnoses should be accomplished by a medical practitioner; a doctor or nurse. However, good information can also come from comparisons of body measurements. Observation is the optimum method of initial diagnosis. After all, a poet concludes that measurements are important. He said:

Algy once saw a bear;

The bear observed Algy.

The bear soon became bulgy.

The bulge was surely Algy

Ideal waist measurements — What are the "perfect" measurements? What is the human average waist size? Is one's general physical condition considered healthy? Visual observation is surely key to answers of questions about many assessments of physical condition. Historically, young women are generally considered attractive when measurements approacht 36-24-36. One's body's measurements should be viewed as ratios. Every person has an optimum shape based on bone structure and other factors such as 'gait balance', musculature and others from which we can build our own version of what we perceive as healthy bodies.

Your personal diagnosis should be a complex analysis of all information gathered about your symptoms and will produce a list of all possible and probable medical ailments and conditions. Most diagnoses should be accomplished by a medical practitioner; a doctor or nurse.

Waist/hip ratio For most of us, a determining factor will be how large our waist is. There is no accurate answer for the "average" waist size. A person who is 6 feet 2 inches? could have the same waist measurement as a person who is 5 feet 4 inches, but be far thinner. A more important measure is waist hip ratio; calculated by dividing waist measurement by hip measurement. (Hips are the widest part of one's figure). Ideally, healthy individuals should have a waist-to-hip ratio of 0.8 or less. and men should have a waist-to-hip ratio of 0.95 or less. If your waist is smaller than your hips, you have a healthy waistline. For example, a woman with a waist to hip ratio is: 24/36=0.66 and well below the .8. Some factors to consider, if you have very large hips, the test is still useful for determining your heart health. Having an apple shape; carrying extra weight around the stomach is riskier for one's health than having a pear shape (carrying extra weight around your hips or thighs) because body shape and health risk are linked. If you have more weight around your waist, you have a greater risk of lifestyle related diseases such as stroke and diabetes than those with weight around their hips. Monitoring body shape is an important factor in a healthy lifestyle.

A health practitioner can complete diagnoses at one's leisure. If preferred they may be completed in stages and all information can be stored in your own confidential personal health record for future retrieval.

Diagnosis identifies conditions that match symptoms. Performance involving a complete body check up would involve body measurements as well as symptoms.

Sharing childhood Christmas memories

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
Special to the Mariner

Now was the time for the letter to Santa Claus — The Weihnachtsmann — to tell him in confidence what was since long on your list of much wanted items. But you had to be cautious in describing your wishes — not to be too demanding.

German Christmas — It began with the preparation for the first Sunday of Advent. Suddenly, in all flower shops and nurseries the plain green Advent wreaths appeared, filling the air with the smell of forests and freshly cut twigs. They were offered in various sizes: large ones for hanging from the ceiling and smaller ones meant to be a centerpiece on tables. The final look was being finished at home with bright red ribbons and four red candles — green and red the traditional colors of Christmas!

The candles were never lit at the same time, but on each following Advent Sunday the next one was lit: the growing light of the wreath bringing you closer out of darkness to the brightness of Christmas Eve, so the fourth candle was still standing tall and untouched waiting to be lit on the last Sunday. But then, the time had arrived! Christmas Eve was close. It always seemed as if time was creeping slowly along like a snail. But such an Advent Sunday, sitting around the table with the family in the afternoon, was unforgettable. The smell of the dark green fir, the glow of the candles! Their flame so impressive, burning upright and calm —festive. The first Christmas cookies made the round, they were mostly baked in our own kitchen after recipes which had been passed down from generations in the family. There was the brown Lebkuchen (gingerbread), white round Pflastersteine (cobblestones), the thin crisp Spekulatus, Printen, Oblaten — not to forget the famous Stollen, originated since centuries in Dresden/Saxony. But on top of all, the small Marzipanbreads — covered with dark chocolate.

This was the first step coming closer to the Christmas delights you were waiting for. The family sang Christmas carols together. But there was a sharp difference made between the first songs and the ones, which were only heard shortly before and on Christmas Eve itself. For example you never sang "Silent Night" before the 24th of December. Talking, sitting around the Advent wreath together, was touching. There were memories of bygone Christmas times and surely, the presents were mentioned which were eagerly waited for.

The wishes! Now was the time for the letter to Santa Claus — The Weihnachtsmann — to tell him in confidence what was since long on your list of much wanted items. But you had to be cautious in describing your wishes — not to be too demanding. The letter could turn out unpleasant, if Santa would think of you as a spoiled, not humble person. The letter was written politely in your best writing, you even added some drawings to show him your skills and to please him. You also gave him the possibility to choose between two or three items that you mentioned.

Then it was time for St. Nikolaus Day on the 6th of December. Magically the Bishop Nikolaus, who had lived in Myra/Turkey during the 6th century, landed by ship in Rotterdam on the evening of the 5th of December. Rotterdam was Europe's largest port located on the shore of the Netherlands. On this night you put one shoe in front of your bedroom door — full of expectation — would he find you? And really, on the morning of the 6th there was a gift found in your shoe! Not always a piece of special sweets or new pen etc., NO, sometimes there was a rod sticking of your neatly polished shoe, telling you, St. Nikolaus expected better behavior. He seemed to know everything about everybody.

The gray December days passed slowly, with anticipation for the first snow, with baking in the kitchen and wrapping the first presents. There were a lot of secrets and mysterious happenings. Golden stars were found on the floor, colorful Christmas cards were sent out, arrived and admired. But there was always the question, had Santa received your letter? Would he agree with your wishes?

Now was the time when the Christmas trees were delivered to my grandparents house where I lived with my family. There were always two of them, a tall tree, reaching from floor to ceiling in the large dining room and a smaller one for the library of my grandfather. How impressive was the tall one in its mighty size and wide spread green branches! It was lit on the 24th, Christmas Eve, with real white candles and decorated with silver metallic hanging threads — the Lametta. Besides colorful balls in different sizes, it was only holding some sweets, which were sold for their hanging purpose in many varieties. In contrast, the smaller tree was lit by the first big electric candles — rather new on the market then. I remember my grandmother after the holy night sitting long times in front of the electric lighted tree, enjoying it. I never saw her sitting in front of the large tree. We children, my elder sister Evelore and my younger brother Gunter, had no part in decorating and preparing the trees. We saw them only when they were delivered in their simple natural green, but met them again on Christmas Eve in the moment when the tender ringing of a little bell called us to enter the dining room.

Festively dressed, with bows and lace colors, we had waited for a long time to hear this ringing! And when the door opened wide, there we stood, overwhelmed by the mighty beauty of the glistening shining tall tree-— such a splendor! We even forgot for a moment to look for presents. What a job it must have been to fasten and to light each of these many shining white candles! Then, all the family stood together and sang "Silent Night, Holy Night", and everybody, smiling, hugged each other and wished: "Frohe Weihnacht!"— Merry Christmas.

From outside, the most wonderful sounds started to fill the dark, winter night, it was very special and moving. From the tower of the town church four trumpets played slowly and powerful: "Vom Himmel hoch da komm lch her...", "High from heaven I come, to bring you good news...".

It was the song an Angel was thought to have sung during the night of Christ's birth in Bethlehem.

Despite cold or snow, the windows were open to listen to this wonderful all uniting strong music.

But then, finally, after weeks of uncertainty and hope — the presents made the round in the family. Wonderful, unforgettable moments!

After a while it was the time for serving and enjoying the so traditional meal of a German Christmas: The Gaensebraten — The roasted Goose- crusty, brown, and shiny it was placed on a big oval plate and filled the air with its appetizing smell. It was always accompanied by spicy red cabbage, dark green kale, and potatoes. What a taste! And how heavy in the stomach.

There was red wine served and as an exception on Christmas Eve, we children were allowed a sip out of a small liquor glass. What feeling it was, to say cheers together with the adults and to have the same drink. It didn't taste so extraordinary, deep inside you wondered why the adults enjoyed the taste of wine at all.

The next two days were holidays. Time to go to church, to visit or have visiting friends yourself. On both of these days, the 25th and the 26th, so called first and second holiday, there was no store open. All business and hurry was in a kind of still-stand. There was only Christmas, with the family and friends, time to rejoice, to play, to enjoy festive meals together. To read the new books you got, to explore the new toys and games you had wished for.

Aside of the presents, each family member got the so called "Bunte Teller" — mixed plate. This was a large thick paper plate filled with a variety of an orange, dates, figs, a top notch supply of sweets. This "Bunte Teller" was like a treasure itself, which supplied you for the coming days even weeks. But despite it, now and then you secretly approached the tall Christmas tree and quickly picked one of the hanging sweets — this was not considered good behavior...

The tall, so impressive tree, was lit only three times. One time on each of the three holidays. After its high time it still adorned the large festive dining room. It filled the room with its wonderful natural smell exactly up to the 6th of January. This was the Three Kings Day and it marked the end of a year's Christmas.

FOR THE RECORD

Don't keep your opinion to yourself

GREGORY MATHIS

Having an opinion is a good thing.

Most of us have opinions on a wide range of topics. Politics — local, state and national — can always spark a lively debate and most certainly will as we head into another important presidential election in 2012. Religion is another hot-button issue that can just as easily bring people together as it can divide them. If you listen to sports radio, you know there is plenty of discussion about the latest moves by the Red Sox, Patriots, Bruins or Celtics.

It's how people choose to express their opinions that say a lot about them.

For instance, some of the yahoos that clutter the radio airwaves with their sports banter make me cringe. But I have to give them credit. They're calling in, getting on the air and offering their two cents for all to hear, usually in a thick Massachusetts accent. I'm just listening and yelling at my radio, usually criticizing what they're saying, in my undetectable accent.

How many of us keep our opinions to ourselves or at the very least just burden those closest to us with a daily diatribe? That's all well and good, unless you're one of the family members who has to repeatedly endure the verbal onslaught.

Your opinions could serve a greater purpose though if they're shared with a larger audience.

Comments and blogs have taken things to a different stratosphere online. Often, the comments are nasty, personal, offensive and anonymous. It's easy to hide behind your words online, which does very little to generate real dialogue.

Newspapers still offer viable options for facilitating community debate.

We've seen how effective letters to the editor can be in offering a broad perspective on important town issues. Longer, more well thought out letters have been used as guest commentaries. And regular writers, with plenty of opinions to offer, have become regular columnists.

Most of our regular columnists are unpaid and not part of the editorial staff. It's interesting when someone calls or writes to complain about a particular columnist and tells us we shouldn't let so-and-so write about this or that. If each column came with fine print, it would read something like "the views expressed in this column do not necessarily reflect those of the company."

The best way to challenge an opinion expressed either in a commentary or letter is to write a commentary or a letter.

We're always looking for people interested in writing a local column. Contact your local editor or send me an email if you have an idea for a local, sustainable column. Many of our regular columnists write monthly, some biweekly, and a few brave souls have committed to a weekly column. Writing a regular column is not easy, and writing a weekly column can be a chore. Take it from me.

So give that a little thought before making your pitch.

Now that I've offered my opinion on expressing opinions, I'll be back to yelling at the radio on my way home tonight as the sports pundits dissect what's wrong with the Patriots' defense.

Making progress on the economy and jobs

GARRETT BRADLEY

The Massachusetts House of Representatives marked recent session accomplishments as the Legislature headed home for the holidays. Session priorities included job creation, strong fiscal management and reform that streamlined and improved the government and economy.

The House passed major bills pertaining to expanded gaming, economic development, municipal health care, civil rights, redistricting and pension reform.

Passage of this legislation marks further progress toward improving the small business climate and reducing municipal costs, while also reforming state government and restoring the state's fiscal health. Our bond rating has improved, and we have been able to restore money to the Rainy Day Fund while investing in job-creating projects. These efforts continue the work we have begun on behalf of the people of Massachusetts.

In the spring, the House worked on a municipal health insurance reform plan that aimed to help communities save on healthcare costs, while also protecting care quality for retirees and municipal employees. Under this legislation, municipal workers pay no more in co-payments and deductibles than those paid by subscribers to the largest plan offered by the Group Insurance Commission (GIC), which provides health insurance to state workers and legislators. The municipal healthcare reform legislation was a large part of the year's budget.

In July, the Legislature passed the new $30.59 billion spending plan for fiscal year 2012. The budget closed a $1.9 billion budget gap with funding reductions, ongoing revenue initiatives and limited use of one-time revenues. The budget increased Chapter 70 funding by $140 million and SPED Circuit Breaker funding by $80 million over their FY11 appropriations and laid the groundwork for the municipal health insurance reform plan that provided savings for cities and towns.

In addition, the House passed a measure that allowed the state to deposit $350 million to the Massachusetts Rainy Day Fund. As a result, Massachusetts now has the third-largest stabilization fund balance in the nation amounting to nearly $1.4 billion.

In conjunction with Supreme Judicial Court Chief Justice Roderick L. Ireland, the House passed court reorganization and probation reform legislation. Following the recommendation of the Monan Commission Report, the bill created an Office of Court Management and a Chief Justice of the Trial Court to divide the responsibilities currently held by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management. I continue to work with my legislative colleagues to ensure that Hingham District Court remains open and accessible.

The bill also reformed hiring and promotion practices in the Department of Probation, which still remains in the judicial branch. The legislation brought transparency to these practices by invoking an exam, recommendation, interview and background check process.

Finally, in continuation of the ongoing reform effort at the Probation Department, the bill established an Advisory Board to help craft additional improvements within the department. The board is comprised of seven members with expertise in the fields of criminal justice, public policy, human resources and management.

Over the summer, the Commonwealth was able to enjoy another tax-free holiday thanks to the efforts of the House. The tax-free holiday bill established a tax-free weekend on Aug. 13-14 2011. It provided that the state sales tax wouldn't be imposed on non-business retail costing $2,500 or less.

Near the end of summer and into the fall, the House received news involving the financial status of our state, stating "Standard and Poor's believes that Massachusetts' active management of future cost pressures is important." Standard and Poor's upgraded the Commonwealth's bond rating from AA to AA+, allowing us to save money when we sold some $500 million worth of bonds to fund capital projects across the state. The new credit rating represents the highest credit standing in the history of the state. The House worked closely with the Governor, Senate President and Treasurer to arrange meetings with the country's three credit rating agencies. This was the first time that all three agencies were invited to a day-long series of presentations on the financial status of the state, giving state leaders a unique opportunity to highlight the strong fiscal position of the Commonwealth, as well as the collaborative and disciplined efforts that have led to that position. Strong bond ratings mean lower borrowing costs and saves taxpayers money.

In that spirit, the House also worked diligently on another round of pension reform during this session. This reform legislation was passed by the House on Nov. 16 and soon after signed into law by Governor Patrick. The pension reform plan is projected to save the Commonwealth more than $5 billion over 30 years.

The reform first increases the career "look back" period from 3 years to 5 years to more accurately reflect an employee's career earnings, provide a more equitable calculation of retirement benefits, and prevent inappropriate salary spiking, and second, it says that regular earnings in any year cannot include pay that exceeds average earnings from the previous two years by more than 10 percent. A retirement benefit cannot be received until the individual has reached the minimum retirement age, which the legislation has changed for all category employees.

In addition, during the past session, the Special Joint Committee on Redistricting concentrated their efforts on creating fair and demographically sound new district maps. Thanks to the Special Joint Committee on Redistricting, the House passed legislation that created 160 new representative districts, including 20 majority-minority districts, four majority Hispanic districts, an incumbent-free district in Lawrence, and three majority Black districts.

The House and Senate also passed a new Congressional District map reconfiguring the Commonwealth into nine Congressional Districts, one of which is a new, incumbent-free district made up of Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod. The Redistricting Committee was able to accomplish all of this though an open, transparent process that incorporated feedback from elected officials and from the public. Over 4,000 people participated in one of the 13 public hearings that were held across the state, and a website provided additional information.

Civil rights and public safety also became priorities in the House during this session, culminating in the House and Senate's anti-human trafficking bill, which may be the toughest legislation of its kind in the nation. The bill ensures that anyone involved in the organization of forced labor and sexual servitude will face tough criminal penalties. The bill also establishes important protections for victims and children that help them access necessary services.

The House and Senate also worked together to pass legislation that cracks down on habitual criminal offenders. This bill aims to keep habitual criminals off the streets and ensure the safety of our Commonwealth. Under this new legislation, habitual offenders would have to serve two-thirds of their sentence, rather than half, before becoming eligible for parole. And furthermore, habitual offenders sentenced under any major crimes indicated by the bill will not be eligible for parole, work release or furlough, nor will their sentence be eligible for reduction or suspension. The "habitual offender" status is realized when an offender, after being convicted of any two major crimes, is convicted of a third major crime. The House and Senate versions of the bill are currently being reconciled by a joint conference committee.

The transgender equality bill provides fundamental protections for the Commonwealth's approximately 33,000 transgender residents. It extends civil rights and hate crime protection to transgender residents who suffer from bias-related violence and employment, housing and education discrimination.

An expanded gambling bill was passed by the House and Senate to allow three resort casinos in separate regions of the state and one competitively bid slot facility. The three casino regions are: Eastern Region – consisting of Suffolk, Middlesex, Essex, Norfolk and Worcester counties; Southeastern Region – consisting of Bristol, Plymouth, Barnstable, Dukes and Nantucket counties; and Western Region – consisting of Berkshire, Hampden, Hampshire and Franklin counties.

These gambling venues are projected to provide 15,000 jobs in the Commonwealth and generate hundreds-of-millions of dollars a year for the state. Under the legislation, the state would receive revenue from a 25 percent tax on casino revenues and a 40 percent tax on the slots facility revenues. The collected revenues would be used to fund essential state and local services. This bill will fuel our economy as we continue to emerge from this recession and deliver immediate local aid for cities and towns.

Other session accomplishments include:

• The House also passed legislation to reform guidelines for determining the form, amount and duration of alimony payments. The bill clearly defined four new categories for alimony: "general term alimony," "rehabilitative alimony," "reimbursement alimony" and "transitional alimony." The bill set forth numerous items to be considered by courts determining the form, amount and duration of alimony, i.e. length of marriage, age and health of the parties, income of both of the parties and employment and employability of both parties, and others. As a result of this legislation, certain current alimony payers and recipients are permitted to petition a court for a modification of their current alimony orders under the terms within this bill; and

• Allowing Evergreen legislation that includes language in collective bargaining agreements stating that employer contracts will remain valid beyond the agreement's terms until a new agreement is reached.

Monitoring the town landfill

During the old business portion of their meeting, the Board of Health discussed the town landfill located at 81-91 Cedar Street. The landfill has been in the news lately since the Alternative Energy Committee and the town's Operations Department are working on a Request for Proposals (RFP) to seek a solar power vendor and install a solar voltaic array on the capped landfill.

The problem, according to the Board of Health, is that they are having trouble tracking down certification from the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) indicating that the landfill was, indeed, capped. The board believes the landfill was legally capped in 1996 or 1997. The landfill may have harmful levels of methane; if that is the case, the RFP for solar panels will have to wait.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said, "It opens up the town to liability if we allow health hazards."

The board further discussed who should be responsible for environmental monitoring at the landfill, recalling that former Town Manager Mark Haddad gave the responsibility to the Department of Public Works (DPW) in 1999.

DPW Superintendent Carl Sestito told the board he believes the responsibility lies with them; however, the board feels this would be a conflict of interest, saying they cannot monitor themselves when they also supposed to act as the enforcement agency.

The board plans to seek clarification on this matter from Town Manager Mike Coughlin.

Volume 37
Report No. 50
December 16, 2011

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

A "pairing" process, used only in the Senate, is a procedure that allows an absent senator to express how he or she would have voted on a roll call. Under the arrangement, the absent senator contacts a senator who is present and plans to vote the opposite way. The present senator agrees to "pair" his or her vote with the vote of the absent senator. Neither vote is counted in the official total—they cancel each other out. This process allows both senators to be unofficially recorded on the roll call.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call, in Part 1 of a special two-part report, takes a look at some of the bills that were approved by the Legislature and signed into law by Governor Deval Patrick in 2011.

FREEZE UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE TAX RATES (S 8)

House 151-0, Senate 36-0, approved and Governor Patrick signed into law a bill freezing the unemployment insurance tax paid by employers at the 2010 level through 2011 instead of allowing a scheduled increase to take effect. The payments go into a fund that provides benefits to laid off workers.

The contribution that employers pay into the fund was scheduled to rise dramatically because of the increasing number of laid off workers collecting unemployment benefits.

The average 2010 employer contribution into the fund was $644 per employee. Without this proposed freeze, the 2011 per-employee assessment would have jumped by $233 to $877.

(A "Yes" vote is for the freeze.)

$200 MILLION FOR LOCAL ROAD AND BRIDGE REPAIRS (H 3324)

House 148-0, Senate 39-0, approved and Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill that would borrow $200 million for road and bridge repairs in cities and towns across the state.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $200 million package.)

CHANGES IN TRIAL COURT AND PROBATION DEPARTMENT (H 3395, S 1907)

House 152-0, Senate 39-0 approved and Gov. Patrick signed into law a measure that would overhaul the management of the trial court and the hiring process for the Probation Department. The measure divides up the responsibilities currently held by the Chief Justice for Administration and Management between a newly created "civilian" Office of Court Management and a Chief Justice of the Trial Court. The new civilian administrator would handle business functions including the general administration of the office, review and approval of the hiring of non-judicial employees and all money matters. Meanwhile, the Chief Justice would tackle all the judicial management responsibilities.

Changes in the Probation Department include an entrance exam for the hiring and promotion of all probation and court officers; an extensive interview and background review process; removal of the unilateral hiring power from the Commissioner of Probation; requiring that recommendations offered on behalf of any applicant be made in writing; and requiring applicants for jobs in the executive, legislative and judicial branches to disclose the names of all immediate family members who are state employees. That information would become public if the person gets the job.

These changes are a reaction to the blockbuster report by Independent Counsel Paul Ware on wrongdoing in the state's Probation Department. Ware concluded that corruption in the hiring and promotion process is rampant throughout the system. The report notes legislators would "sponsor" candidates for Probation Department jobs and that the interview and selection process was often rigged in favor of hiring candidates with political or other personal connections instead of better qualified, non-connected applicants.

The votes listed are on earlier versions of the bill. Approval of the final version of the measure was on a voice vote, without a roll call.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ADOPT $30.59 BILLION FISCAL 2012 STATE BUDGET (H 3535)

House 150-2, Senate 33-4, approved and the governor, after making several vetoes, signed into law the conference committee version of a $30.59 billion fiscal 2012 state budget that increases Chapter 70 Education funding by $140 million. The package also makes cuts in hundreds of programs, increases funding for others and uses $185 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund, leaving the fund with a balance of some $584 million at the time of the vote.

The plan also cuts local aid by $65 million but requires that reversions — unspent funds left over at the end of the current fiscal year — be sent to cities and towns to make up for local aid cuts.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $30.59 billion budget. A "No" vote is against it.)

MAJOR CHANGES IN ALIMONY LAW (H 3617)

House 151-0, Senate 36-0, approved and the governor signed into law a bill making sweeping changes in the state's alimony laws, including ending lifetime alimony payments in many cases. Prior law provides only one category of alimony. The bill creates four specific categories, all with durational limits, including general, rehabilitative, reimbursement and transitional.

The duration of payments is based on the number of years the couple is married. For marriages of five years or less, the maximum alimony term would be 50 percent of the number of the months of marriage; 5 to 10 years would be 60 percent; 10 to 15 years would be 70 percent; 15 to 20 years would be 80 percent; and more than 20 years would be up to the judge.

Other provisions end alimony when the paying spouse reaches full retirement age; make it possible to cease payments when an ex-spouse is living with someone else in a marriage-type relationship; and prohibit judges from the current practice of considering the income and assets of the payer's second spouse when calculating how much alimony the payer can afford.

The Senate vote is on approval of the final version of the proposal. The House vote is on an earlier version.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

AUTOMATIC TAX RELIEF IS HERE - The State Department of Revenue confirmed that sufficient economic growth under the terms of a 2002 law will result in a tax cut for millions of Bay State taxpayers beginning in 2012. The cut will come from a reduction in the income tax rate and long term capital gains tax from 5.3 to 5.25 percent effective January 1, 2012

The tax cuts do not need the approval of the Legislature. They are part of a system devised by the Legislature when it approved a $1 billion-plus tax hike package in 2002. The package set the long term capital gains tax at 5.3 percent and froze the income tax rate at its current 5.3 percent instead of allowing it to drop to 5 percent in January 2003 — a reduction that was approved by voters in 2000. The 2002 law also includes an automatic trigger that reduces both taxes by one-half of 1 percent each year that the state's economic growth is at least 2.5 percent until each tax is reduced to five percent. The 2011 growth is 7.2 percent. The tax cuts are estimated to reduce state revenue by between $111 million and $115 million per year.

FLAGS AT HALF MAST (H 1749) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would require the state flag to be flown at half mast annually on September 11 in memory of the thousands who perished on that date. The same bill last year was given initial approval by the House but it remained in a House committee and eventually died.

The average single family home is assessed to be worth $857,800; therefore, the tax bill for the average valued single family home will be $10,276.76, an increase of about $380 a year or $32 per month.

efforts "bode well for the future" in helping Cohasset gain confidence from the DOR. Admitting that "more work needs to be done," Coughlin added that the announcement of new growth is "further evidence that we are on the right track."

Under Prop. 2-1/2, a state law enacted in 1980, new growth allows a community to increase its levy limit annually by an amount based on the increased value of new construction. New growth is calculated by multiplying the increase in the assessed valuation of property by the prior year's tax rate.

The town's tax classification hearing was held over from the Dec. 9 Board of Selectmen meeting to Dec. 13, when the selectmen then voted to adopt a uniform tax rate versus a split one for all property classes.

"Cohasset has always had a uniform tax rate," said Quill.

A split rate between residential and commercial properties would be "bad for the community," Quill said, because the rate would be so much higher for commercial properties that it could discourage businesses from coming into town.

The town's total property value is assessed at $2.4 billion. Only 7.1 percent of this valuation is commercial, industrial and personal, meaning that nearly 93 percent of the tax burden lies with residential property owners.

A Cohasset property valued at $740,000 last year is now worth $755,000. The average tax bill is estimated to be $9,044, an increase from fiscal year 2011 of $470 or 5 percent.

The average single family home is assessed to be worth $857,800; therefore, the tax bill for the average valued single family home will be $10,276.76, an increase of about $380 a year or $32 per month.

These are moderate increases from last year, said Quill. "Cohasset's very stable."

The new tax rate has yet to be certified by the DOR. Quill expects it to be $11.98, up from the Board of Assessor's estimate of $11.92. This is also a jump from fiscal year 2011's amount of $11.59.

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter bills. Homeowners can calculate their monthly property taxes by taking the assessed property value, dividing it by $1,000 and multiplying that by the tax rate.

Mitigating flooding at Treats Pond

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The matter of flooding at Treats Pond came before Selectmen once again Tuesday, Dec. 13. The ongoing problem has been a contentious issue for abutting residents in the past; this time, however, it appeared that the neighbors have formed a united front.

Main Street resident and marine engineer Francis Collins presented his plans for mitigating the flooding at Treats Pond, and the selectmen agreed that he seemed to have a viable solution.

While Collins admitted that he does not live near the pond, and so the problem does not affect him directly, he understands the problem and wants to help.

"I have water in my cellar, but these people get the ocean in their basement, and that's another matter entirely," Collins told the board. The pond "is flooded regularly twice a month," he continued, and the neighbors "either have to find a way to live with it or mitigate it."

Collins suggested increasing the size of the pipe that runs through the pond, running the pipe to the ocean and leaving it open at both ends so that saltwater can flow into the marsh. This would allow for proper, healthy drainage, Collins explained, and would require "zero attention."

"It isn't rocket science — it's fairly simple to do it," Collins said. "We just have to figure out how much it costs, how to fund it, and if federal or state grants are available."

After conversing with engineer Dan Coughlin, Collins said that he is confident that 99 percent of his plan will work. He added that the residents abutting the pond that he has spoken to are all in agreement.

"I have talked to most of the neighbors — they're all onboard with this," said Collins. "All of the people that are immediately affected by this are for it."

Selectmen asked how long this project would take to complete.

"Once the equipment is marshaled, it shouldn't take more than 60 days," Collins said.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr thanked Collins for bringing his solution forward. "It's a great suggestion, and we're looking for a solution," said Carr. "This is a priority for us. We know it will require financial assistance."

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer and Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore both weighed in on the matter, with Gaumer saying he preferred to defer his comments until the first Capital Budget meeting of the year. Pescatore, meanwhile, agreed with Carr that it seemed like a good solution.

Ralph Dormitzer, one of the abutting neighbors, said that he supports Collin's suggestion. "I can speak for most of the people affected, and we all support it," Dormitzer said.

The next step in the process, said Town Manager Mike Coughlin, is having the matter reviewed by the town's Operations Department.

The Treats Pond problem was previously reviewed by the Army Corps of Engineers, but the town "kept running into roadblocks," said selectman Paul Carlson. However, having the neighbors all come onboard is a "game changer."

More to come in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Much to do with holiday greens

JON BELBER

We took clippers and old grain bags and headed into some of the 130-plus acres of woods at Holly Hill Farm to clip and prune some cedar, pine and holly with red berry. We carried back bags full of different evergreens.

'Tis a new winter season. How do organic farmers keep busy? Deck the halls with boughs of holly. Visit a tree farm that feeds only water to their trees, not synthetic fertilizers. Hang garlands on railings and place sprigs in a vase. Cut the tops off evergreen trees whose bottoms are being nibbled by an ever-growing deer population. There are many activities to keep one occupied, especially with the warm late autumn we have had.

Finally though, the weather is a bit nippy, with a dusting of snow, some below freezing temperatures and a hardening ground, so it feels a bit more like winter. The December traditions for many families bring people outside seeking local greens of many varieties for many endeavors. Lots of local garden centers and youth groups offer trees both grown here and afar. Though the act of placing a felled tree inside for a few weeks (in water) is counter to maintaining a happily growing, live tree outside that may provide shelter or nourishment to animals, it is a nice way to use and admire greens. At the end of the holidays, I will take my evergreen tree to the farm where the two goats will chomp away on the needles and branches. Good for them to have a slightly diverse diet.

A couple weeks ago, we hosted a wreath-making workshop at Holly Hill Farm. We gathered grapevine from the field edges and wound it into a circular base. We took clippers and old grain bags and headed into some of the 130-plus acres of woods at Holly Hill Farm to clip and prune some cedar, pine and holly with red berry. We carried back bags full of different evergreens. These cut greens then form the greenery of an outdoor wreath perfect for a door or window sash. Kids, too, can replicate a homemade wreath just by looking about in their yards or finding a community location where it is OK to cut and prune.

All of this trudging, cutting, schlepping and hard work makes one tired and hungry. Where does one find edible greens beyond aisle four of the produce section at the local grocery store? Green lettuces and salad mixes are too fragile for the frost, even if it warms up considerably during the day, unless they are in a protected hoop or green house. I turn to the farm fields and school farm gardens where kale and chard thrive. Even parsley, turnip greens and cilantro are fairly hardy. The kale and chard leaves are thicker and able to survive this fluctuation in temperature. They even become a bit sweeter to taste. Kale goes well in soups and many children at Jenkins School will speak well of the kale chips. One nutritionist also mentioned how good it is for people to eat. I will even try to tuck it into a homemade burrito or slip it under the cheese on a pizza.

Holiday greens come in many shapes and sizes and can serve many purposes. 'Tis a season to still reap what has been sown.

DRA Levels and Library Books —Developmental Reading Levels are based on the Developmental Reading Assessments given to your students by their classroom teacher. Because the library system does not catalog books by the DRA we must rely on web sites such as Scholastic.com. Scholastic Books offers a Teacher Resource page that allows us to search for books by grade level, Lexile, and DRA.

To use this valuable tool log on to http://www.scholastic.com/bookwizard/.

Look for "book wizard Find Just the Right Books". Underneath "book wizard" you will see " Find Books", "Book Alike", and "Grade Level Equivalent".

Click on the drop down arrow in this box and click on DRA and then click on "Advanced Search" (just under the red Search button). First, you can choose an interest level (grade level). Next, at "Reading Level" use the drop down arrows to select a range of DRA levels, then you may select a "Genre" or leave it at "Any". Finally, click "Search". This will generate a list of books at the DRA levels that you have requested. Using this list log on to www.cohassetlibrary.org, select the catalog, and type in the title to see if the book is available through the OCLN library network or to place a hold on the specific title. For further information or a one on one tutorial on DRA reading levels see Mrs. Moody in the Children's Room.

NORWELL/COHASSET GYMNASTICS

All-around effort leads to victory

Top performances in four events earns win

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

It took a complete performance and a team effort through all four events, and in the end, that's exactly what the girls on the Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team delivered. The girls beat Carver, 123.1-120.1, holding on to a slim lead throughout most of the meet before nailing the balance beam to take the win.

"(Co-Head Coach) Nancy (Durkin) and I were hoping the goal of the evening would be a 120," Co-Head Coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said. "And they surpassed it."

On the beam, Cohasset/Norwell only had two falls throughout the routine, and that secured the victory. Kelsey McCunney (7.2), Melinda Dignam (7.3), Christina Tedeschi (7.8), Emma Basso (7.5), Abby Smith (7.5), and senior captain Amber Silvia (7.8) all shined on the beam.

After the first event – the uneven bars – Cohasset/Norwell held a slim, three and a half point lead. The girls started out strong on the bars, getting an 8.0 from Silvia, a 7.85 from Basso, 7.7 from Tedeschi, and 7.45 from McCunney.

Next up came the vault, and Silvia finished first with an 8.0, followed by McCunney (7.7), Dignam (7.6), and Emily Kuhn (7.5). But with Carver's strong showing on

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Skippers downed by Norwell

Cohasset opens with win over Carver

GateHouse News Service

For years, the Cohasset High girls basketball team ruled the South Shore League with an iron fist. There were winning streaks that broke the 30- and 40-game markers. There were three league titles in the last four years. There were two Division 4 state titles – in 2007-08 and 2009-10.

Last year, the grip began to loosen. Norwell broke Cohasset's 33-game winning streak, split the season series between the two teams, and won the league title. Each team made it to the sectional semifinals.

On Tuesday night, the grip loosened a little more.

Junior forward Brenna Diggins played a powerful game inside, and Norwell used the old basketball staples of rebounding, defense and balance en route to a 43-30 SSL victory over the Clippers.

"Any time you play Cohasset, it's special because we have so much respect for them," said Norwell coach Matt Marani, whose club has won its first three games by a cumulative score of 153-85. "It's been back and forth the past two years, but for years

BOYS BASKETBALL

Cohasset drops Carver, beat at Norwell

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys basketball team played an outstanding game on Friday night, beating visiting Carver 61-49.

Kyrel Jaundoo had a big night, knocking down 22 points for the Skippers.

Robbie Mahoney chipped in six points and was monstrous on the boards and Shane Haggerty had a great shooting night, dropping 15 points.

Cohasset also got 12 points from Rocco Laugelle.

Chris Murphy and Christian Davis also scored.

The win improved Cohasset to 2-0, but the Skippers had it tougher against Norwell as they lost a 52-45 decision.

Cohasset is at Hull on Friday night.

BOYS HOCKEY

Cohasset edged by Norwell

The Cohasset boys hockey team had a rough one on Wednesday as Norwell rallied with two goals in the final two minutes to beat the Skippers 7-6 at Milton Academy.

"A good, old-fashioned defensive battle," Norwell coach Jim Casagrande joked. "Back and forth, lots of goals scored. It makes it exciting."

Norwell blew a 4-2 first-period lead, falling behind 6-5 on Alex Evans' goal with 8:58 left in the third period.

Ryan McGovern scored twice for Cohasset, and Vinny Calorio, Tommy O'Brien, Connor Goetz and Evans added goals.

Cohasset dropped to 2-1 with the loss and will be back in action at Old Rochester at 3 p.m. today.

and years, it has been Cohasset."

Cohasset coach John LeVangie said, "I was happy with the way we played. We played hard from start to finish. (Norwell is) awfully good. We did well to hold them in the 40s. They have one of the best teams in EMass."

Norwell's swarming man-to-man defense was stifling. The Clippers gave up just 16 points through the first three periods, and during one stretch in the first half held Cohasset (1-2) scoreless for nearly 10 minutes.

"We hadn't defended well in the first two games, so we worked at cuts and screens, and closing out possessions," said Marani.

The Skippers were led by the non-stop backcourt play of seniors Sage Stebbins and Anna Seraikas.

Seraikas, in particular, played a terrific game. She had a game-high 16 points, but that tells very little. If they gave nickels for her beautiful passes and the countless times she went skittering across the floor trying for possessions, she would be a rich young lady.

Said LeVangie: "It's not just her talent, it's her leadership and hustle as well."

Cohasset hosts Div. 4 State Champion Hull on Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Hull eliminated Cohasset from the MIAA Tournament last season on the way to the title.

The Skippers are 1-1.

Friday night, they beat Carver with a stifling defensive performance led by Seraikas.

Hockey finished at Carver/Sacred Heart

Carver/Sacred Heart hockey cancels rest of season

GateHouse News Service

The Fighting Crusaders gave up the fight Tuesday as the Carver/Sacred Heart boys hockey co-op program canceled the rest of its 2011-12 season due to declining roster numbers.

Carver/Sacred Heart had started 0-2, losing 8-0 to East Bridgewater and 12-1 to Cohasset.

First-year coach John Lauzon said the team was down to "about nine" players, some of whom were "not ready for varsity." Suspensions and injuries had whittled down the roster to a point where it was "physically impossible to carry on the program," Lauzon said.

"It's a sad day," the coach said. "Heartbreaking."

The program had been scrambling right from the start this season. Lauzon did not take the job until Thanksgiving weekend, after Carver/Sacred Heart parted ways with another coach who had just been installed.

"The kids worked so hard," said Lauzon, who was assisted by Jack Tompkins, Adam Lauzon and ex-Hull coach Mike O'Donnell. "It's too bad ... but they're hockey players; they'll carry on."

"We have a lot of young kids coming up," O'Donnell noted. "Hopefully the program can get back on its feet."

Casagrande said he thinks all of Carver/Sacred Heart's South Shore League opponents will receive forfeit wins for the canceled games. Casagrande said it was a "near impossibility" to fill the newly open dates on his schedule.

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

John Zimmer was an added to the Bruins roster in Classics Div. in the South Coastal Hockey League this year and he has been a key addition to the team.

Zimmer of Marshfield led the Bruins and both divisions of the South Coastal Hockey League in scoring during the Fall Season and he was instrumental in his team winning the Classics Div. title.

He scored with 1:53 left in overtime to give the Bruins a 4-3 win over the Canadiens in the Classics Div. championship game. It was the Bruins first title since the Winter of 2007 season.

Zimmer finished with two goals and two assists and Steve Anzuoni had two goals for the Bruins in the game.

Tim McCrystal of Marshfield led the Canadiens with a goal and an assist including the game-tying goal with 2:49 left in regulation. Mike Evans and Mike Martin of Pembroke scored the other goals for the Canadiens.

Bruins goalie Jim Stone and Canadiens netminder Jeff Hollstein both of Pembroke were both outstanding in goal as they each stopped two breakaways in the game.

The Legends Div. title belonged to the Saints for the first time in their history.

Charles Ryan scored in the first period from John Currie and Frank Elwood scored in the second period from Jeff Nelson as the Saints hung on for a 2-1 win over the Sharks in the Legends Div. championship game.

Art Riccio scored in the third period from the Sharks assisted by Richard Petrosino and Richard Bertone both of Marshfield.

However, Marshfield's Justin Stratton stopped 18 shots including some key stops in the third period for the Saints.

LIFE AT CHS

Almost time to say goodbye 2011!

Although the humid, rainy weather is far from the white Christmas we're all dreaming of, I can't wait until Sunday! It really is the most wonderful time of the year.

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

It is FINALLY vacation! I never thought this week would end. Classes went by as slow as molasses, and the amount of tests we had was unbelievable. I honestly don't think I would have been able to survive a full day at school today. That being said, who knew we have Monday the 2nd off? See you on January 3rd, school! It'll be nice to get a break from CHS until 2012. Not to mention how excited I am for the holidays. Although the humid, rainy weather is far from the white Christmas we're all dreaming of, I can't wait until Sunday! It really is the most wonderful time of the year.

The holiday edition of the Spinnaker came out today. All copies were sold in the morning, and there are some great articles in it. If your child came home with a copy, you should definitely check it out and see what kids in the High School are writing about, and to learn about school and worldwide news.

The girls' basketball team crushed Carver last Friday, but lost on Tuesday to a very strong Norwell team. Their next game is tonight against Hull at CHS – stop by at 6:30 to see these rivals face off in their first game since last year's playoffs, in which Cohasset fell just short of winning. It is guaranteed to be a great game! The boys' team faced a similar fate this week, beating Carver and losing to Norwell, both at home. Their game is at Hull tonight, so if you don't go to the girls' game, you should definitely be at Hull High School. The swim team had their first meet this week against Pembroke. The girls' team won; however, the boys' team lost by a small margin. The boys' hockey team had a game on Wednesday and there were wrestling and gymnastics meets this week as well. See the sports section for more information.

On Friday, a group of seniors competed in an Ugly Christmas Sweater Competition and there were some excessively heinous garments. On another irrelevant note, the Blood Drive last Friday was a major success! Thanks to everybody who donated blood, volunteered at the drive, or held someone's hand if they were nervous. I'm sure that nobody used the Drive as a ploy to skip class, right?

Other than the school and sports aspects, not much went on this week at CHS. On a somewhat sad note, this is my last column of 2011 (tear). I hope all of you have an amazing, relaxing vacation filled with family, friends, a lot of food, presents, and holiday cheer. Merry Christmas, Happy Hanukkah, Happy Kwanzaa, Happy whatever-you-celebrate! And of course, a happy, happy New Year. See you all in 2012 (most likely at the gym, where we will all be running off our holiday-food weight)...

Tiggy is a friendly guy

Tiggy is rather large, and whomever is lucky enough to adopt this friendly guy, we suggest a large carrier for transporting him.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Tiggy, an adult gray short hair male.

Tiggy, who has been declawed by a former owner, is quite the gentleman and would be a welcome addition to most any animal-friendly home. Tiggy is rather large, and whomever is lucky enough to adopt this friendly guy, we suggest a large carrier for transporting him.

HSAR hopes to find Tiggy a home for the holidays. If interested please call Polly at 781-925-0073 or Judy at 781-534-4902.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

EXTRA in YOUR NEWSPAPER

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF Jan. 2, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The New Year brings challenges that can change many things in your life. You need to be prepared not only to confront them, but also to deal with what happens afterward.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You have what it takes to set your goals quite a bit higher this year. Learn what you need to know and put what you learn into your efforts. A partner offers loving support.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) In true Gemini Twin fashion, you're conflicted about a decision you know you'll have to make in this New Year. Best advice: Get the facts before you make any commitment.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A friend offers you an exciting opportunity for the New Year. Although your positive aspects are strong in most respects, caution is advised. Investigate before you invest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You can make this New Year a roaring success. Start by readjusting your goals to reflect the changes in the economy. Your denmate offers both wise and loving support.

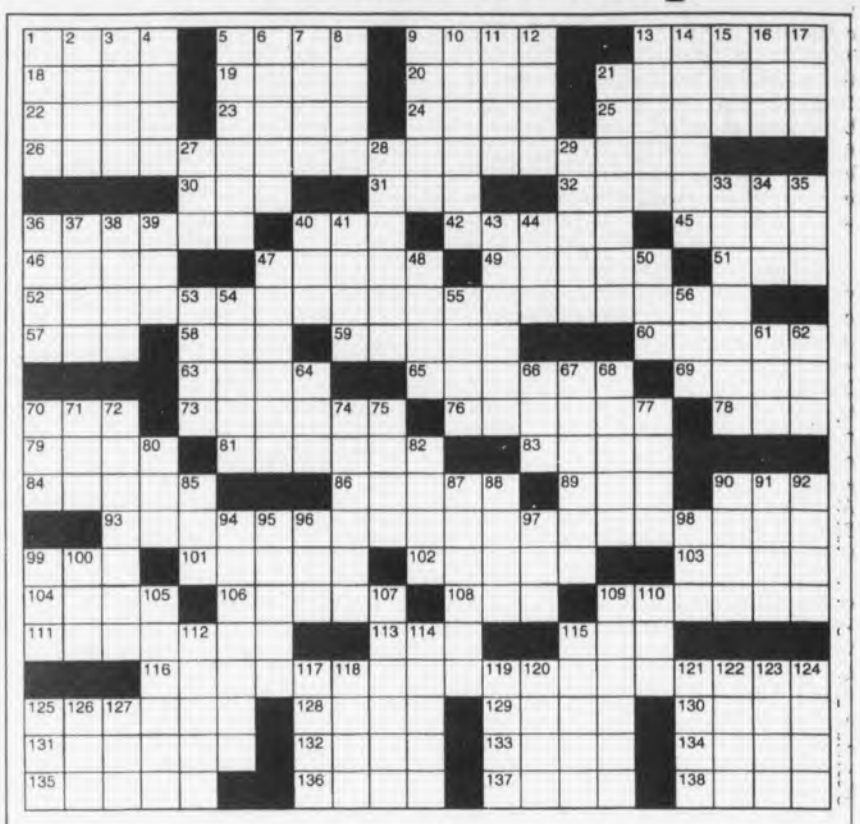
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The New Year brings new opportunities for change. But you need to be ready to move from the comfortable status quo to the challenging unknown. It's up to you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your most important New Year's resolution should be to work out problems with a family member in order to avoid continued misunderstandings. Do it soon, for both of your sakes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The New Year has much to offer the intensely determined Scorpian, who isn't afraid to take on challenges and stay with them until they surrender their rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'll have many fine opportunities in this New Year. But be warned: Reject offers of "help." You work best when you're free to be your own creative self.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The New Year offers changes that you might feel you're not quite ready for. Best advice: Deal with them one step at a time, until you've built up your self-confidence.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel is a dominant aspect of the New Year. This could mean relocating to another city (or even another country) in connection with your education or your career.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This New Year brings news about a change you've been anticipating. You might have a problem persuading a loved one about your new plans, but he or she will soon go along with them.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making people feel safe and protected. You would make an excellent youth counselor.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Real estate activity in Norfolk County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the first quarter of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 2011. The first quarter was marked by an upswing in sales activity with little mobility seen in terms of average sale prices.

First quarter sales volume reached 1.3 billion this year, a promising 13 percent increase from 2010's first quarter. Integral to this increase is the number of land transfers that took place in Norfolk County from July through the end of September. During this timeframe 3,762 deeds were recorded, an 8 percent increase from last year. There were 2,332 deeds recorded that reflected greater than nominal consideration. This total translates to a 16 percent increase from last year's total. Despite these positive signs of real estate activity the average sale price of deeds over $1,000, both residential and commercial properties, peaked at $564,445, not quite level with last year's average of $582,055.

Mortgage activity for the first quarter revealed signs of slowing down from last year's flurry, which was precipitated by historically low interest rates. There were 8,272 new Norfolk County mortgages during this year's first quarter, down 23 percent from last year's figures. Total mortgage value stood at $3.3 million compared to 2010's $4 million. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

Pertaining to existing Norfolk County mortgages, the first quarter saw a 23 percent decrease from last year in the number of homes lost to foreclosure. During this same timeframe in Norfolk County the foreclosure process was commenced with the recording of 255 Notice to Foreclose Mortgages. While the Associated Press recently reported a spike nationally in foreclosure notices, Norfolk County's numbers have remained relatively constant through three quarters. Although not affording redress against mortgage contracts, Declarations of Homestead are effective in protecting the equity in one's home from certain other types of claims and actions. During this year's first fiscal quarter Norfolk County residents took advantage of the state's new Homestead Law and recorded 3,121 Declarations of Homestead, 30 percent more than last year.

Newsmakers and shakers

Who and what made the biggest waves this year?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

• Erik the K-9

One of Mike Coughlin's first acts as Town Manager was to approve Police Chief Mark DeLuca's request for a K-9 unit. Despite the controversy over the decision – from selectmen and Capital Budget members questioning the cost and usefulness of the unit – the public quickly rallied around Erik, the German shepherd from Slovakia.

• Conservation Commission

The ConCom was in the news more than usual this year, according to its chair, attorney David Farrag. Between trouble with Cat Dam, Cook Estates and Avalon Bay, the commission tasked with upholding the town's conservation bylaws navigated a tricky year. Three longstanding commissioners were also unseated unexpectedly over the summer, leading to new members and associate members. Despite the shakeup, the commission has been working together to uphold the bylaws, take big developers to task for violating these bylaws, and lower stormwater fees to help out the Cohasset homeowner.

• Water Commission

Cohasset's current board of Water Commissioners inherited some major past problems, including a significant deficit that has been the subject of many a heated Town Hall meeting. The deficit from the last fiscal year was wiped out during fall's Special Town Meeting; now, the department is seeking to change their current water company contract in hopes of improving operations, billing, and saving the ratepayer money in the coming year.

• New police and fire deputy and assistant chiefs

After some debate between the public safety team, town manager, selectmen and Capital Budget Committee, two new positions were added to the police and fire departments. Promoting Police Officer William Quigley from Lieutenant to Deputy Chief and Fire Lieutenant and Paramedic John Dockray to Assistant Fire Chief will save both departments on overtime, according to officials.

• Steve Bowen, astronaut from Cohasset

Cohasset's own astronaut Steve Bowen has seen the world in a way most of us never will. The Mariner has enjoyed talking with Bowen and chronicling his adventures in space.

• Barbara Cataldo, new Superintendent of Schools

Cohasset's new Superintendent began her tenure in the summer, bringing a love for children, literature and technology to the position. Cataldo has been a proponent of new technologies in the schools, overseeing the implementation of wi-fi and the addition of iPads to many classrooms.

• Finance director

From interim Eric Kinsherf to John Stanbrook, back to Eric Kinsherf and finally just-hired Mary Gallagher, Cohasset has gone through many finance directors this year alone. This has not done much to help the financial crisis in Town Hall, but here's hoping that the newly hired Gallagher, who spent 20 years as Town Accountant and Scituate, will help steer Cohasset toward a more stable 2012.

• Mike Coughlin, new Town Manager

If anyone in town deserves the title of newsmaker and shaker, Mike Coughlin is it. He came to town to make major changes, and in the past five months since he took the helm as Town Manger, Coughlin has done just that. One thing that Coughlin has made plain during many a late night board meeting: the former JAG lawyer is not afraid to stick to his guns. The Town Manager has said it himself, many times: "You have to have a thick skin to be in this business." While Coughlin has shown his soft side by commending various department heads for a job well done, giving the finance department turkeys for Thanksgiving, and throwing a town-wide Christmas party at the local Irish pub, he has also shown that he fully believes in the strong Town Manager Act and will make his decisions unflinchingly, like it or not.

Thank you to all of our newsmakers and shakers in 2011.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pick-up location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Cohasset cupcake confiscated by TSA

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It seems that a Wicked Good cupcake was too wicked for the TSA.

A cupcake from Cohasset's own Wicked Good Cupcakes was labeled a security threat and confiscated by a TSA agent at the Las Vegas International Airport last week. Apparently the frosting was too "gel-like" to clear security.

Rebecca Hains of Peabody, who teaches communications at Salem State College, said she had received two cupcakes "to go," packaged in 8-oz. mason jars, as a gift. Hains said that she and her cupcakes cleared security at Logan International Airport; the TSA agent there told her the desserts "looked delicious" and let her take them onboard. Hains enjoyed one cupcake on the way to Las Vegas and planned to have the second one on the flight home to Boston.

The TSA spoiled her plans by taking the cupcake into custody.

Hains told News Center 5 that the incident seems to have little to do with public safety.

"It's not really about safety; it's about making people follow rules that really, I think, to the average traveler seem arbitrary and are encroaching on our civil liberties," Hains said in her interview.

TSA spokesperson James Fotenos issued a statement saying that passengers are, in fact, allowed to take cupcakes and baked goods through the security checkpoint and that the TSA would review the matter further.

Wicked Good Cupcakes opened in Cohasset this past October. Manager Brian Vilagie was amused by the airport incident.

"It's a wild story, the fact that they thought our frosting could be explosive," Vilagie told the Mariner in a phone interview. "It's tasty and delicious, but not flammable. If anything, heat makes it melt!"

Wicked Good Cupcakes presented Hains with a dozen cupcakes "to go" on Fox and Friends Tuesday morning.

Vilagie reported that the bakery has since changed the name of their "National Velvet" cupcake to "National Security Velvet."

"The red velvet cupcake was the jar that caused the stir in the first place," Vilagie said.

Some information from The Patriot Ledger and TheBostonChannel.com was used in this report.

Business booming after airport incident

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

They say no press is bad press, and the old adage certainly seems to be true for Wicked Good Cupcakes in Cohasset. Following the TSA's confiscation of a Wicked Good "National Velvet" cupcake "to go," business has been booming at the local bakery.

Orders have flooded in from all over the country, according to manager Brian Vilagie.

"The progression has been absolutely insane," Vilagie said in a phone interview. The bakery, which opened in October, has done ten times more business in the past three days than they have over the past three months, the manager said.

"We can track all of our internet traffic, and we have hit 49 of the 50 states, including Alaska and Hawaii," Vilagie continued, noting that South Dakota is the only state the website has not received a hit from, whereas Virginia is the state submitting the most orders.

"We're getting a lot of love from Virginia," said Vilagie.

Prior to this weekend, "our online shop view was pretty much [limited to] Massachusetts and New England. It's gone huge, and it's very exciting."

The 8-oz. mason jar cupcakes "to go" that caused all the fuss at the Las Vegas International Airport will be available to buy in-store in Cohasset starting this weekend, Vilagie said. The bakery's manager explained that the idea for cupcakes "to go" came about as a way to ship the treats and have them remain intact without having to freeze them, which compromises the baked good's taste and texture.

"The frosting doesn't like the cold," Vilagie said.

The mason jar became the answer to the shipping problem.

"You can pack them nice and tight, they look cool, you can eat it with a spoon, put the cap back on it and put it in the fridge," said Vilagie, adding that this extends the cupcake's shelf life by seven to nine days.

The bakery's owner and founder Tracy Noonan told the Mariner in September that she was excited to "take the plunge" and open up shop in Cohasset.

"We're very blessed and fortunate that the work we've had has kept us busy," Noonan said.

When asked about the now famous cupcake incident, Noonan showed that she has a sense of humor.

"We changed the name of our red velvet cupcake," the owner/baker said of the cupcake that started the fuss in Las Vegas. "I had originally named it 'National Velvet' after the old Elizabeth Taylor movie. My girls loved that movie and would watch it over and over. We unanimously decided to change the name to National (Security) Velvet," Noonan wrote to the Mariner in an email. "We've simply been having a lot of fun with the whole thing."

POLICE BEAT

Threats after Internet sale

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 43-year-old Cohasset man who sold a laptop for $150 over the Internet to a 38-year-old Methuen man contacted police after the Methuen man allegedly made threats to him, police said. Apparently the Methuen man, who wanted his money back, made threats after the Cohasset man told him that the sale was final. Police talked to the Methuen man who explained he had lost his temper. Police said the Methuen man had no criminal record.

Elderly driver

Police responded to a call at 5:23 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 24) about a brown Lexus being operated erratically along South Main Street. An officer caught up with the car and also observed its erratic operation. The operator also did not immediately stop for the officer. After the Lexus pulled over, police noted that the driver, an 86-year-old Scituate man, appeared very confused and did not know where he was.

The man was driven to Scituate where a family member picked him up, police said. His car was parked until a family member could retrieve it.

Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation to see if the man should be driving.

Sunset

Police checked out a 21-year-old Hingham man with a beard and moustache and camera around his neck on Monday (Dec. 19). They were concerned because the man was sitting on a wall on Sohier Street near the Deer Hill School at around 3:30 p.m. As it turned out, the man is an art student and he was observing the way the sun was setting.

Revoked plates

Police had a 2003 Saturn that was being operated by a 31-year-old Cohasset woman towed a last Thursday (Dec. 22) after a random computer check by an officer monitoring traffic revealed the car's plates had been revoked due to non-payment of insurance. The driver was issued a citation for operating an unregistered, uninsured motor vehicle.

Chickens loose

A concerned caller reported to police on Friday (Dec. 23) that there were chickens at the Beechwood Ball Park. Police notified the animal control officer but said the chickens left of their own accord.

Fell asleep

Police said a 19-year-old Cohasset woman fell asleep at the wheel damaging the 2006 Honda Odyssey van that she was driving on Saturday (Dec. 24) at 1:45 a.m. An officer on patrol spotted Honda vehicle parts all over the road near Sandy Beach and then located the disabled van on the side of the road. The vehicle was towed and the woman was not injured, police said.

Window smashed

A 42-year-old Cohasset resident reported that the window of her 2010 Jeep Grand Cherokee was smashed sometime overnight Dec. 23 to Dec. 24. Police said a rock consistent with the damage was located in the cargo area of the Jeep. Police are talking to neighbors and making extra patrols.

When Will You Commit... to Change?
By Elizabeth Johnson
You will blink, and before you know it – it will be 2012. What do you want for yourself before January 1st arrives?
Take a look at the calendar. The 3 months between October 1st and January 1st are the same amount of time as January 1st to April 1st. For some reason, however, we use "school starting up again", "loose-fitting wintry clothes" and "the holidays" to avoid committing to a rock-solid health and fitness plan before January 1st.
Jumpstart your program now! Imagine how your routines, body composition, habits and thoughts around fitness and nutrition could be different. Take a minute to visualize yourself, the clothes you would wear, the way you would carry yourself, and what you would say when complimented!... if you could commit to change right now.
While individual personal training may cost as much as $60 to $80, or more an hour elsewhere, Get In Shape For Women offers small-group sessions that are affordable for as little as $19 a session. Women train under the supervision of a personal trainer who has an understanding of what women want and what they need. Another Year Flies By... Will it be different this time? Will you be like Stacey?

Member Stacey Dodge remembers January 2010, "I sat disgusted with myself for allowing another year to go by without reaching my weight loss goal. I saw the Get In Shape For Women ads and decided to check out the studio in my town. After my first trial session I decided to join and started the following Monday. I arrived at my appointment time and hated what I saw in the wall of mirrors. The sight made me determined to change my life."
After a year and a half of being a member, Stacey has seen incredible results. "As of today, I have lost 30 pounds and have gone from a tight size 12 to a very comfortable size 8. I am in the best shape of my entire life. I have never been stronger. I will be continuing with my membership, as this is a feeling I never want to be without."

2011 Year in Review

Stories that made headlines in 2011

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

As we look back on 2011 in Cohasset, it's time to reflect on the news stories that grabbed headlines this year.

Cohasset residents weathered winter storms, a small earthquake, and a Tropical Storm that wound up leaving many folks without power for over a week.

We saw shake-ups in town government, including the appointment of a new Town Manager, the departure of our newest Finance Director, and the appointment of a new Finance Director before the close of the year.

We heard talks of deficits and surpluses and a lack of free cash. We landed a new Superintendent of Schools who has brought technological know-how to her position, leading to wi-fi and iPads in the schools. We also saw Cohasset join neighboring towns, including Hingham, Hull and Norwell, in regionalizing our emergency dispatch center.

We've been here through it all, chronicling the major events and changes in and around town. Take a look back on 2011:

Jan. 21: Cohasset astronaut Steve Bowen to head back to space

Cohasset's own hometown astronaut Steve Bowen was selected by NASA to be a mission specialist on STS-133, the next space shuttle mission targeted for launch on Feb. 24.

This will be Bowen's third trip to space and he will add to his already impressive total of five spacewalks. He is also a highly decorated nuclear powered submarine Captain in the U.S. Navy. Bowen is a member of the Cohasset High Class of 1982.

Mar. 3: New Superintendent of schools chosen

The Cohasset School District has a new superintendent: Ms. Barbara Cataldo, the current assistant superintendent in Milford, Mass.

Her selection was unanimous. Members of the school committee praised Cataldo's interpersonal skills, background in special education, collaborative approach and technological savvy.

"I think she (will) be a breathe of fresh air in this district," said school committee member Jeanne Astino.

ELECTION DAY

Mar. 11: Cohasset astronaut Steve Bowen lands safely

Bowen launched Feb. 24 on STS-133, his surprise space shuttle flight to the International Space Station (ISS). The Cohasset native replaced injured astronaut Tim Kopra for two spacewalks, making Bowen the first American astronaut to fly on back-to-back missions. The final flight of space shuttle Discovery concluded Wednesday when Bowen and his five crewmates landed at NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Mar. 11: Citizen of the year: Outpouring of love for Ed Lappen

There is little doubt that Ed Lappen would enjoy being Cohasset's Citizen of the Year.

His wife, Helene Lieb, said Ed loved bringing people together and always appreciated the importance of family. The couple has two children, Ross and Mia Lieb-Lappen.

"He would be looking down, smiling," Lieb said about her late husband. Lappen, known affectionately as "Eddie" by those close to him, lost his life in December in a tragic accident.

Lappen has been selected as the 18th annual Cohasset Citizen of the Year by an unprecedented outpouring of heartfelt letters and emails to the Cohasset Mariner for this year's award. A special reception honoring Lappen will be held at Atlantica in May.

Apr. 8: Regional dispatch on horizon: Call center to open this summer

It looks like change is coming to the public safety dispatch center.

The targeted opening of the regional emergency communications center (RECC) in Hingham is August.

The build-out of the center, which is to be housed in Hingham Town Hall, is about 98 percent complete, according to Cohasset Fire Chief Bob Silvia. However, the technology that comes with the call center is still being gathered and finalized.

May 2: Town Meeting: Septic assistance program approved

In spite of controversy in the weeks leading up to Town Meeting on a septic assistance program, voters overwhelmingly supported it.

The approval vote from Town Meeting authorized the town to borrow up to $3 million from the state program at a zero percent interest rate. The money will be then lent out at a 2 percent interest rate to homeowners with failing septic systems or those tying into town sewer.

A total of 184 voters checked into Town Meeting on Saturday (April 30) and weighed in on 22 articles.

May 7: Kennedy and Koed win selectmen elections

The Cohasset Town Election results are in. It is Kennedy and Koed. Diane Kennedy with 1062 votes and Fred Koed with 813 votes each won seats on the Board of Selectmen. Koed won re-election.

May 31: NASA astronaut Steve Bowen hails hometown heroes

NASA astronaut Stephen Bowen didn't focus on the millions of miles he has traveled through space during the town's Memorial Day observance Monday.

Instead, he talked about the lessons he learned marching a much shorter distance in Memorial Day parades while growing up in town. Bowen said this was his first parade in 29 years.

Jul. 15: Shake up on the ConCom

A typically routine item on the Board of Selectmen's annual list of reappointing various committees ended up being not-so-routine for one town committee.

On Tuesday night, in an unusual move, selectmen unseated three current Conservation Commission members in favor of three newcomers.

Although willing to serve another three-year term, Conservation Commission members Debbie Cook, Sarah Charron and Dick Karoff were not reappointed to the board. Instead, Alexander Koines of Atlantic Avenue, Jim Marten of Nichols Road and James Gilman of Rust Way were appointed as full members of the committee.

Jul. 29: Decision made on Cat Dam

Call it the calm after the storm.

In what could best be described as "anti-climatic," the Conservation Commission voted 4-0 on Monday to approve the NOI (Notice of Intent) for the operation of Cat Dam, supported by the Environmental-20, a powerful group of abutters to inner Little Harbor who believed their quality of life and property values were at stake. A NOI is a presentation of information to the Conservation Commission.

At the crux of the issue was how often to flush inner Little Harbor to maintain water levels, improve or maintain water quality and prevent the noxious odors that result when inner Little Harbor becomes a mudflat. Cat Dam is a tide gate mechanism with three gates that has been used to control the water flow for more than 100 years.

Aug. 12: Conservation Commission decision on Cat Dam appealed Cat Dam is back in the news.

The Conservation Commission's decision to approve the Notice of Intent that set up a new flushing schedule for inner Little Harbor has been appealed to the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Former selectman Karen Quigley of 27 Clayspring Road, and about 21other residents signed the appeal asking the DEP for a superseding order of conditions for the operation and maintenance of Cat Dam.

The DEP has accepted the appeal and a site visit is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 1 at 2pm.

Aug. 12: Citizens sign petition to reinstate Conservation Commission members

The Cohasset Mariner was provided a copy of the citizens petition to reinstate the unseated ConCom members, signed by 120 residents and sent to the Board of Selectmen on Aug. 7, 2011.

Aug. 19: Petitioners told to come back another day

The hot-button issue at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting wasn't on the agenda.

Last week, a nine-page-long petition was emailed to the Board containing the signatures of 120 residents protesting the Selectmen's controversial decision to unseat three members of the Conservation Commission and appoint three new members in their stead. Twenty of these signers came to the Town Hall meeting room to showcase their disapproval.

Former Selectman and conservation commissioner, Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street, appeared on behalf of the petitioners to ask the Board to rescind the new appointments and apologize to the ousted commissioners.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr emailed the petitioners on Monday to let them know that the Board had a full agenda for Tuesday night and would have to table the petition discussion to the public comment period.

Aug. 19: Mike Coughlin makes Cohasset his home

Michael Coughlin has had a busy two weeks.

Monday, Aug. 1 marked Coughlin's first day as Cohasset's new town manager. On Wednesday, Aug. 10, he was given a welcome reception at Atlantica, hosted by the town employees. The following day, Coughlin moved into town — he and his wife, Bernadette, are among the first to move into the brand new Avalon apartments.

For Coughlin, coming to Cohasset is the fulfillment of a lifelong dream.

Growing up in an Irish household in Peabody, "It was often repeated around the house that if you ended up on the 'Irish Riviera,' you've made something of yourself," Coughlin said of the South Shore.

Aug. 26: Cohasset police K-9 to come onboard

This week, the Cohasset Police Department hopes to welcome a new member to the force — a four-legged one who barks.

OUR VIEW

The Old Man and the Kid

The Old Man saw a beautiful baby being born, held by loving parents, and thought, "There's no telling how this child's life will unfold, but there is our future."

He saw a child, who he was sure had been a beautiful baby once, crying not out of anger, but of hunger and despair — innocent of all except for one thing, having been born to poor people in a poor place.

"There is our future ... I hope it doesn't slip away," he thought.

The Old Man watched young people graduate from high school and college. They were full of life and excitement for the journey ahead. Of course, no one, not even the Old Man, knew what life had in store, especially in this economy — he struggled to find good economic times as he looked at the log books of previous years — but their confidence was infectious.

He saw young people struggling to make a life for themselves. He didn't know if their education didn't work out, or if they had the bad luck to be looking for work in a lousy economy. Although he tried to remain hopeful — one thing the Old Man had wanted to do since he was a Kid was be optimistic — their desperation made him sad.

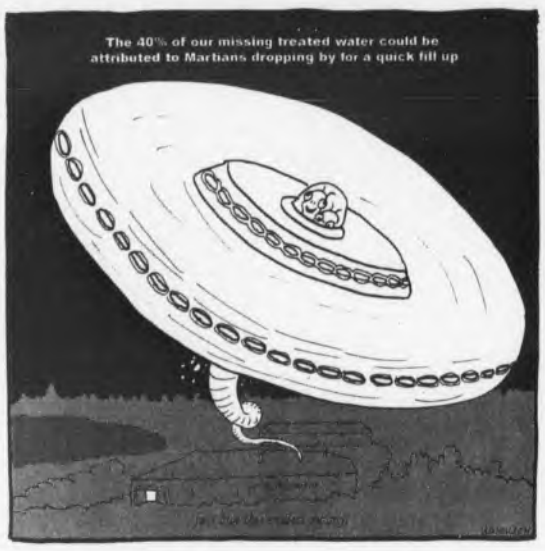
The Old Man saw revelers at a retirement party, a fitting send-off for a long career. The retiree was pleased with a race well run, and looked forward to hard-earned leisure time with friends and family, especially those adorable grandchildren.

He saw the looks on the faces of people who had just been laid off after years on the job. They hadn't done anything wrong other than be in the wrong place at the wrong time. He saw their shock and their sadness, but mostly their fear — fear that they wouldn't be able to take care of themselves and their families.

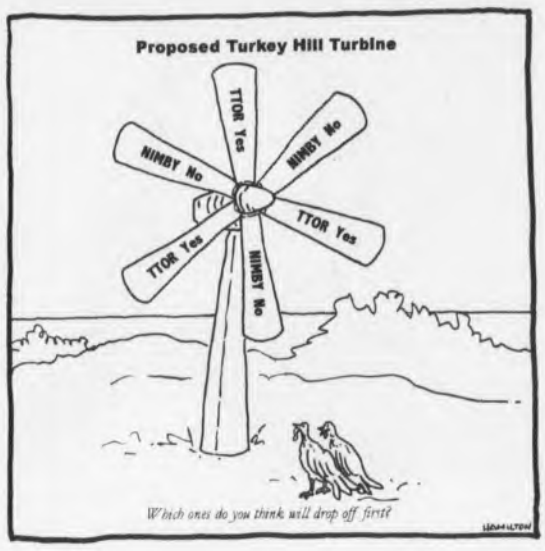
The Old Man saw a family gathered around a bedside. Their loved one was dying, and while it was sad, it was a peaceful, painless sendoff, and they were able to share memories of better days.

He saw a person in the street, cut down by a bullet. He didn't know exactly what happened — was it over drugs, a debt of some kind, completely random? — but it was sudden and unexpected.

"What will this person's loved ones do when they find out?" he thought.



As his departure time approached, the Old Man sat down to write his last log entry for the Kid to read when he got there — which should be any time now.



"Over the next 366 days — lucky you, you get an extra one! — you will see the fullness of human experience: good, bad and all that is in between. I can't tell you exactly what will happen — read about Mubarak and Gaddafi and you'll see what I mean — but it will excite you, inspire you, amuse you, humble you, sadden you, anger you and terrify you.

"Even as you start, you are approaching the end, so don't waste a moment. Hopefully, when you are an Old Man like me, you can write your final entry with the satisfaction you left things better for the Kid than how you found them.

"Good luck."

HEALTH NOTES

The high cost of medical care

STEVE BOBO

It is estimated that by 2030 there will be 70 million older persons living in this country as the "baby boom" generation reaches age 65; more than twice the number of elderly as in 2000.

New Resolutions — We're at the threshold of a year of both promise and uncertainty. Leadership of the country is in need of electoral decisions using good judgment and insight, and the nation desperately needs to solve the problem of productivity and re-creation of a source of jobs to build new useful articles and systems which the world wants and needsto go forward. Especially, we need to rein in medical costs.

Medical Care — According to the US Department of Health and Human Services: It is estimated that by 2030 there will be 70 million older persons living in this country as the "baby boom" generation reaches age 65; more than twice the number of elderly as in 2000. Today, nearly 10 million elderly live alone, most with at least one chronic illness. It is believed that among those 65-74 years of age, nearly 30 percent suffer from chronic disease including arthritis, diabetes, cancer, stroke, hypertension, heart disease, obesity, Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, emphysema, macular degeneration, and others. By the time someone reaches age 75, he has a greater than 50 percent chance of being afflicted by some type of disability. In Cohasset, the number of elderly above 70 has reached about 900.

Caregivers themselves are over the age of 65 and dedicate an average of 20 hours per week to provide care for an older person; even greater when the older person has increased physical needs. This work is physically demanding, particularly for older caregivers, who make up half of all caregivers. Because this is such an emotionally draining experience, caregivers experience depression at three times the rate of others in their own age group. They are more likely to become physically ill and are at risk themselves for multiple diseases and disabilities.

Cost of Illnesses and treatment thereof vs. age of patient — prevalence of disease are reasons for great disparity of treatment and medications. While medicines play a relatively small role in rising health care spending overall, insurance coverage and prescription drug benefit under Medicare Part D is helping many of those previously uninsured or lacking insurance. As a result of Medicare, more than 90 percent of all beneficiaries now have prescription drug coverage. Consequently spending has fallen significantly.

Other Programs provide free or nearly free medicines to patients. New drugs often reduce overall health costs. For diseases such as ulcers, a few pills have replaced major surgery. New drugs also shorten hospitalizations and prevent the costly complications of chronic diseases such as diabetes and high blood pressure." Improving operating margins requires more than cost reduction." As the United States moves to pay-for-performance health care, reimbursements will decline for the majority of health care providers. Given that hospitals are already surviving on a razor-thin margin (on average 2 percent), dealing with a still down economy and increasing demands, reducing costs is at the top of most organizations' priority list.

Industry perspective — According to the Veterans Housing Administration, many organizations need to target cost savings in the range of 15 to 30 percent over the next five years. "Nearly every hospital is going to have to shave tens of millions of dollars from their operating costs in 2011, and some of the nation's largest health care systems are asking VHA to help them save $25 million, or $50 million and even $100 million each in 2011. Price discounts on supplies alone won't allow hospitals to achieve the savings they need. Hospitals need a more strategic approach to cost redmediation."

Now is the time to investigate your costs of Medicare before the New Year's flood of proposals for change.

The need for 'mission readiness'

MIKE COUGHLIN

We owe to all who serve us to give them the tools to get the job done.

As many in Cohasset are aware, my family and I are staying in Hawaii for the holidays. Amongst the first sites we visited was Pearl Harbor whose solemn waters remind us all of the high price we pay for not being prepared. Yet twice this month, citizens of Massachusetts did not have to travel thousands of miles to be reminded of the high price that is paid by our first responders.

Two weeks ago, Chief Silvia, members of the Cohasset Fire Department and I attended the funeral for Worcester Firefighter Jon Davies. For me it was a personal pilgrimage. In an earlier life, I had been an Assistant District Attorney for Worcester County, a resident of the city and had even prosecuted arson cases for the department. In the aftermath of the December 1999 fire, which claimed six Worcester firefighters, I saw first hand as Southbridge Town Manager the issues when departments are not properly staffed nor have the appropriate command staff. Prompted by those lessons, I made it my mission that each town I managed had the proper command staff. In Cohasset — this became a reality with the recent appointment of the first Assistant Chief of the Cohasset Fire Department.

We were reminded again last Friday when I learned of the passing of Peabody Firefighter Jim Rice. For me, the death is made even more personal by the fact that my very first job while in high school was as a janitor for the Peabody Fire Department and my very first job in municipal management was as an Assistant to Peabody Mayor Nicholas Mavroules. As a janitor, cleaning toilets, mopping shower stalls, painting hydrants and cleaning the firehouse kitchen, I was branded by the team concept — namely firefighters work together, eat together, live together and if necessary die together. Further, it was as an assistant to the mayor in Peabody that I learned of the importance of providing our public safety personnel with the equipment they need. It is not an easy fight in these times of fiscal austerity where some mistake "mission creep" with the need for "mission readiness."

It is a sad irony that days after the death of firefighter Davies, the Worcester Fire Department received the donation of a thermal imaging camera. A nice gesture but such preparedness is needed before a tragedy. This should not be missed in Cohasset. Just recently, the Special Town Meeting in December approved Chief Silvia's request for that same piece of equipment — but not without a lot of discussion and debate. Similarly some in Cohasset have questioned the importance of our newly created K-9 unit and our stated intention to introduce a realistic public safety vehicle maintenance program for Police, Fire and Public Works.

Events in Worcester and Peabody will be marked by parades and tributes — like those I saw honoring those who went down on the Arizona when Pearl Harbor was attacked. This is only fitting that we honor our heroes but it should mobilize in all of us the need to fully recognize that public safety is a life and death business. We owe to all who serve us to give them the tools to get the job done. While I will be unable to attend the Peabody funeral — Chiefs Silvia and Deluca will attend in my place — my heart will not be in Hawaii but in Peabody. But rest assured when I return that my FY 13 budget submission will recognize the cold hard reality of those who risk their lives for the citizens of Cohasset on a daily basis.

Mike Coughlin is Cohasset Town Manager.

COVERING COHASSET

My year, so far

ERIN DALE

It's been nearly six months since I became the new reporter for the Cohasset Mariner. And what an exciting and educational half-a-year it has been.

Although I've lived on the South Shore for seven years now (I hail from New York) and spent some time covering town news for the Duxbury Clipper, I was entirely new to Cohasset. My in-town experience was limited to merely passing through on 3A en route to Hull, with the occasional stop at Starbucks along the way.

When I first drove into Cohasset Village, shortly after I was hired at the Mariner, I was taken with the quaint downtown and coastal views. Again, I'm from New York. I grew up in the Hudson River Valley, hiking the Catskills, riding over the same hills Washington Irving rhapsodized about, with Manhattan practically in my backyard. But driving through Cohasset, I felt a shiver down my spine. I was looking at a little piece of heaven, and kept thinking, Wow. I get to work here!

During my first week, I hit the ground running. I interviewed the new town manager, Mike Coughlin, who started his position two days after me; I attended my first board meeting with the Conservation Commission; and, a few days later, covered my first Board of Selectmen's meeting, which kicked off with a public commentary on Cat Dam. Already, I was in the thick of things.

My editor, Mary Ford, says I dropped into Cohasset at an interesting time, and she wasn't kidding. Over the past few months, I've covered a DEP site visit to Cat Dam, seen one finance director quit and a new one start, sat through selectmen meetings that lasted till nearly midnight, witnessed heated arguments over the financial crisis in Town Hall, covered world yoga champions performing at the Middle School, and rode along with police officers as they worked with the DPW, fire department and town manager to assist folks after the power outages of Tropical Storm Irene. In the thick of it, indeed!

They say that starting a new job requires a three-month learning curve. I like to think that I dove right in, without taking too much time to contemplate getting my feet wet. That's the best way to get the job done, right? But there have certainly been times, especially following late-night meetings with a morning deadline looming ahead, that I have agonized over my writing, worried how a story is going to be perceived. We reporters are taught to seek the truth, report it, and to minimize harm — and that's something I strive to do both on the job and off. While I've tackled my share of tough stories since taking this job, I have tried to portray people and events as accurately and factually as possible. And you readers have been helpful to point out any missteps, as kindly as possible, understanding that in the wee hours, mistakes, misprints and typos happen. Cohasset is full of intelligent, eloquent and highly opinionated people, many of whom are great writers themselves. Coming into an environment where people care so much about their town and their news has been both intimidating and inspiring.

And because you care so much, know that I care. I moved to Hingham to be closer to Cohasset (and our downtown Hingham office!). I hang out in Cohasset when I'm not working, and then I take my work home with me, Smartphone constantly in hand (edale@wickedlocal.com!). I update our Facebook and Twitter feeds from meetings. When we're lucky enough to have breaking news, I'm excited to charge onto the scene, recorder, notebook and camera in hand. I often awake in the middle of the night dreaming up the perfect lede. And each week, when the paper comes out, I feel a giddiness that can be replicated by little else. I love this town, I love its news, and love even more that I get to be the one covering it.

Thank you, readers, business owners, town employees and officials alike for making my first six months in Cohasset truly memorable. It hasn't always been easy or pleasant, and it won't always be, but there's one thing I can say with utmost certainty: In Cohasset, I know I'll never get bored.

Thanks for taking this journey with me. I hope you'll stick around for more in the New Year.

2011 YEAR IN REVIEW

A look back at the headlines

GREGORY MATHIS

What will you remember most about 2011? Send an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com

With the New Year approaching, many magazines, television stations and, yes, newspapers, are making their lists and checking them twice as they piece together a retrospective of 2011.

A look back on the year will certainly include remembering the 10th anniversary of 9/11, terrorist ringleader Osama bin Laden being killed and the declaration that the war in Iraq is coming to a close.

Weather made its way into the headlines in a big way in 2011. The earthquake and tsunami that devastated Japan also shook the rest of the world. Death, destruction and fallout from a nuclear power plant being compromised made this a compelling human story that many rallied around. Weather also made a big splash in these parts in 2011, with tornadoes sweeping through the western part of Massachusetts, major snowstorms with prolonged power outages and Tropical Storm Irene, which also caused significant damage and forced many to be without electricity for ridiculous amounts of time. Some even felt a little shake from an earthquake that rippled up the east coast from the Mid-Atlantic States.

For Boston sports fans, the year will also be remembered for its highs and lows, from the Boston Bruins returning to the top of the National Hockey League with a Stanley Cup championship to the epic collapse of the Red Sox in September.

Year in review compilations are popular in the media, mostly because it gives us a good reason to repurpose and repackage some of the terrific content — stories, photos, etc. — the staff has generated over the year.

Our newspapers traditionally take a look at the important local stories that made headlines during the course of the year, whether it was an important override vote, the opening of a new school, a high school sports championship, the loss of an important community member or one of the national or international events mentioned above that had significant local impact.

From an industry standpoint, 2011 was a big year for our company. We began with a significant redesign of our newspapers in March that triggered a slew of new content, including a page dedicated to your news each week, more of a commitment to community partner journalism through question-and-answer profiles and event previews and an effort to expand our public service journalism role in the community.

Much of the year has been spent fine-tuning these various aspects of the newspaper, but with the year winding down and 2012 on the doorstep, our focus will soon be turning back to the digital side of the business. We have a lot in store for our websites in the New Year, including mobile applications for your Smartphone, a police and fire scanner for your town and surrounding towns, community blogs and more of a focus on local video and interacting with fans through our Facebook page. It's an aggressive goal and will make 2012 another interesting year.

But before we get there, what will you remember most about 2011? Send me an email and I may use your comments in an upcoming column in 2012.

Aug. 17th that called for the use of a K-9, Town Manager Michael Coughlin authorized Police Chief Mark DeLuca to obtain a police dog for the Cohasset force.

At the Aug. 16th Board of Selectmen meeting, Coughlin expressed his approval of Chief DeLuca's plan.

"Following an initial review, I am recommending that Chief DeLuca proceed with the K-9 unit," Coughlin said at the meeting. "He has presented a program that could provide a K-9 at no cost to the town."

Sept. 2: Cohasset police welcome dog to the force

It seems to have happened overnight. On Wednesday, August 17, an incident occurred in Cohasset that required the use of a K-9, borrowed from another town; that Friday, the Town Manager told the Police Department to go ahead and get their own dog. The following Wednesday, the K-9 officer and the Plymouth County dog trainer traveled to Connecticut to look at police dogs. The next day, they had one, and he was on his way to Cohasset.

The pup's name is Erik, he lives with his proud new owner, Pat (K-9 Officer Reardon), and the Cohasset P.D. is thrilled to add a four-legged member to the force.

Sept. 2: Cohasset bands together in aftermath of Irene

Police cars, along with fire, DPW and water department trucks, swarmed the cul-de-sacs. A Channel 5 news team also arrived on the scene. Curious neighbors trickled out to see what the matter was, some expressing concern over the police presence. Was something wrong? After enduring three full days without electricity, had another crisis hit Cohasset?

But there was no need to worry — it was simply a courtesy call.

On both Tuesday and Wednesday evening, the town's public safety departments went door to door to check on residents who were still without power following Hurricane Irene, offering bottled water, buckets of water to flush the toilets, bags of ice and trash removal services.

Sept. 8: Lt. Governor tours regional call center

Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray visited Hingham on Friday, August 26 to attend the first public tour of The South Shore Emergency Regional Call Center (SSRECC). Murray called the center a model of collaboration between state and municipal government, as well as collaboration between towns.

Come October, Norwell, Hingham, Hull and Cohasset will all rely upon the new 911 call center for emergency assistance. This call center is the first in Mass. to receive Development Grant funding from the state 911 department.

Sept. 16: Meet and greet: Police dog introduced to selectmen

The most vocal attendant at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting was a Slovakian named Erik, the newest addition to the Cohasset police team.

Erik, Cohasset's new police K-9, was introduced to the Board by his handler, Officer Patrick Reardon, during Tuesday's meeting.

Sept. 16: Cohasset schools ranked no. 13

In Boston magazine's annual list of best public schools in the state, Cohasset was placed in the No. 13 spot. This is a move up from No. 17 last year, according to school committee members.

Sept. 23: ConCom petitioners come forward

For the petitioners, two months was a long time to wait.

On July 12, the Board of Selectmen shocked citizens of Cohasset by unseating three seasoned Conservation Commissioners who were up for reappointment (Sarah Charron, Debbie Cook and Dick Karoff), installing three new members in their stead. 120 residents signed a petition asking the board to rescind their decision, reinstate the Commissioners, and agree to an investigation regarding the matter and the board's total involvement with Cat Dam. The petition was mentioned during the public commentary in an August selectmen meeting. The item finally found its way to the selectmen's agenda on Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr apologized to the group of 40-plus petitioners in attendance, saying the reason for the delay was not him trying to avoid the matter but rather trying to find enough time to properly address it.

Oct. 7: Town accountant resigns

Team Cohasset is losing its financial quarterback. Town accountant and finance director John Stanbrook resigned from his post in Cohasset on October 5 after nine months on the job. He will return to his previous position as town accountant in Mansfield on Oct. 31; his last day in Cohasset is Oct. 28.

Oct. 25: Getting serious with National Grid over Irene response

Tropical Storm Irene is long gone, but town manager Mike Coughlin continues in his quest to take National Grid to task for their lengthy response time to turning the power back on in Cohasset. Many residents were without power for nearly a week. Coughlin plans to air his dismay, joining in the Dept. of Public Utilities' field hearings on National Grid's response during Irene.

Oct. 28: Yoga world champions showcase in Cohasset

Cohasset Middle school students were treated to 12-minute-long presentations from the two reigning world yoga champions, 26-year-old Joseph Encinia of Dallas, TX, and 32-year-old Yukari Miwa of Tokyo, Japan. The students showed their appreciation with claps and gasps as Encinia and Miwa each moved fluidly from pose to pose.

Yoga champion? Those familiar with the practice of yoga might give pause to this concept.

Yogis like Encinia and Miwa compete in yoga competitions around the globe. Encinia and Miwa competed against athletes from 34 different countries. The ultimate goal of the asana championships is to promote yoga as a sport and have it included in the Olympics. Competitive yoga demonstrations are similar to floor routines in gymnastics; but instead of tumbling, competitors present a three-minute exhibition of yoga poses, or asanas.

Nov. 10: Water billing discussion gets heated

After two weeks of being last on a long list of agenda items, a water billing discussion finally made its way to the floor during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

The relatively routine topic, which Jack Keniley called a matter of "simple accounting" and Peter DeCaprio insisted was "not rocket science," quickly spiraled into a heated debate between the Water Commission chairman and Town Manager. Accusations flew, and as the time neared midnight, few of the major issues seemed to be resolved. Once again, the discussion will find its way onto the next Selectmen agenda.

As voices were raised and fingers pointed, it became clear that getting to the crux of the issue would require wading into rather murky waters.

Nov. 18: Selectmen say 'yes' to DOR review

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday night to approve Town Manager Mike Coughlin's request for the Department of Revenue (DOR) to conduct a financial management review in Cohasset.

Nov. 28: Finance team makes DOR deadline

Two days before Thanksgiving, Town Manager Mike Coughlin brought turkeys into Town Hall. The birds were given to members of the finance department, including consultants Dan Sullivan and Eric Kinsherf, who have been working diligently for weeks to certify the town's balance sheet in order to meet a pressing deadline for the Department of Revenue. The deadline for November 22 was an especially difficult one for the finance "team," as Coughlin called them, in light of finance director and town accountant John Stanbrook's resignation last month during what the town manager called "an accounting crisis."

Dec. 8: Special Town Meeting: voters in 'yes' mood

Solar panels, a study for a new senior center, and unpaid water bills were hot topics at the Special Town Meeting (STM) on Monday, Dec. 5 at the High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Dec. 9: Solar power: Alt. Energy articles pass with flying colors

Cohasset may soon be the latest town in the Commonwealth to invest in solar energy. Thanks to the votes of its citizens, the town will be able to lease the roof of the Middle-High School and on the capped landfill located at 81-91 Cedar Street for the installation of solar arrays.

Dec. 10: Cohasset closer to new senior center

For members of the Cohasset Elder Affairs, Social Service League and Board of Selectmen, it's been a long time coming, but during Monday night's Special Town Meeting, another crucial step was made toward the town getting a brand new senior center.

Town Meeting voted almost unanimously to approve paying $15,000 for an independent feasibility study that will assess the needs of a potential senior center. The amount will be raised from the fiscal year 2012 tax levy and general town revenues, and appropriated to the Town Manager's FY 12 budget.

Dec. 10: Cohasset Triathlon sign-ups sell out in record time

The Cohasset Triathlon is still over six months away, but when registration opened on December 1, the event's organizer Bill Burnett reported that it experienced the fastest sell-out in its six-year history.

Not only did the June 24, 2012 event sell out — it did it fast. Burnett said registration was full within 50 minutes of going live, and would have gone faster if the website had not become bogged down. Some folks compared the sign-up process to trying to purchase tickets for a rock concert, he said.

Dec. 16: Town manager appoints finance director

Scituate's town accountant is joining "Team Cohasset."

Mary Gallagher, who has served in Scituate for 20 years, was officially appointed Cohasset's finance director/town accountant during the Tuesday, Dec. 13 Board of Selectmen meeting.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who made the appointment after allowing the selectmen to interview Gallagher, along with Advisory Chairman Peter Pescatore said that Gallagher was his top choice.

Dec. 20: Second in command: Police and fire departments have promotions

Cohasset now has two second-in-command chiefs in the police and fire department. Lieutenant William Quigley of the Cohasset Police was recently promoted to Deputy Chief by Chief of Police Mark DeLuca. Lieutenant/Paramedic John Dockray was promoted to Assistant Fire Chief by Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Dec. 23: Cohasset town employees, friends get together for Christmas

Nothing says Christmas in Cohasset quite like a town employee holiday party at the Irish pub.

On the evening of Monday, Dec. 19, Town Manager Mike Coughlin hosted an all town employee Christmas party at Mr. Dooley's, Cohasset's newest watering hole.

Live Irish music ushered folks into the warm, crowded tavern. All political issues and personal agendas were seemingly left at the door as staffers from various aspects of town government gathered together to toast the holiday season and the end of a hectic year. Tensions from late-night board meetings were set aside in favor of good old-fashioned yuletide cheer.

Dec. 30: Cohasset cupcake confiscated by TSA

It seems that a Wicked Good cupcake was too wicked for the TSA.

A cupcake from Cohasset's own Wicked Good Cupcakes was labeled a security threat and confiscated by a TSA agent at the Las Vegas International Airport last week. Apparently the frosting was too "gel-like" to clear security.

EMPLOYEE OF THE YEAR

Coughlin to honor finance department

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town Manager Mike Coughlin has been spending the holidays in Hawaii, but that didn't stop him from thinking about the employees back in Town Hall — and deciding to name his Employee of the Year.

On Tuesday, Dec. 27, he Cohasset Mariner received the following email from a vacationing Coughlin:

As you know, last week, new growth was certified by the DOR [Department of Revenue]. On Thursday, DOR certified the tax rate. This was huge accomplishment for the town. Given the financial issues, last year the tax rate was not certified until March.

It has been difficult, but for all of their hard work, I am naming the Financial Team "collectively" as employee of the year. During the course of the year, the town has four Finance Directors: Eric Kinsherf, John Stanbrook, Eric Kinsherf again, and then ended the year with the appointment of Mary Gallagher.

The Finance Team resolved two major deficits — the first in March and the second at the special town meeting in December. Bringing in Dan Sullivan of Sullivan and Rogers, the finance team is addressing many accounting issues that have existed for years. Dan is also spearheading the implementation of Soft Right.

Despite the changeover in personnel, the team has been able to met aggressive deadlines which DOR and many in town thought overly ambitious.

Central to this was the certification of new growth. Deputy Assessor Mary Quill deserves great credit for this effort. This new growth is projected to continue for the next several years. It is the foundation upon which we will continue to introduce level services as opposed to level funded budgets.

The true heroes of the Finance team are the office staff. Jane Henderson is showing great promise as she grows into Assistant Town Accountant. Sandy Parnell and Linda Litchfield are filling the two Assistant Treasurer/Collector positions as laid out in my reorganization plan. We are currently recruiting a new Trreasurer/Collector with applications due by the end of January.

With an audit of the Sewer Capital Account underway, Diane Hindley is also being integrated as a true member of the team.

All of this has not been easy, but progress is being made every day. The team concept has been the change. In the end, it is the overall result that matters. Even if one office performs brilliantly, it's a matter of teamwork that results in Department of Revenue approval. For this reason, the Finance Team will be honored on January 10 as "Employee of the Year."

Coughlin said that he will recognize the finance department as a whole during the next Board of Selectmen meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, January 10.

While members of the finance "team" were working to meet deadlines and implement the new Soft Right program, a few were available to express their surprise and gratitude upon receiving this honor.

Deputy Assessor Mary Quill said, "It was a lot of hard work, but we did it in a group effort. We made the best of what we are dealing with, and we worked together."

Diane Hindley, administrative assistant for the Sewer Commission, agreed that it was a team effort, although her commission operates on a different budget with the general fund. Hindley credited Coughlin with bringing various Town Hall employees together.

"He's created this cohesiveness within the group of us at Town Hall, which has really been lacking," Hindley said. "He's created a team-like atmosphere; we're all very supportive of each other, working together to solve problems, and that includes all of the amazing boards and officials. Mike is a great advocate for us, and has created an atmosphere that has made us want to work diligently, solve problems, and be proud of what we do."

WILLCUTT CORNER

2011: A remarkable year

MARITA CARPENTER

Looking back at 2011 it is remarkable just how far we've come in our quest to give Cohasset's seniors a dynamic and thriving senior center they can call their own.

Earlier in the year, with the economy continuing to sputter along and the Town of Cohasset facing difficult decisions to ensure that critical services and operating costs would be covered, the Town believed that it needed to put the Cohasset Senior Center project on hold. Knowing that nearly 25 percent of the population of Cohasset is 60 and over the Social Service League understood that the need for this project was now and offered to help the Town find a way to make the project a reality by leveraging its $1M commitment to the Cohasset Senior Center and taking on the responsibility for fundraising and building the facility.

By year's end the Town and Social Service League had completed a number of milestones that have set the course for 2012. In a Memorandum of Understanding recently signed by the Town and the Social Service League, which clearly states that the Social Service League will turn over the newly built facility and land back to the Town at no cost to taxpayers. The land located off Sohier Street that is needed to plan and build the facility has now been authorized to be transferred temporarily to the Social Service League at a future date for the purpose of constructing the new senior center. The Town will also be conducting a town wide survey in the first quarter of 2012 in conjunction with the Social Service League's ongoing campaign to educate and gain feedback from the community about the Cohasset Senior Center project.

The momentum and excitement for the Cohasset Senior Center is growing, but there is still a lot that needs to be done to ensure that this project becomes a reality for our seniors. We look forward to meeting with you in 2012 to determine how you can contribute, through time and money, to this important legacy project for those that have given so much to our community.

Happy 2012!

Willcutt Corner is named for Levi Willcutt whose daughter Mary Hooper dedicated a portion of her trust to be dedicated to senior issues and care.

Liv2Lax offseason program

Winter High School Lax Program Starting January Cohasset Club Lacrosse will be sponsoring an off-season lacrosse program for experienced high school level players interested in keeping a stick in their hands and playing during the off-season months.

As part of the Liv2Lax programs being held at the new Cohasset SportsPlex, we will be running a supervised indoor game/scrimmage each week on Mondays, directly after-school from 2:30 – 3:30 (depending on interest, we may expand to additional days).

This will be a non-contact program to avoid injuries with a primary objective of getting stick time each week and having some fun.

Interested players and/or team captains should send an email to info@cohassetclub-lax.com or call at 781/383-6074 to confirm space.

Play is scheduled to start the first week in January and run thru early March. Fees will be approximately $ 150 per player depending on the number of players/towns accepted.

Teams/players expected to participate: Marshfield, Cohasset, Scituate, and Hingham.

Great show

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The 2011 year in Cohasset was another impressive list of accomplishments and memories for both athletes and fans.

There were ups and downs, big victories and tough, but memorable losses.

We'll take a look at some of those moments here.

There are probably going to be things we missed, so if you read this and have a moment to share, send an email to wwassersug@wickedlocal.com and it might find its way into a future edition of the Cohasset Mariner.

One memory is pretty hard to forget.

Everyone in New England was watching the Bruins turn Vancouver into a war zone June 14 with their Game 7 win in the Stanley Cup Finals – well almost everyone.

For the Cohasset baseball team and its fans, there was a bit of work to take care of away from the television at Lynn's Fraser Field.

That would be their 6-1 dispatch of Georgetown in the Div. 4 State Championship game to claim a second straight State Title.

"We set a goal to win (another title) at the beginning of the season," Cohasset shortstop Anders Goetz said. "This is an unbelievable feeling. It's more unbelievable than I thought it would feel like. At the beginning of the season we set the goal and knew we'd accept nothing less. This feels ten times better than last year."

While the biggest cheers of the night went to the conquering heroes, there were cheers from both teams and fans when the local PA announcer let everyone know the B's scored.

Some, like myself made it home just in time to catch the final seconds and celebration, making it a truly memorable night.

The baseball team did it with a total team effort.

Jamie Faber picked up the win, going the distance in the final.

In the Div. 4 South Sectional Final, Jeff Cavanaro tossed a shutout against West Bridgewater, taking a no-hitter into the sixth inning.

Head coach Bo Ruggiero is in the middle of the huddle as the Skippers get ready for the start of the second half of the Div. 4 State Championship game at the Boston Garden. Cohasset battled valiantly, but lost 58-55 to Winthrop. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Head coach Pete Afanasiw had a nice comfort level with his mix of youngsters and veterans, and he had the enjoyment of coaching several of those players during the football season.

Of course, with Cohasset, athletes don't often stick to just one sport.

As a smaller school, most play two or three sports, and many excel at them.

Faber went on to be the quarterback of the football team when Cavanaro graduated.

Shane Haggerty is having a big start to the basketball season to name a couple.

The football team played well and capped their season with a Thanksgiving Day win over Hull on the road.

Speaking of basketball, the girls basketball team wasn't able to get back to the Garden, as eventual State Champ Hull pulled the upset, but the boys found their way.

The boys basketball team missed the playoffs in the 2009/2010 season, finishing 9-13 but had a brilliant season in their 2010/2011 year and easily qualified and got better and better as the season progressed.

That led them to the Div. 4 South Sectional final at UMass-Boston, where they rallied from a big deficit to escape with a 65-64 win over Cathedral.

Senior Robert Jones dropped four three-pointers in the fourth quarter of the Sectional Final, and fellow senior Sam Richardson scored 12 points in the third quarter to keep the Skippers close.

Cohasset also knocked off a powerful Mashpee squad and Blue Hills on the way to the Garden.

The team placed Jones and Richardson, along with Haggerty and Kyrel Jaundoo were named South Shore League All-Stars and coach Bo Ruggiero was the league's Coach of the Year and was named Mass. Basketball Coaches Association Div. 4 Coach of the Year.

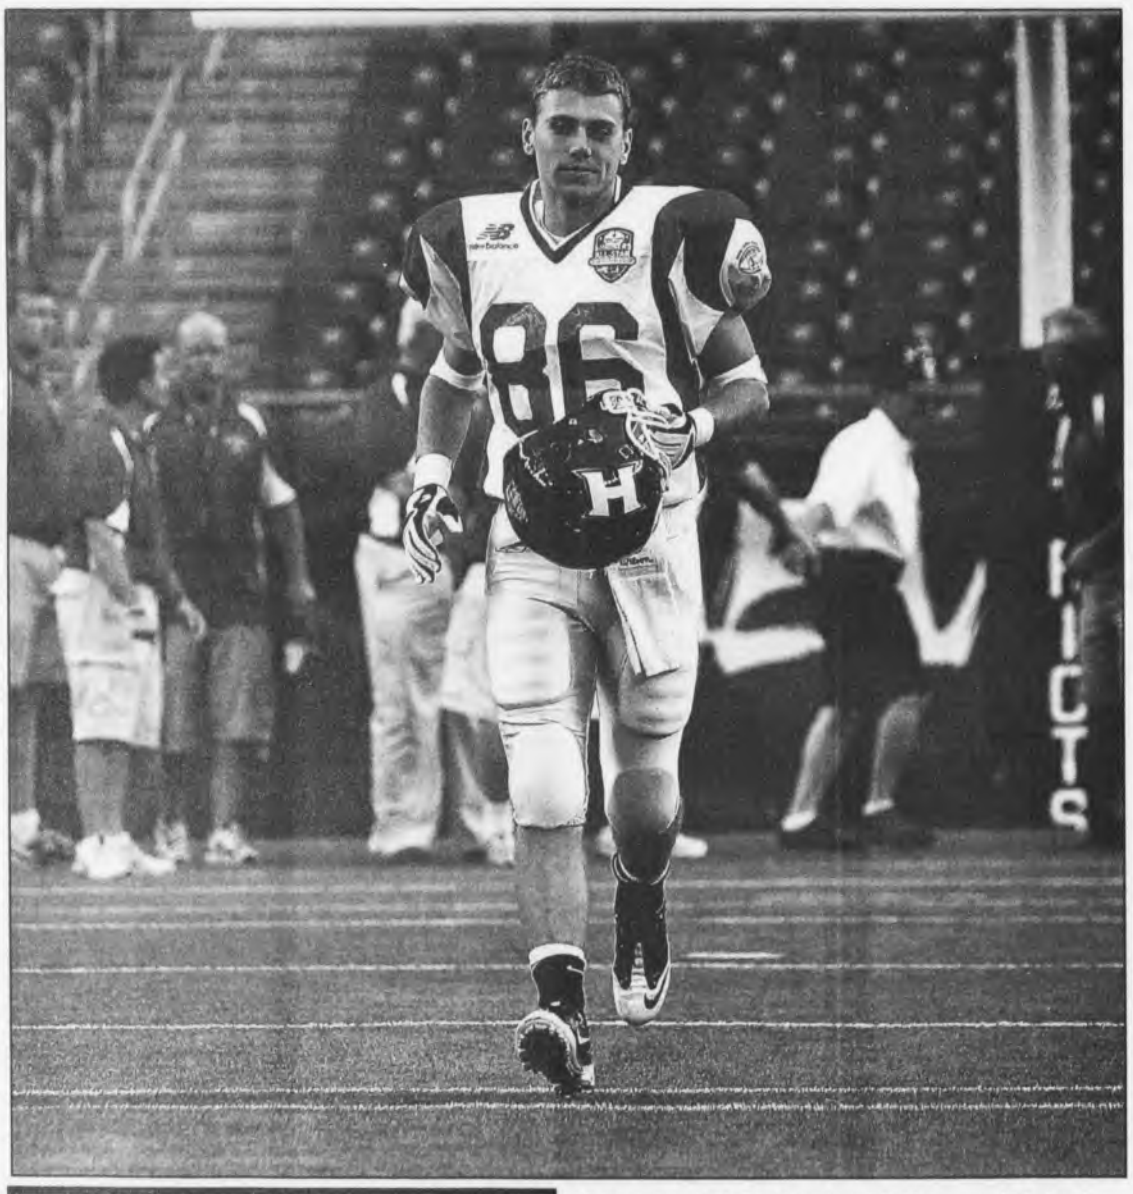
Look for this year's edition to make a run.

On the girls side, Cohasset had a nice run, finishing 19-4 with a fourth straight trip to the Div. 4 Sectional semifinals.

Carli Haggerty was brilliant all season, and had a big showing in the quarterfinal round with a 21 point first half in a lopsided win against Blue Hills. She also had 16 points and 10 rebounds in a playoff win over Harwich.

It wasn't a one-person show however.

The girls played a very team oriented style and got significant contribution from the entire roster.



Thomas Flibotte was a superstar for the lacrosse team, where his prolific scoring helped the team to the Div. 3 semifinal round of the MIAA Tournament.

He was also a superstar on the wrestling mat at 171 where he won the Marshfield Wrestling Tournament, the Div. 3 Sectionals, the Div. 3 State Championship and he qualified to wrestle in the New England Championships

Flibotte was named the wrestling team's Most Valuable Wrestler.

Alex Kinnealey and Gus Helbock also won sectionals.

In the water, Hope Kissick swam away with a state championship in the 100 breast stroke at Harvard University.

Kissick came into the meet with a No. 8 seed and bested her own time and the field on the way to the title with a 1:07.82 time.

The win was the first state swim title for a female swimmer in school history.

Freshman Clarke Indek finished 10th in the 100M backstroke and 13th in the 200M Individual Relay at the State Championships.

Kissick was also a member of the girls lacrosse team, which had a good season.

Kelsey Erler, Kissick and Whitney Jaffe lit up the scoreboard during the season, as Cohasset finished their season with a 12-4 record.

Many of the same players helped the field hockey team to the Div. 2 South Sectional Field Hockey finals. It was one of the best finishes in school history for Laura Giuliano's squad.

Cohasset finished up 15-2-3.

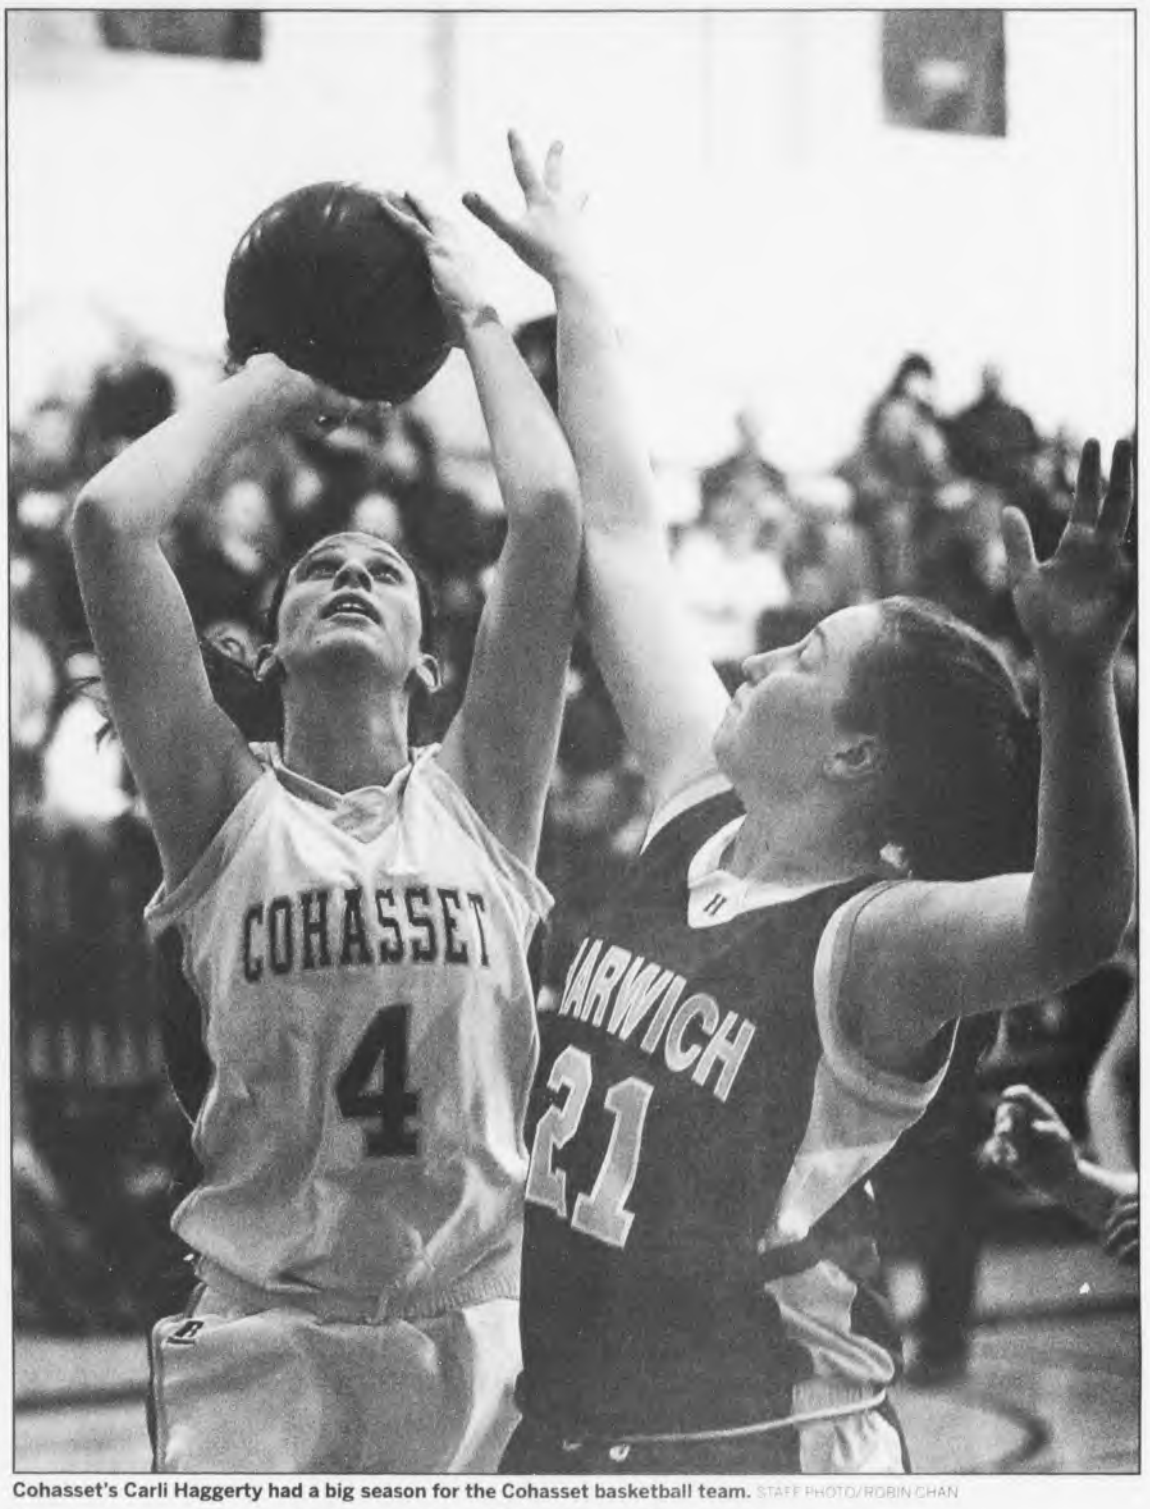
Seniors Kayle Orner, Caitlin DeAngelis, Sage Stebbins, Jaffe and Angela Cippola were some of the leaders of the team. Cippola's 52 points were a team and South Shore League best.

Freshman Caty Gilman was the team's second leading scorer and could be a star in the future.

"We had great leadership and great talent," Giuliano said. "Kids rose to the occasion and played big in big games. I'm very proud of them."

Another triumph for Cohasset sports through the year is the success on the fields transferring to the next level.

At least 16 former Cohasset athletes are competing in various sports at the college level.



Two who have been mentioned quite a bit have been Meredith Kelly and Daniel Martin.

Others we've recently heard from have been Samantha Crough and Sammi and Tori Lehr.

There are probably many more things left off here, a fact that just shows what a terrific year 2011 was in Cohasset sports.

GIMME SHELTER

Hobbes loves to have his picture taken.
COURTESY PHOTO

Hobbes is just about 'purrfect'

Hobbes is an extremely friendly cat who doesn't appear to have any issues.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find shelter for Hobbes, a gray male Tiger cat. He's fairly new to the shelter and the staff feels badly for whoever had to surrender Hobbes. He is an extremely friendly cat who doesn't appear to have any issues. He likes to be photographed and would make an excellent model. Please call quickly if you're interested in adopting this "purrfect" Tiger cat.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of HSAR's very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats, that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, and Tiger cats — so many to choose from!

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

The Kittendales calendar is available either on line or at the shelter.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 9, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A hectic period begins to wind down. Take time to draw some deep breaths and relax before getting into your next project. A long-absent family member makes contact.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to move forward with a new challenge that suddenly dropped in your lap. But you'd be wise to take this one step at a time to allow new developments to come through.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're almost ready to make a commitment. A lingering doubt or two, however, should be resolved before you move ahead. An associate could provide important answers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still the watchword as you move closer toward a decision about a new situation. If you act too fast, you might miss some vital warning signs. Go slowly and stay alert.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your new goal looks promising, and your golden touch does much to enhance its prospects for success. In your private life, Cupid does his best to make your new relationship special.

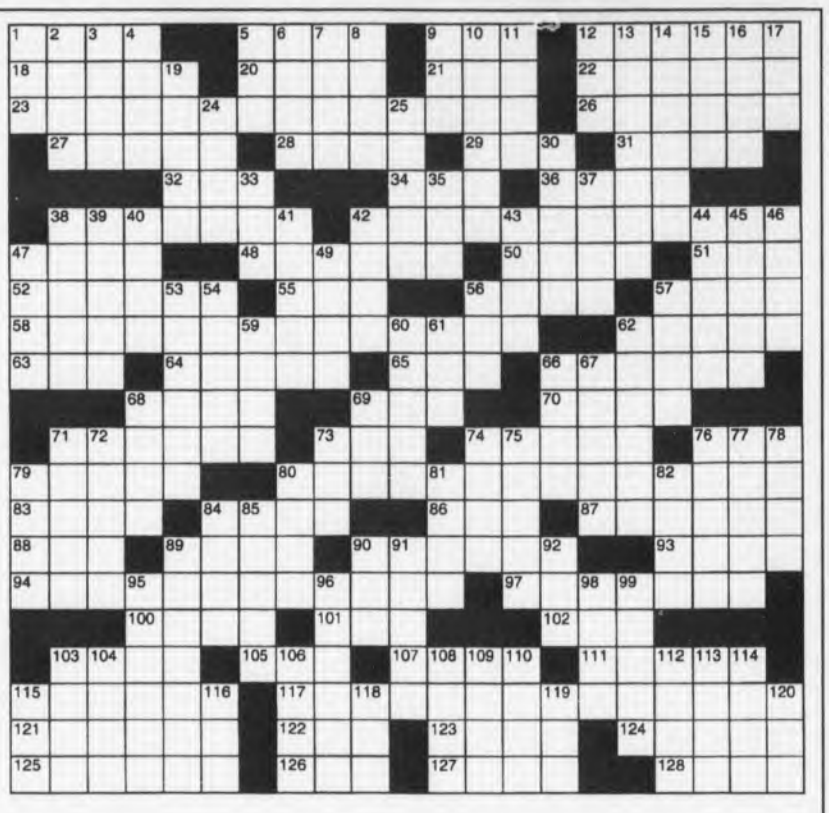
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That impatient side of yours is looking to goad you into moving before you're ready to take that big step. Stay calm and cool. Let things fall into place before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A legal matter you hoped could finally be settled could be a pesky problem for a while, until all the parties agree to stop disagreeing with each other. Be patient.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Partnerships — personal or professional — which began before the new year take on new importance. They also reveal some previously hidden risks. So be warned.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your associates are firmly on your side, and that persistent problem that has caused you to delay some activities should soon be resolved to your satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Favorable changes continue to dominate, and you should be responding positively as they emerge. Someone wants to become more involved in what you're doing.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friend wants to share a secret that could answer some questions you've wondered about for a long time. Meanwhile, travel aspects continue to be strong.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stay on your new course despite so-called well-meaning efforts to discourage you. Rely on your deep sense of self-awareness to guide you to do what's right for you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the capacity to meet challenges that others might find overwhelming, and turn them into successful ventures.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
